10 RESPONDENT'S ANSWERING BRIEF

11 I. STATEMENT OF THE CASE

12 This is an appeal from a judgment of conviction upon a jury verdict finding appellant
13 Volpicelli guilty of eight counts of burglary (NRS 205.060), one count of conspiracy (NRS 199.480) and 14 one count of possession of counterfeit pricing labels (NRS 205.965).

15 The case was first presented to a grand jury. At the conclusion of the evidence, the prosecutor 16 also presented a certified prior conviction for burglary, with the admonishment that it had no bearing on 17 whether the suspect had committed the instant offenses. Joint Appendix, Volume 1 (1JA) at 145-46. The 18 grand jury returned a true bill. The indictment included the finding that Volpicelli had been previously
19 convicted of burglary. 1JA at 150-159. Thus by virtue of NRS 205.060(2), he was not eligible for a 20 suspended sentence.

21 Volpicelli sought to quash the indictment, asserting that the indictment must be set aside
22 because the grand jurors learned of the prior conviction.¹ The district court apparently found that the

24 _____
25 ¹The effort to quash the indictment was through a petition for writ of habeas corpus. The petition
26 is not included in the joint appendix for unknown reasons. An unsigned and unfiled copy is in the appendix at Volume 2 (2JA), pp. 381-82. The State does not dispute its authenticity but suggests that it should not have been included in the appendix.

1 evidence of the prior conviction should not have been presented, but that the evidence was nevertheless
2 sufficient to allow the prosecution to go forward. 1JA at 192-93.

3 The defense sought and obtained a competency evaluation. 1JA at 163. The court received
4 the reports of the sanity commission, reviewed the arguments of counsel and determined that Volpicelli,
5 even if mentally ill, was competent to stand trial. 1JA at 163-66.

6 Prior to trial, the State filed its notice of intent to seek sentencing as a habitual criminal. 1JA
7 at 190. The cause was then tried to a jury and Volpicelli was found guilty.

8 At sentencing, the district court received evidence of the requisite number of prior 9 convictions, evaluated the pertinent facts and determined to sentence Volpicelli as a habitual criminal for 10 two of the counts. 1JA at 205 - 2JA at 266. The court imposed sentence. This appeal followed.

11 II. STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

12 This case involves a series of crimes in which Volpicelli entered stores, noted information
13 on the price codes of merchandise, printed forged UPC codes, attached the codes to the merchandise and 14 purchased the items for substantially less than the price fixed by the retailer. As indicated in the opening
15 brief, the primary witness was one Brett Bowman who participated in the crimes. Other witnesses included 16 police officers who observed parts of the crimes, store employees who verified receipts, and officers who 17 recovered goods from Volpicelli's car and his storage unit.

18 III. ARGUMENT

19 A. THE DISTRICT COURT DID NOT ERR IN FAILING TO DISMISS 20 THE INDICTMENT.

21 Volpicelli contends that he could not be required to stand trial because the grand jury heard
22 of his prior burglary conviction. This argument has two flaws. First, the correct standard asks only if the 23 evidence without the disputed bit of evidence was sufficient to sustain the indictment. State v. Logan, 1
24 Nev. 509 (1865). See also, Collins v. State, 113 Nev. 1177, 1182, 946 P.2d 1055, 1059 (1997); Franklin
25 v. State, 89 Nev. 382, 513 P.2d 1252 (1973); Robertson v. State, 84 Nev. 559, 445 P.2d 352 (1968). There
26 is no dispute but that the evidence was sufficient and so this Court may disregard the argument.

1 Nevertheless, the remaining flaw warrants a brief discussion.

2 The dispute here concerns the evidence of the prior conviction. Nevada law has several
3 diverse provisions regarding pleading and proving prior convictions. For instance, in the habitual criminal 4 context, following an indictment, the legislature has ensured that the accused will receive notice but 5 provided that the notice may be given by a separate pleading filed by the prosecutor. NRS 207.010. In cases
6 of driving while under the influence, a statute requires the prior convictions to be pleaded in the charging 7 document. NRS 484.3792. In death penalty cases, SCR 250 requires a separate pleading giving notice of 8 aggravating circumstances. Nevertheless, the State is not required to show those circumstances at a grand 9 jury proceeding. Floyd v. State, 118 Nev. 156, 42 P.3d 249 (2002).

10 In certain charges involving controlled substances, a prior conviction that enhances the 11 penalties for an offense must be pleaded in the charging document. NRS 453.346.² In Lewis v. State, 109
12 Nev. 1013, 862 P.2d 1194 (1993), this Court may have set in motion the law of unintended consequences.
13 The Court noted that NRS 453.346 included a list of crimes in which the prior conviction must be pleaded 14 in the charging document. The Court then held that the exclusion of another similar crime from the list is 15 irrational. That holding was unusual because ordinarily an under-inclusive statute that does not impact on 16 fundamental constitutional rights or a suspect class does not violate the equal protection or due process
17 clauses of the Constitution. See generally, San Antonio School District v. Rodriguez, 411 U.S. 1, 93 S.Ct.
18 1278 (1973). That is, the Court ordinarily inquires to determine if the statute is rational, not if the exclusion
19 of other matters is irrational. A rule of constitutional law requiring all legislative classifications to be neither 20 under-inclusive nor over-inclusive in order to survive the “rational basis” test is not generally applied by 21 other courts.

22 In Lewis, the Court went on to another unusual ruling. The Court held that the proper 23 response to the under-inclusive statute was not to invalidate the requirement that some folks were entitled 24

25 ²There is no general constitutional requirement that prior convictions affecting sentencing must be 26 pleaded in the charging document. Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 118 S.Ct. 1219 (1998).

1 to notice in the pleadings. Instead, the Court determined to essentially re-write the statute to require the 2 State to give notice in the charging document in any case where a prior conviction enhances a subsequent
3 offense. Thus, by implication, the Court found that when the legislature mandated pleading a prior 4 conviction for some cases, then some source of constitutional law mandated pleading prior convictions in 5 all cases. Hence, the unintended consequences. In the effort to protect the accused by requiring that prior 6 convictions be pleaded, this Court necessarily held that the prior convictions must also be shown to the grand 7 jury. Now we have a defendant who complains that he has been prejudiced by this Court's efforts to ensure 8 that defendants get adequate notice.

9 One of three propositions seems to be true. Either it is not error to show a grand jury prior 10 convictions affecting sentencing because such prior convictions must be pleaded, or; the cases indicating 11 that prior convictions must be pleaded should be abrogated. A third possibility is that prior convictions must 12 be pleaded in some cases, but only where the prior convictions are a true element of the offense, not just a 13 fact that affects the sentencing court's options among otherwise available sentences. See Roberts v. State, 14 120 Nev. ___, 89 P.3d 998 (2004). Of course there may be other alternatives, but none seem apparent.

15 It is not necessary for this Court to resolve the debate concerning scope and the continuing 16 vitality of Lewis v. State. This Court could simply note that the other evidence was sufficient to allow the 17 indictment. Nevertheless, because the argument now presented seems to be a product of a decision of this 18 Court, the State invites this Court to inquire and to determine if some provision of state or federal law
19 required the indictment to include the allegation of the prior burglary conviction. If it was properly pleaded,
20 then there was no error in presenting the evidence to the grand jury and the district court should not have 21 acted at all. If the prior conviction was not properly included in the indictment, then there was no error 22 because the remaining evidence was sufficient to sustain the indictment.

23 B. THE DISTRICT COURT DID NOT ERR IN FAILING TO FIND
24 THE DEFENDANT WAS INCOMPETENT.

25 Volpicelli next argues that "Appellant may not have been competent during the crimes." This 26 one is odd. Ordinarily, the question of one's competency refers to one's ability to stand trial, not to one's

1 mental state during the commission of a crime. Because the opening brief refers to evidence presented at 2 the competency hearing, and because appellant did not plead insanity or otherwise create issue regarding his
3 mental state during the commission of the crimes, the State assumes that Volpicelli is referring to 4 competency to stand trial.

5 The opening brief is phrased as though this Court conducts a de novo review of competency.
6 That is not the correct standard. A finding of competence should be affirmed if it is supported by substantial
7 evidence. Tanksley v. State, 113 Nev. 844, 847, 944 P.2d 240, 242 (1997). Here, the record includes the 8 reports of the sanity commission opining that Volpicelli had an understanding of the charges and was able 9 to assist in his defense. 2JA at 373-79. That finding should therefore be affirmed.

10 C. THE DISTRICT COURT DID NOT ABUSE ITS DISCRETION IN 11 SENTENCING APPELLANT AS A HABITUAL CRIMINAL.

12 Volpicelli next makes two contentions regarding his sentencing as a habitual criminal. First,
13 he claims error because the district court did not utter the phrase “just and proper” when finding that he was 14 a habitual criminal. Instead, the district court noted that appellant was a “poster child for habitual 15 criminality.” 2JA at 262.

16 The Ninth Circuit once held that Nevada law requires uttering of talismanic phrases when 17 declaring one to be a habitual criminal. Walker v. Deeds, 50 F.3d 670 (9th Cir. 1995). That learned court
18 incorrectly interpreted Nevada law. Hughes v. State, 116 Nev. 327, 996 P.2d 890 (2000). Here, the record
19 reveals that the district court carefully evaluated all the appropriate circumstances and determined that 20 society would be best served by putting this full-time thief behind bars for a period commensurate with his 21 crimes and his criminal history.

22 Volpicelli also contends that the consecutive sentences amount to an abuse of discretion.
23 This Court has long held that it will not interfere with a sentencing decision unless the record affirmatively
24 reveals some legal error or that the sentence was based solely on impalpable or suspect evidence. Allred v.
25 State, 120 Nev. ___, 92 P.3d 1246, 1253-54 (2004). Volpicelli has not identified any error or any 26 questionable evidence. Therefore, this claim should also be rejected.

1 D. THE VERDICTS ARE SUPPORTED BY SUBSTANTIAL EVI-
2 DENCE.

3 Volpicelli next contends that some of the guilty verdicts may not be supported by substantial
4 evidence beyond the testimony of an accomplice. He fails to mention which ones are not so supported.

5 Assuming the witness to be an accomplice, the State contends that there was ample
6 corroboration. Whether one is an accomplice is ordinarily for the jury to decide. Rowland v. State, 118
7 Nev. ___, 39 P.3d 114, 120 (2002). If the witness is deemed an accomplice, the jury may still convict if 8 there is even slight evidence connecting the defendant to the crime. Evans v. State, 113 Nev. 885, 891-92,
9 944 P.2d 253, 257 (1997). See also Gallego v. State, 101 Nev. 782, 787, 711 P.2d 856, 860 (1985). Here,
10 the corroborative testimony described in the opening brief included eye-witnesses to the planning and 11 execution of the crimes, as well as physical evidence possessed by Volpicelli, including the booty and the 12 instruments of the crimes. That is sufficient to relieve the Court of the notion that witness Bowman was 13 merely trying to dilute his own culpability by dragging an innocent person into the case.

14 IV. CONCLUSION

15 Volpicelli is a professional thief who got caught. He was fairly tried and sentenced and now
16 this Court should affirm his court-ordered retirement.
