IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEVADA

* * *

ZANE FLOYD,

Appellant,

vs.

THE STATE OF NEVADA,

Respondent.

Case No. 44868

STATEMENT OF ISSUES

1. WHETHER IT WAS AN ABUSE OF DISCRETION TO DENY FLOYD AN EVIDENTIARY HEARING ON HIS PETITION FOR POST CONVICTION HABEAS CORPUS
2. WHETHER FLOYD RECEIVED INEFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL

1 2003. Remittitur issued on March 10, 2003. (1 APP 71)

2 On June 19, 2003 FLOYD filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus 3 (Post Conviction) (1 APP 72-78) and thereafter on October 6, 2004 4 appointed counsel filed a Supplemental Petition and Points and 5 Authorities in Support of the Petition. (1 APP 79-117) The State 6 responded in Opposition on December 7, 2004 (2 APP 118-271) and the 7 matter came on for argument on January 18, 2005 at which time the 8 District Court denied the petition without an evidentiary hearing.
9 (2 APP 272-275) Written Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and 10 Order were entered on February 2, 2005 (2 APP 276-286) and served on 11 attorney for FLOYD on February 25, 2005. (2 APP 287)

12 FLOYD timely filed a Notice of Appeal on March 9, 2005. (2 APP 13 288-289)

1 mitigation. A family friend and a coworker both testified 2 that they knew him to be a good person and that the person
3 who committed the crimes in this case was not the Zane 4 Floyd they knew. The coworker and Floyd's stepfather 5 testified respectively that when they met Zane in jail 6 immediately after the crimes he was 'like a zombie' and 7 'wasn't there.' His stepfather also told of Floyd's difficulties and behavioral problems in school and of how well he later did in the marine Corps. A former Marine who served with Floyd as an instructor in combat training school testified that Floyd was the best instructor, that 'in the field, he would be a perfect marine,' but that 'on his own' he did not do well.

8 Floyd's close friend testified that he and Floyd began 9 using marijuana and methamphetamine when they were fifteen 10 or sixteen. The friend testified that Floyd's mother was 11 often intoxicated and that on Floyd's sixteenth birthday 12 his stepfather played drinking games with Floyd and his friends. After Floyd returned from the Marines, his friend reintroduced him to methamphetamine, which they sometimes used without sleeping for several days.

13 Floyd's mother testified about her own drug and alcohol 14 abuse and the loss of her first child, which caused her to 15 drink even more. When she became pregnant with Floyd, her 16 husband was displeased, they separated, and he filed for divorce just before Floyd's birth. She described Floyd's learning and behavioral problems as a child. She also spoke about how he played baseball and loved animals.

17 A clinical social worker and psychoanalyst conducted a 18 psychosocial evaluation of Floyd and testified to the 19 following. Floyd's mother had used various illegal 20 controlled substances and abused alcohol. Floyd's 21 stepfather also abused alcohol and was sometimes violent 22 towards Floyd's mother. Floyd had difficulties in school 23 and began drinking when he was fifteen and using 24 methamphetamine when he was sixteen. He enlisted in the 25 Marine Corps at age seventeen. After four years he was 26 honorably discharged on condition that he not reenlist because of his alcohol problems. When he was twenty-two, Floyd attempted to contact his biological father, who refused any contact. Returning home from the military, Floyd lived with his parents. He had no driver's license because of a DUI. He worked for a short time at Costco, but was terminated. he then obtained employment as a security guard, but lost that job in May 1999. That same month his cousin was killed, which affected him and other family members deeply.

27 Psychologist Dr. Dougherty testified and gave his 28 opinion that Floyd

suffers from the mental disease of mixed

1 personality disorder with borderline, paranoid, 2 and depressive features. In addition, I 3 confirmed the prior diagnosis of attention 4 deficit hyperactivity disorder....It's my 5 opinion...that Mr. Floyd's reasoning was impaired 6 as to rational thought at times, and at times he 7 did not act knowingly and purposely at the time 8 of the alleged incident. His symptoms were 9 exacerbated by a long history of the ingestion of 10 drugs and alcohol.

11 12 Floyd spoke in allocution and took responsibility for 13 what he had done and said he could not tell why he did it.
14 he said he was sorry and would regret his actions for the 15 rest of his life." (1 APP 65-57)

1 ARGUMENT

2 I.

3 IT WAS AN ABUSE OF DISCRETION TO 4 DENY FLOYD AN EVIDENTIARY HEARING ON 5 HIS PETITION FOR POST CONVICTION HABEAS CORPUS

6 It has long been the holding of this Court that, if a petition 7 for post-conviction relief contains allegations of facts outside the 8 record, which, if true, would entitle the petitioner to relief, an 9 evidentiary hearing is required. Bolden v. State, 99 Nev. 181, 659 10 P.2d 886 (1983); Grondin v. State, 97 Nev. 454, 634 P.2d 456 (1981); 11 Doggett v. State, 91 Nev. 768, 542 P.2d 1066 (1975).

12 Oft times in denying requests for post conviction evidentiary 13 hearings the trial court merely bases its decision on the perceived 14 strength of the State's case at trial without considering the 15 allegations of the Petition. Allegations concerning failure to oppose 16 a State's motion have been found sufficient to mandate an evidentiary 17 hearing. For instance in Drake v. State, 108 Nev. 523, 836 P.2d 52 18 (1992) the Court remanded the case for an evidentiary over the State's 19 objection where counsel had not adequately opposed a Motion in Limine 20 filed by State. The purpose of such a hearing was to determine if 21 counsel had sufficient cause for the noted failure. Drake, 108 Nev.
22 at 527-28.

23 The District Court abused it's discretion and failed to follow 24 the established guidelines of this Court in denying FLOYD'S request 25 for an evidentiary hearing. The Supplemental Petition filed by FLOYD 26 raised a number of issues concerning the failures of trial counsel and 27 appellate counsel to object and/or raise issues in the direct appeal.
28 Only by holding a evidentiary hearing wherein counsel can explain the reasons, if any, for their failures can this Court examine the claims.

1 Without such a hearing it would be pure speculation or conjecture to 2 find that there was a strategic basis for the failures. It is 3 respectfully urged that this Court remand the case with direction that 4 the case be reassigned to a different District Court and that an 5 evidentiary hearing be conducted on the allegations of FLOYD'S 6 Petition.

1 II.

2 FLOYD RECEIVED INEFFECTIVE
3 ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL

4 The Sixth Amendment guarantees that a person accused of a crime
5 receive effective assistance of counsel for his defense. The right 6 extends from the time the accused is charged up to and through his 7 direct appeal and includes effective assistance for any arguable legal 8 points. Anders v. California, 386 U.S. 738, 87 S.Ct. 1396, 18 L.Ed.2d 9 493 (1967). The United State Supreme Court has consistently 10 recognized that the right to counsel is necessary to protect the 11 fundamental right to a fair trial, guaranteed under the Fourteenth 12 Amendment's Due Process Clause. Powell v. Alabama, 287 U.S. 45, 53
13 S.Ct.55, 77 L.Ed. 158 (1932); Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 83 14 S.Ct. 792, 9 L.Ed.2d 799 (1963). Mere presence of counsel does not 15 fulfill the constitutional requirement. The right to counsel is the 16 right to effective counsel, that is, "an attorney who plays the role 17 necessary to ensure that the trial is fair." Strickland v.
18 Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 657 (1984); 19 McMann v. Richardson, 439 U.S. 759, 771, 90 S.Ct. 1441, 25 L.Ed.2d.
20 763 (1970).

21 Pre-trial investigation is a critical area in any criminal case 22 and failure to accomplish same has been held to constitute ineffective 23 assistance of counsel. The Nevada Supreme Court in Jackson v. Warden, 24 91 Nev. 430, 537 P.2d 473 (1975) stated:

25 "It is still recognized that a primary requirement is that 26 counsel...conduct careful factual and legal investigations 27 and inquiries with a view toward developing matters of 28 defense in order that he make informed decisions on his client's behalf both at the pleading stage...and at trial."

Jackson 91 Nev. at 433, 537 P.2d at 474. The Federal Courts are in

1 accord that pre-trial investigation and preparation for trial are a 2 key to effective representation of counsel. U.S. v. Tucker, 716 F.2d 3 576 (1983). A lawyer who fails to adequately investigate, and to 4 introduce into evidence, records that demonstrate his client's factual 5 innocence, or that raise sufficient doubt as to that question to 6 undermine confidence in the verdict, renders deficient performance.
7 Hart v. Gomez, 174 F.3d 1067, 1070 (9th Cir. 1999). See also, Evans 8 v. Lewis, 855 F.2d 631 (9th Cir. 1988) holding that a failure to 9 investigate possible evidence could not be deemed a trial tactic where 10 the lawyer did not view relevant documents that were available.

11 In U.S. v. Baynes, 687 F.2d 659 (1982) the Court, in language 12 applicable to this case, stated:

13 "Defense counsel, whether appointed or retained is 14 obligated to inquire thoroughly into all potential 15 exculpatory defenses and evidence, mere possibility that 16 investigation might have produced nothing of consequences 17 for the defense could not serve as justification for trial 18 defense counsel's failure to perform such investigations in 19 the first place. Fact that defense counsel may have 20 performed impressively at trial would not have excused 21 failure to investigate defense that might have led to 22 complete exoneration of the Defendant."

23 In Warner v. State, 102 Nev. 635, 729 P.2d 1359 (1986) the Nevada 24 Supreme Court found that trial counsel was ineffective where counsel 25 failed to conduct adequate pre-trial investigation, failed to properly 26 utilize the Public Defender's full time investigator, neglected to 27 consult with other attorneys although urged to do so, and failed to 28 prepare for the testimony of defense witnesses. See also, Sanborn v.
State, 107 Nev. 399, 812 P.2d 1279 (1991).

29 To establish ineffective assistance of trial counsel, a defendant 30 must satisfy the two prongs set forth in Strickland v. Washington, 466 31 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052 (1984). Under Strickland, a defendant must

1 first show that his counsel's performance was deficient. To be 2 deficient, counsel's performance must be "outside the wide range of 3 professionally competent assistance" Strickland, 466 U.S. at 690.
4 Upon establishing deficient performance, a defendant must then show 5 that this deficient performance prejudiced his defense. The defendant 6 need not show that the deficient performance more likely than not 7 altered the outcome of the case, but must demonstrate only a 8 "reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, 9 the result of the proceeding would have been different. A reasonable 10 probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the 11 outcome." Id., at 694.

12 In his Supplemental Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus FLOYD 13 alleged that his conviction and death sentence are invalid under the 14 State and Federal constitutional guarantee of effective assistance of 15 counsel, due process of law, equal protection of the laws, cross-16 examination and confrontation and a reliable sentence due to the 17 failure of trial and appellate counsel to provide reasonably effective 18 assistance of counsel. United States Constitution Amendments 5, 6, 19 8, and 14; Nevada Constitution Article I, Sections 3, 6 and 8; Article 20 IV, Section 21. (1 APP 79-117)

21 The Petition filed by FLOYD contained numerous specific 22 allegations of deficient performance by trial and appellate counsel, 23 but the District Court refused to grant FLOYD an evidentiary hearing.
24 (2 APP 272-275) Not only should the District Court have granted an 25 evidentiary hearing, FLOYD was entitled to relief. The following 26 grounds mandated that his conviction and sentence be set aside:

27 A. Trial counsel failed to make contemporaneous objections on 28 valid issues during trial and appellate counsel failed to raise these

1 issues on direct appeal, both failures being in violation of FLOYD'S'
2 rights under the Sixth Amendment to effective counsel and under the 3 Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to due process and a fundamentally 4 fair trial.

5 FLOYD submits that trial counsel was per se ineffective in not 6 preserving the following appellate issues and that therefore only the 7 prejudice prong of the Strickland test remained to be considered. The 8 failure of trial counsel to make contemporaneous objection prevented 9 FLOYD from receiving meaningful review on direct appeal from his 10 conviction and sentence.

11 (1) Improper argument during the Opening Statement at the 12 Penalty Hearing.

13 During the Opening Statement at the penalty hearing the 14 prosecutor made the following improper arguments to the jury, telling 15 the jury that mitigating circumstances are nothing more than 16 "excuses":

17 "You have mitigating circumstances. Those are not 18 really statutory in nature, although there are a few, but 19 they can be anything -- they can be the age or youth of the 20 offender, the lack of criminal history, psychosis, 21 drinking, drug abuse, poor upbringing, good upbringing, 22 whatever the defense wishes to bring out in the form of, 23 they would say, explanation -- I would categorize as 24 excuses -- for the conduct that was committed on June the 25 3rd." (7 APP 2013)

26 . . .

27 "MR. KOOT: I was discussing the statutory aggravating 28 circumstances, which you will weigh against whatever 29 mitigating excuses that he offers you during the case today
30 and tomorrow." (emphasis added) (7 APP 2014)

31 . . .

32 The prosecutor during his opening statement also expressed his 33 personal opinion and that of District Attorney Bell that the death

1 penalty was the appropriate penalty in the case, stating:

2 "By tomorrow -- and I believe it will be tomorrow -- we 3 will end this -- the attorneys will end this portion of the 4 case, they'll be submitted to you, and I trust that you 5 will agree with Mr. Bell and myself that for his crimes he 6 deserves what is in this case a just penalty of death." (7 7 APP 2018) (Emphasis added)

8 The failure to object to the above listed statements during the 9 State's Opening and the failure to raise same on direct appeal denied 10 FLOYD of Due Process and a fundamentally fair trial. Donnelly v.
11 DeChristoforo, 416 U.S. 637 (1974).

12 The prosecutor, without objection, also argued victim impact 13 information during his Opening Statement at the trial phase.
14 Specifically he stated:

15 "...the next person he confronted was a fellow by the name 16 of Chuck Leos. Chuck Leos was 41, just celebrated his 17 first anniversary to his wife, Leanne. He was the frozen 18 food man. He shot him on the right side, in the neck and 19 the fact; two shots from that shotgun." (3 APP 1357)
20 (emphasis added)

21 and further the prosecutor told the jury:

22 "He went into the back room area and found the only 23 person that wasn't hiding that didn't realize what was 24 going on. Her name was Lucy Tarantino. She was in her 25 early Sixties. She was a wife, mother of three, 26 grandmother. She was the salad lady. It was her job to 27 get the salad stuff ready. He told the police about that 28 confrontation." (3 APP 1359)

It is well established that victim impact testimony is highly prejudicial and not relevant during the trial portion of a criminal proceedings. Nonetheless trial counsel completely failed to object and prevent the prosecutor from referring to victim impact during his opening statement. Making such statements during opening statement is highly prejudicial and taints receipt of the other evidence in a case. Such information may be admissible at the penalty hearing, but not before. Payne v. Tennessee, 501 U.S. 808, 111 S.Ct. 2597, 115

1 L.Ed.2d 720 (1991); Homick v. State, 108 Nev. 127, 136, 825 P.2d 600 2 (1992).

3 In the essence the prosecutor was able to poison the jury against 4 FLOYD from the Opening Statement thereby prejudicing the jury before 5 any evidence was presented. Likewise introducing victim impact at 6 trial allowed the State in essence to present much of it's penalty 7 hearing case before the jury had even returned a verdict of guilt.

8 (2) The statutory scheme adopted by Nevada fails to properly 9 limit victim impact statements.

10 At the penalty hearing in the case at bar the State presented 11 testimony from a number of witnesses but was limited by the ruling of 12 the Court that the State could only present one victim witness for 13 each of the victims. FLOYD asserts that despite this ruling from the 14 trial Court, Nevada statutory law does not limit the presentation of 15 victim impact evidence and is therefore unconstitutionally vague and 16 as such results in the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the 17 death penalty.

18 The Nevada Supreme Court has held that due process requirements 19 apply to a penalty hearing. In Emmons v. State, 107 Nev. 53, 807 P.2d 20 718 (1991) the Court held that due process requires notice of evidence 21 to be presented at a penalty hearing and that one day's notice is not 22 adequate. In the context of a penalty hearing to determine whether 23 the defendant should be adjudged a habitual criminal the court has 24 found that the interests of justice should guide the exercise of 25 discretion by the trial court. Sessions v. State, 106 Nev. 186, 789 26 P.2d 1242 (1990). In Hicks v. Oklahoma, 447 U.S. 343, 346, 100 S.Ct.
27 2227, 2229, 65 L.Ed.2d 175 (1980), the United State Supreme Court held 28 that state laws guaranteeing a defendant procedural rights at 1 sentencing may create liberty interests protected against arbitrary 2 deprivation by the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

3 The procedures established by the Nevada statutory scheme and 4 interpreted by the Court have therefore created a liberty interest and 5 are protected by the Due Process clause.

6       The Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution requires 7 that the sentence of death not be imposed in an arbitrary and 8 capricious manner. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153 (1976). The 9 fundamental respect for humanity underlying the Eighth Amendment 10 requires consideration of the character and record of the individual 11 offender and the circumstances of the particular offense as a 12 constitutionally indispensable part of the process of inflicting the 13 penalty of death. Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280 (1976).
14 Evidence that is of a dubious or tenuous nature should not be 15 introduced at a penalty hearing, and character evidence whose 16 probative value is outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, of 17 confusion of the issues or misleading the jury should not be 18 introduced. Allen v. State, 99 Nev. 485, 665 P.2d 238 (1983).

19       The United States Supreme Court in Payne v. Tennessee, 501 U.S.
20 808, 111 S.Ct. 2597, 115 L.Ed.2d 720 (1991) held that the Eighth 21 Amendment erects no per se bar to the admission of certain victim 22 impact evidence during the sentencing phase of a capital case. The 23 Court did acknowledge that victim impact evidence can be so unduly 24 prejudicial as to render the sentencing proceeding fundamentally 25 unfair and violate the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.
26 Payne, 111 S.Ct at 2608, 115 L.Ed.2d at 735. In Homick v. State, 108 27 Nev. 127, 136-137, 825 P.2d 600, 606 (1992) this Court embraced the 28 holding in Payne, and found that it comported fully with the

1 intendment of the Nevada Constitution and declined to search for 2 loftier heights in the Nevada Constitution. In cases subsequent to 3 Homick, the Court has reaffirmed its position, finding that questions 4 of admissibility of testimony during the penalty phase of a capital 5 murder trial are largely left to the discretion of trial court. Smith 6 v. State, 110 Nev. 1094, 1106, 881 P.2d 649 (1994). The Court has not 7 however addressed the issue of presentation of cumulative victim 8 impact evidence or erected any rule setting forth any limitation on 9 the scope or quantity of the evidence.

10 Some State courts have voiced disapproval over the admission of 11 any victim impact evidence at a capital sentencing hearing finding 12 that such evidence is not relevant to prove any fact at issue or to 13 establish the existence of an aggravating circumstance. State v.
14 Guzek, 906 P.2d (Or. 1995). In considering a claim that victim impact 15 testimony violated due process and resulted in a sentence imposed 16 under the influence of passion, prejudice or other arbitrary factors, 17 the Kansas Supreme Court in State v. Gideon, 894 P.2d 850, 864 (Kan.
18 1995) issued the following warning while affirming the sentence:

19 "When victims' statements are presented to a jury, the 20 trial court should exercise control. Control can be 21 exercised, for example, by requiring the victims' 22 statements to be in question and answer form or submitted 23 in writing in advance. The victims' statements should be 24 directed toward information concerning the victim and the 25 impact the crime has on the victim and the victims' family.
26 Allowing the statement to range far afield may result in 27 reversible error."

28 Trial counsel filed to limit the presentation of victim impact evidence but in order to be effective under the Sixth Amendment, should have objected to the presentation of any victim impact testimony and not just to a limit in order to preserve the claim for appellate and federal review.

1       (3) The prosecutor committed misconduct during the penalty phase 2 of FLOYD'S trial by appealing to the passions and prejudice of the 3 jurors and by denigrating the proper consideration of mitigating 4 factors.

5       The direct appeal raised several asserted improper arguments by 6 the prosecutors at the penalty hearing. The Nevada Supreme Court on 7 direct appeal found that the failure of trial counsel to object to 8 some of the remarks precluded appellate review. Floyd v. State, 118
9 Nev. 156, 173, 42 P.3d 249 (2002). (1 APP 44-68) The one comment 10 that the Supreme Court addressed was not subject to objection until 11 after the jury began deliberation and beyond the ability of the Court 12 to correct due to the failure timeliness. The arguments challenged 13 on direct appeal but not addressed in the opinion were concerning the 14 conditions in prison, the proportionality of the sentence compared to 15 other cases, and concerning what the headlines should read in the 16 newspaper the following day.

17       The arguments of both prosecutors were replete with references 18 to sending a message to society and with requests to impose the death 19 penalty to convey the message. Not only has Nevada condemned such 20 argument, Courts of other states have specifically disapproved of 21 arguments of counsel that a message should be sent to the community 22 in order to protect society from crime. State v. Ramseur, 524 A.2d 23 188 (NJ 1987); State v. Rose, 548 A.2d 1058, 1092 (NJ 1988).

24       It must be remembered that the arguments of the prosecutor's 25 herein were penalty hearing arguments where a heightened standard of 26 review is mandated.

27       "At the sentencing phase, it is most important that the 28 jury not be influenced by passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor. Hance v. Zant, 696 F.2d 940, 951 (11th

1 Cir. 1983) 'With a man's life at stake, a prosecutor should 2 not play on the passion of the jury'. Id."

3 Flanagan v. State, 104 Nev. 105, 107, 754 P.2d 836 (1988).

4 The Court in Flanagan, supra, went on to express strong 5 disapproval of statements concerning society's view of the penalty 6 citing to Collier v. State, 101 Nev. 473, 705 P.2d 1126 (1985). In 7 language extremely relevant to the actions and arguments of the 8 prosecutor's in the case at bar, the Flanagan court remarked that:

9 "...a prosecutor could not blatantly attempt to inflame the 10 jurors by urging that if they wished to be deemed 'moral' 11 and 'caring' then they must approach their duties in anger 12 and give the community what it needs. We observe that the 13 prosecutor's remark in the instant case serves no other 14 purpose than to raise the specter of public ridicule and 15 arouse prejudice against Flanagan.

16 We are compelled to conclude that the cumulative effect 17 of the prosecutor's extensive misconduct was of such a 18 magnitude as to render Flanagan's sentencing hearing 19 fundamentally unfair. Given the uncontroverted evidence of 20 guilt, there is simply no justification for such outrageous 21 behavior."

22 Flanagan, 104 Nev. at 112.

23 Most disturbing of the arguments made by the prosecution were 24 those that minimized the existence and utilization of mitigating 25 circumstances in the weighing process. In Hollaway v. State, 116 Nev.
26 732, 6 P.3d 987 (2000) this Court reversed a death penalty based in 27 part on the argument of the prosecution against the existence of 28 mitigation. In Hollaway the Court stated:

29 "The United States Supreme Court has held that to ensure 30 that jurors have reliably determined death to be the 31 appropriate punishment for a defendant, 'the jury must be 32 able to consider and give effect to any mitigating evidence 33 relevant to a defendant's background and character or the 34 circumstances of the crime.' Penry v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S.
35 302, 328 (1989). In Penry, the absence of instructions 36 informing the jury that it could consider and give effect 37 to certain mitigating evidence caused the Court to conclude 38 that:

1 'the jury was not provided with a vehicle for 2 expressing its reasoned moral response to that 3 evidence in rendering its sentencing decision.
4 Our reasoning in [Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586
5 (1978) and Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104
6 (1982),] thus compels a remand for resentencing
7 so that we do not risk that the death penalty 8 will be imposed in spite of factors which may 9 call for a less severe penalty.'"

10 Hollaway, 116 Nev. at 744. The Court then went on to command that a 11 jury instruction be given in all capital cases directing the jury to 12 make an independent and objective analysis of all relevant evidence 13 and that arguments of counsel do not relieve the jurors of this 14 responsibility.

15 "Now, in addition to these three that are provided by 16 the law, again, I told you that it was open ended. Any 17 other mitigating circumstance. So the defense has made a 18 laundry list of red herrings to make it appear in this case 19 that there's a whole lot of them and, therefore, they 20 should have some weight. They've stacked wishes upon hopes 21 upon dreams that you'll count numbers, that you'll count 22 some things twice, and you'll say, 'Well, wait a minute.
23 There's a lot of mitigation here.'" (10 APP 2579)

24 . . . .

25 "Now, it really doesn't matter that Mr. Bell took this 26 entire box of paper clips and threw it on the table. You 27 could have every one of these. How on earth could all of 28 these reasons or excuses, whatever you want to call them, how could all of them put together possibly outweigh the fact that more than one person was killed in this case?
How could that possibly outweigh a second murder? It can't. None of these combined." (10 APP 2655)

29 . . . .

30 "Cooperation with the police as a mitigating 31 circumstance? Give me a break. How does that reduce his 32 moral culpability?

33 You can throw the whole list away." (10 APP 2658)

34 In the case at bar the arguments of the prosecutors directly 35 violated that which the Nevada Supreme Court has announced as the 36 proper use of mitigation evidence by the jury. If this issue had been

1 preserved by trial counsel it could have formed the basis for the 2 Court to have vacated the death penalty on direct appeal.

3 B. Trial counsel failed to object and appellate counsel failed 4 to raise on direct appeal a number of improper jury instructions. The 5 failure to object and raise issues on direct appeal constituted 6 ineffective assistance of counsel. The specific instruction that 7 should have been raised were the following:

8 (1) The "anti-sympathy" instruction.

9 Without any objection from trial counsel the Court gave 10 Instruction No. 37 at the penalty hearing, the second paragraph of 11 which provides:

12 "A verdict may never be influenced by sympathy, prejudice 13 or public opinion. Your decision should be the product of 14 sincere judgement and sound discretion in accordance with 15 these rules of law." (Emphasis added). (1 APP 99)

16 It was error to give an anti-sympathy instruction. Sentencers may not 17 be given unbridled discretion in determining the fate of those charged 18 with capital offenses. Death penalty statutes must be structured to 19 prevent the penalty being imposed in an arbitrary and unpredictable 20 fashion. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 21 859 (1976); Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2126, 33 L.Ed.2d 22 346 (1972). However, a capital defendant must be allowed to introduce 23 any relevant mitigating evidence regarding his character and record 24 and circumstance of the offense. Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S.
25 280, 96 S.Ct. 2978, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976); Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 26 U.S. 104, 102 S.Ct. 869, 71 L.Ed.2d 1 (1982).

27 The anti-sympathy instruction given violated FLOYD'S Eighth 28 Amendment rights because it undermined the jury's constitutionally mandated consideration of mitigating evidence. If an alleged error

1 in jury instructions in the sentencing phase of a capital case 2 requires a determination of how a reasonable juror could construe the 3 instruction in such ways to make its sentencing decision improper, the 4 reviewing court should reverse the sentencing decision. Mills v.
5 Maryland, 486 U.S. 367, 108 S.Ct. 1860, 100 L.Ed.2d 384 (1988).

6 The instant instruction is comparable to the instruction that was 7 struck down in Parks v. Brown, 860 F.2d 1545 (10th Cir. 1988), which 8 stated: "You must avoid any influence of sympathy, sentiment, passion, 9 prejudice or other arbitrary factor when imposing sentence." In 10 reaching this conclusion, the 10th Circuit found the instruction 11 precluded any consideration of sympathy and thus created an 12 impermissible risk that a reasonable juror might disregard mitigating 13 evidence.

14 The jury was instructed that its verdict may never be influenced 15 by sympathy. The jury instructions on mitigating factors did not cure 16 the constitutionally defective anti-sympathy instruction. At best, 17 the jury received conflicting instructions. In Francis v. Franklin, 18 471 U.S. 307, 105 S.Ct. 1965, 85 L.Ed.2d 344 (1985), the Court stated:

19 "Language that merely contradicts and does not explain a 20 constitutionally infirm instruction will not suffice to absolve the infirmity."

21 A capital defendant has a constitutional right to have the jury 22 give "individualized" consideration to the mitigating circumstances 23 of his character, record and the circumstances of the crime. Zant v.
24 Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S.Ct. 2733, 77 L.Ed.2d 235 (1983). The 25 jury instruction in the case at bar failed to inform the jury of the 26 proper consideration concerning the death penalty.

27 (2) Trial counsel failed to request an instruction during the 28 penalty phase that correctly defined the use of "character" evidence

1 for the jury.

2 NRS 200.030 provides the basic scheme for the determination of 3 whether an individual convicted of first degree murder can be 4 sentenced to death and provides in relevant portion:

5 "4. A person convicted of murder of the first degree is 6 guilty of a category A felony and shall be punished:

7 (a) By death, only if one or more aggravating 8 circumstances are found and any mitigating 9 circumstance or circumstances which are found do not 10 outweigh the aggravating circumstance or 11 circumstances; or

12 (b) By imprisonment in the state prison..."

13 In the case at bar, in addition to the alleged aggravating 14 circumstances there was a great deal of "character evidence" offered 15 by the State that was used to urge the jury to return a verdict of 16 death. The jury, however, was never instructed that the "character 17 evidence" or evidence of other bad acts that were not statutory 18 aggravating circumstances could not be used in the weighing process.

19 The instructions that were given to the jury spelled out the 20 process as follows:

21 "The jury must find the existence of each aggravating 22 circumstance, if any, unanimously and beyond a reasonable 23 doubt.

24 The jurors need not find mitigating circumstances 25 unanimously. In determining the appropriate sentence, each 26 juror must consider and weigh any mitigating circumstance 27 or circumstances which that juror finds.

28 The jury may impose a sentence of death only if:

(1) The jurors find unanimously and beyond a reasonable doubt that at least one aggravating circumstance exists;

(2) Each and every juror determines that the mitigating circumstance or circumstances, if any, which he or she has found do not outweigh the aggravating circumstance or circumstances; and

1 (3) The jurors unanimously determine that in their 2 discretion a sentence of death is appropriate." (1 APP 102)

3 The jury was not told that:

4 "Evidence of any uncharged crimes, bad acts or character 5 evidence cannot be used or considered in determining the 6 existence of the alleged aggravating circumstance or circumstances."

7 Thus the jury was never instructed that such evidence was not to 8 be part of the weighing process to determine death eligibility.

9 The Nevada Supreme Court decision in Byford v. State, 116 Nev.
10 215, 994 P.2d 700 (2000) found that the proper use of character 11 evidence is that the jury may not consider character evidence until 12 the jury has first determined that a defendant is death eligible, to 13 wit: by finding that at least one aggravator exists; and second, that 14 any aggravators are not outweighed by any mitigators.

15 C. Other objections and motions that trial counsel failed to 16 make at trial and that were not raised on direct appeal, were the 17 following:

18 (1) Trial counsel failed to object and move to strike 19 overlapping aggravating circumstances and appellate counsel failed to 20 raise the issue on direct appeal.

21 FLOYD asserts that overlapping and multiple use of the same facts 22 as separate aggravating circumstances resulted in the arbitrary and 23 capricious imposition of the death penalty. Additionally, trial 24 counsel failed to file any pretrial motion challenging the aggravating 25 circumstances, failed to object at trial, failed to offer any jury 26 instruction on the matter, and the issue was not raised on direct 27 appeal.

28 In essence the State was allowed to double count the same conduct

1 in accumulating three of the aggravating circumstances. The use of 2 the same set of operative facts to multiple aggravating circumstances 3 in a State that uses a weighing process, such as Nevada does, violates 4 principles of Double Jeopardy and deprived FLOYD of Due Process of 5 Law. United States Constitution, Amendments V, VII, XIV; Nevada
6 Constitution, Article I, Section 8.

7 The Double Jeopardy Clause of the Fifth Amendment guarantees that 8 no person shall "be subject for the same offense to be twice put in 9 jeopardy of life or limb." The traditional test of the "same offense" 10 for double jeopardy purposes is whether one offense requires proof of 11 an element which the other does not. See, Bockburger v. U.S., 284 12 U.S. 299, 304 (1932). This test does not apply, however, when one 13 offense is an incident of another; that is, when one of the offenses 14 is a lesser included of the other. U.S. v. Dixon, 509 U.S. 688, 113
15 S.Ct. 2849, 2857 (1993); Illinois v. Vitale, 447 U.S. 410, 420 100 16 S.Ct. 2260 (1980).

17 Courts of other jurisdictions have found the use of such 18 overlapping aggravating circumstances to be improper. In Randolph v.
19 State, 463 So.2d 186 (Fla. 1984) the court found that the aggravating 20 circumstances of murder while engaged in the crime of robbery and 21 murder for pecuniary gain to be overlapping and constituted only a 22 single aggravating circumstance. See also Provence v. State, 337
23 So.2d 783 (Fla. 1976) cert. denied 431 U.S. 969, 97 S.Ct. 2929, 53 24 L.Ed.2d 1065 (1977).

25 The California Supreme Court in People v. Harris, 679 P.2d 433 26 (Cal. 1984) found that evidence showed that the defendant traveled to 27 Long Beach for the purpose of robbing the victim and committed a 28 burglary and two murders to facilitate the robbery. In determining

1 that the use of both robbery and burglary as special circumstances at 2 the penalty hearing was improper the court stated:

3 "The use in the penalty phase of both of these special 4 circumstances allegation thus artificially inflates the 5 particular circumstances of the crime and strays from the 6 high court's mandate that the state 'tailor and apply its 7 law in a manner that avoids the arbitrary and capricious 8 infliction of the death penalty' (Godfrey v. Georgia, 9 (1980) 446 U.S. 420 at P.28, 100 S.Ct 1759 at p. 1764, 64 10 L.Ed.2d 398. The United States Supreme Court requires that 11 the capital - sentencing procedure must be one that 'guides 12 and focuses the jury's objective consideration of the 13 particularized circumstances of the individual offense and 14 the individual offender before it can impose a sentence of 15 death.' (Jurek v. Texas (1976) 428 U.S. 262 at pp. 273-74, 16 96 S.Ct. 2950 at pp 2956-2957), 49 L.Ed.2d 929). That 17 requirement is not met in a system where the jury considers 18 the same act or an indivisible course of conduct to be more 19 than one special circumstance."

20 Harris, 679 P.2d at 449.

21 Other States that prohibit a "stacking" or "overlapping" of 22 aggravating circumstances include Alabama (Cook v. State, 369 So.2d 23 1251, 1256 (Ala. 1978) disallowing use of robbery and pecuniary gain) 24 and North Carolina (State v. Goodman, 257 S.E.2d 569, 587 (N.C. 1979) 25 disallowing using both avoiding lawful arrest and disrupting of lawful 26 government function as aggravating circumstances).

27 It can be anticipated that the State will argue that any error 28 that occurred as a result of the inappropriate stacking of the 29 aggravating circumstances was harmless error in this case because of 30 the existence of other valid aggravating circumstances. The Nevada 31 statutory scheme has two components that would seem to foreclose the 32 existence of harmless error at a penalty hearing. First the jury is 33 required to proceed through a weighing process of aggravation versus 34 mitigation and second, the jury has the discretion, even in the 35 absence of mitigation to return with a life sentence irregardless of 36 the number of aggravating circumstances.

1 "When there is a 'reasonable possibility that the 2 erroneous submission of an aggravating circumstance tipped 3 the scales in favor of the jury finding that the 4 aggravating circumstances were 'sufficiently substantial'
5 to justify the imposition of the death penalty,' the test
6 for prejudicial error has been met. (citation omitted)
Because the jury arrived at a sentence of death based upon weighing . . . and it is impossible now to determine the amount of weight ascribed to each factor, we cannot hold the error of submitting both redundant aggravating circumstances to be harmless."

7 State v. Quisenberry, 354 S.E.2d 446 (N.C. 1987).

8 The stacking of aggravating circumstances based on the same 9 conduct results in the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the 10 death penalty, and allows the State to seek the death penalty based 11 on arbitrary legal technicalities and artful pleading. This violates 12 the commands of the United States Supreme Court in Gregg v. Georgia, 13 428 U.S. 153 (1976) and violates the Eighth Amendment to the United 14 States Constitution and the prohibition in the Nevada Constitution 15 against cruel and unusual punishment and that which guarantees due 16 process of law.

17 In the instant case the State only was allowed to present three 18 aggravating circumstances at the penalty hearing. Analysis of these 19 show that a "great risk of death to more than one person" is based on 20 the same set of facts as "in the immediate proceeding been convicted 21 of more than one offense of murder." This stacking unfairly adds 22 weight to the number of aggravators.

23 Trial counsel was deficient in failing to strike the duplicate 24 and overlapping aggravating circumstances and appellate counsel should 25 have raised the issue on direct appeal and urged plain error, even in 26 the absence of contemporaneous objection at trial.

27 (2) The malice instruction given to the jury contained an 28 unconstitutional presumption that relieved the State of it's burden

1 of proof and violated FLOYD'S presumption of innocence.

2 The jury was instructed as follows during the trial phase:

3 "Express malice is that deliberate intention 4 unlawfully to take away the life of a fellow creature, 5 which is manifested by external circumstances capable of 6 proof.

7 Malice may be implied when no considerable provocation
8 appears, or when all the circumstances of the killing show 9 an abandoned and malignant heart."

10 The instruction in no uncertain terms defines what express malice is 11 without issuing a directive as to when express malice may be found.
12 The distinction is obvious, express malice is merely defined whereas 13 the jury is directed that it may find implied malice "when no 14 considerable provocation appears".

15 The State of California having recognized the problem has altered 16 its instruction to read "Malice is express when...; and malice is 17 implied when...." California Jury Instructions, Criminal, Section 18 8.11.

19 The Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals in reviewing a Georgia case 20 that incorporated the similar statutory language as used herein found 21 that the statutory language is constitutionally infirm as it is a 22 directive instruction and shifts the burden of proof by giving the 23 prosecution a presumption of malice. Fulgham v. Ford, 850 F.2d 1529 24 (11th C.A. 1988). The objectionable language imposes an impermissible 25 mandatory presumption. See, Yates v. Aiken, 484 U.S. 211, 108 S.Ct.
26 534 (1988); Hill v. Maloney, 927 F.2d 644, 646, 651 (1st Cir. 1990).

27 Although this Court has upheld the validity of the instruction 28 as correctly informing the jury of the distinction between express and implied malice under NRS 200.020, Guy v. State, 108 Nev. 770, 839 P.2d 578 (1992), FLOYD still urges that the presumption language is 1 improper.

2       Second, the instruction violates due process because the facts 3 on which the presumption are based do not rationally support the 4 element presumed and are in themselves unconstitutionally vague. The 5 terms "abandoned or malignant heart" do not convey anything in modern 6 language. See Victor v. Nebraska, 511 U.S. 1, 11, 13-14 (1994) (term 7 "moral evidence" not "mainstay or the modern lexicon"); id. at 23 8 (Kennedy, J., concurring) ("what once might have made sense to jurors 9 has long since become archaic"). They are devoid of rational content 10 and are merely pejorative, and they allow the jurors to find malice 11 simply on the ground that they believe the defendant is a "bad man."
12 In People v. Phillips, 64 Cal.2d 574, 414 P.2d 353, 363-364 (1966), 13 the California Supreme Court analyzed the element of implied malice, 14 and concluded that an instruction would adequately define implied 15 malice if it made clear that "the killing proximately resulted from 16 an act, the natural consequences of which are dangerous to life, which 17 act was deliberately performed by a person who knows that his conduct 18 endangers the life of another and who acts with conscious disregard 19 for life." 414 P.2d at 363: Nevada law is basically consistent with 20 this definition. See Collman v. State, 116 Nev. 687, 7 P.3d. 426 21 (2000).

22       "Nevada statutes and this court have apparently never 23 employed the phrase "depraved heart," but that phrase and 24 "abandoned and malignant heart" both refer to the same 25 "essential concept ... one of extreme recklessness 26 regarding homicidal risk." Model Penal Code § 210.2 cmt.
1 at 15; see also Thedford v. Sheriff, 86 Nev. 741, 744, 476 P.2d 25, 27 (1970) (malice as applied to murder includes "general malignant recklessness of others' lives and safety or disregard of social duty").

27 The California Supreme Court disapproved the use of the language 28 referring to an "abandoned or malignant heart" as superfluous and

1 misleading:

2 "Such an instruction renders unnecessary and 3 undesirable an instruction in terms of 'abandoned and 4 malignant heart.' The instruction phrased in the latter 5 terms adds nothing to the jury's understanding of implied
6 malice; its obscure metaphor invites confusion and unguided 7 speculation.

8 The charge in the terms of the 'abandoned and 9 malignant heart' could lead the jury to equate the 10 malignant heart with an evil disposition or a despicable 11 character; the jury, then, in a close case, may convict 12 because it believes the defendant a 'bad man.' We should 13 not turn the focus of the jury's task from close analysis 14 of the facts to loose evaluation of defendant's character.
15 The presence of the metaphysical language in the statute 16 does not compel its incorporation in instructions if to do 17 so would create superfluity and possible confusion.

18 . . . .

19 The instruction in terms of 'abandoned and malignant 20 heart' contains a further vice. It may encourage the jury 21 to apply an objective rather than subjective standard in 22 determining whether the defendant acted with conscious 23 disregard of life, thereby entirely obliterating the line 24 which separates murder from involuntary manslaughter."

25 414 at 363-364 (footnotes omitted). Although the court did not find 26 the use of the language to be error (as it reversed the conviction on 27 other grounds), the passage of time since Phillips has certainly not 28 increased the likelihood that the term "abandoned or malignant heart" conveys anything rational to a juror. No reasonable juror could understand the challenged phrase as requiring that the defendant commit the homicidal act with conscious disregard of the likelihood that death would result.
