1 verdict, while prohibiting the defense from presenting evidence 2 that creates a lingering or residual doubt as to the accuracy of 3 the factual basis of the convictions. There is no constitutional 4 mandate that at a remanded sentencing hearing in a capital case 5 residual or lingering doubt can be considered as a mitigating 6 circumstance because lingering doubts over a defendant's guilt are 7 not an aspect of the defendant's character, record, or a 8 circumstance of the offense. Evans v. State, 112 Nev. 1172, 926
9 P.2d 265; Homick v. State, 108 Nev. 127, 141, 825 P.2d 600, 609 10 (1992).

11 The Court in Smith v. Balkcom, 660 F.2d 573, 581 (5th Cir.
12 1981) stated the need for residual doubt to be a consideration:

13 "The fact that jurors have determined guilt beyond a 14 reasonable doubt does not necessarily mean that no juror 15 entertained any doubt whatsoever. There may be no 16 reasonable doubt - doubt based upon reason - and yet some 17 genuine doubt exists. It may reflect a mere possibility; 18 it may be but the whimsy of one juror or several. Yet 19 this whimsical doubt - this absence of absolute certainty 20 - can be real...Even [this] serves the defendant, for the 21 juror entertaining doubt which does not rise to 22 reasonable doubt can be expected to resist those who 23 would impose the irremediable penalty of death."

19 The State called witnesses Stephen Hemmes, Vincent Oddo and 20 Stephen Sontag to testify concerning the events of the underlying 21 crimes, even though the jury was instructed that they could not 22 consider guilty or innocence as part of their deliberations. Thus 23 although the parties for purposes of this appeal are proceeding on 24 the facts from the finding of guilt at trial, a fairer process 25 would allow that a defendant at a remanded penalty hearing be 26 allowed to present evidence in response to the prior finding.

1 (2004). The preliminary hearing testimony was admissible hearsay, 2 but the out-of-court statement contained therein was hearsay within 3 hearsay. This made it inherently unreliable and a violation of the 4 confrontation clause.

5 The State cites to United States v. Littlesun, 444 F.3d 1196 6 (2006) for the proposition that Crawford does not apply to 7 sentencing hearings. The Court in Littlesun, supra, indicated that 8 Crawford did not explicitly overrule existing precedent, and as 9 such hearsay is admissible at sentencing so long as accompanied by 10 some minimal indicia of reliability. Littlesun, 444 F.3d at 4559.
11 Littlesun is distinguishable in that it concerns sentencing on a 12 drug offense after a guilty plea and does not address the special 13 need for reliability in death penalty hearing. It is respectfully 14 urged that the due to the severity and irreversibility of the death 15 sentence and because of its qualitative difference from other 16 punishments that there is "a corresponding difference in the need 17 for reliability in the determination that death is the appropriate 18 punishment in a specific case. See Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 19 U.S. 280, 305, 98 S.Ct. 2978, 2991, 49 L.Ed.2d 944 (1976). THOMAS 20 respectfully urges that the need for heightened reliability applies 21 to the introduction of hearsay without the ability to confront the 22 declarant in a capital sentencing hearing.

23 Although hearsay may be generally admissible at a sentencing 24 hearing, it is respectfully urged that this Court find that the 25 need for Confrontation Clause protection mandates a different 26 standard at a death penalty sentencing.

27 Most recently in United States v. Mills, 2006 U.S. Dist. Lexis 28 62066 the Court found that the constitutional right to

1 confrontation applies to both phases [eligibility and selection] of 2 federal capital sentencing stating, inter alia,

3 "Thus, while the Court recognizes the policy reasons 4 encouraging the admission of the maximum quantum of 5 evidence during the selection phase, that policy is 6 insufficient to overrule Defendant's right to confront 7 witnesses during such a critical position of the capital 8 trial."

9 Mills, U.S. Dist. Lexis 62066 at 38.

10 With respect to the State's position that THOMAS "sought to 11 take unfair advantage of [the initial] favorable evidentiary ruling 12 and pressed a number of key issues, which included impugning the 13 memory of Officer Bailey and suggesting that Hall's statement to 14 police was coerced" (Answering Brief page 16), and therefor opened 15 the door to the admission of the statement, the State has 16 misinterpreted the proceedings below. THOMAS did not suggest that 17 the statement was coerced, the State has extrapolated a question as 18 to the number of persons present during the interview on cross-19 examination in response to the State asking on direct examination 20 if Hall's mother was present into suggesting that the statement was 21 coerced. The record belies such a finding. Additionally, if the 22 State feels that asking the number of persons present suggests 23 coercion then the problem becomes whether there is sufficient 24 indicia of reliability to allow admission of the hearsay.

25 A review of the record shows that:

26 "THE COURT: Anything else we want to take up outside 27 the presence of the jury?

28 MR. OWENS: We wanted to offer a copy of the statement that Kenya Hall gave to Trooper Bailey. They don't have an objection to foundation, but they want to make the same objection as they did yesterday as to hearsay, or was it Crawford, Mr. Schieck?

MR. SCHIECK: Yes, Crawford.

1 THE COURT: So the State is moving to admit the 2 transcript of Kenya Hall's conversation with Trooper 3 Bailey conducted in Hawthorne on April 15th of 1996.
4 And what is your objection, Mr. Schieck?

5 MR. SCHIECK: The objection is that under the 6 confrontation clause under the Sixth Amendment that out-7 of-court testimonial statements are not admissible under 8 the US Constitution and --

9

10 MR. SCHIECK: The admission is what's 11 unconstitutional. There's no ability to confront the 12 declarant here in court.

13 THE COURT: Mr. Owens.

14 MR. OWENS: I don't know if it was Mr. Schieck or 15 somebody else had argued the same thing, Crawford's 16 application. We had this over in Department XII a few 17 weeks ago. There are no cases of Crawford that I'm aware 18 of that are applying it to the penalty phases. I've 19 heard that allegation, but I have yet to see the cases.
20 Trooper Bailey testified yesterday that as to the 21 conversation he had with Kenya Hall. We just want to 22 have that conversation in its entirety to put before the 23 jury.

24 THE COURT: Well, didn't we read Kenya Hall's 25 preliminary hearing testimony?

26 MR. OWENS: We read his preliminary hearing testimony, 27 but that's not as comprehensive as his statement is.

28 THE COURT: His preliminary hearing testimony would be what does not violate Crawford, and that was used at trial.

MR. SCHIECK: Well, I'm not going to concede that it doesn't violate Crawford.

THE COURT: IT was at a hearing where Mr. Thomas was under oath, and Mr. Thomas was represented and where Mr.
Thoma's (sic) representatives had the right to cross-examine Kenya Hall, and it was admitted and it was read.
And the question is in a penalty proceeding can the transcript of an out-of-court statement be admitted, and I think that to be safe, to always err on the side of caution so we're not looking at ourselves ten years from now in number three, it would be better not to admit the statement.

MR. OWENS: We're going to have to recall the officer who testified at length about the statement that he took

1 from --

2 THE COURT: Why didn't you ask him the right questions
3 yesterday?

4 MR. OWENS: We're not sure if we did. We think that 5 we did.

6 THE COURT: You have an overnight transcript. You can 7 review it.

8 MR. OWENS: We'll take a look at it and see, but we 9 think there was one key area that came up yesterday that 10 wasn't covered. We thought this was the cleanest way to 11 put that in, just put the statement in. If Crawford 12 starts applying to sentencing hearings, which is what 13 we're in right here, the judge wouldn't be able to read a 14 PSI. We'd have to have a hearing, we'd have to cross-15 examine every person that put information in that PSI.
16 Crawford has not been extended to that sentencing 17 process. If it ever did, it would be ridiculous, and 18 that's the process we're in here with this jury. It's 19 already come in in large part. We just want the full 20 statement in its context rather than just the 21 paraphrasing that we got from Trooper Bailey. It's 22 already come in.

23 MR. SCHIECK: Over our objection which we raise 24 confrontation.

25 THE COURT: I allowed Trooper Bailey to testify 26 regarding a conversation because hearsay is admissible in 27 a penalty proceeding. However, that was your chance to 28 get that in. If you have to recall him, you have to recall him, but I'm not going to allow the transcript of the conversation.

MR. SCHIECK: Just as yesterday we would object to him recalling and having him testify. Yesterday we objected on hearsay and on confrontation." (11 APP 2654-55)

1 Therefore, THOMAS respectfully asserts that the Court erred in 2 the admission of out-of-court statements of Kenyon hall and the 3 sentence must be vacated and the case remanded for further 4 proceedings.

5 B. The Court Erred in Admitting Records and Reports from the 6 Department of Prisons and Parole and Probation Without Calling the 7 Declarant or Author Thereof to Testify and Be Subject to Cross-8 examination.

9 The State is entirely correct that THOMAS is concerned about 10 the introduction of the two separate sets of records from the 11 Department of Prisons and Parole and Probation during the penalty 12 hearing (Answering Brief page 18).

13 With respect to the Certification Order from Juvenile Court in 14 1990 the Court did not allow it's admission during the first phase 15 of the bifurcated hearing, but did allow the State to inquire of 16 Mrs. Thomas as to statements attributable to her in the report as 17 prior inconsistent statements. Without calling the declarant of 18 the hearsay report, the State should not have been permitted to 19 introduce the actual report into evidence.

20 The Certification Order itself is different in nature from the 21 statement addressed above attributable to Kenyon Hall, which was an 22 out of court statement during the course of an interrogation 23 wherein the officer who took the statement was available to 24 testify. With respect to the Certification Report and Order the 25 author of the document was not called to verify the contents or 26 lend any indicia of reliability to the contents of the report. For 27 instance, was the report based on a written form completed by Mrs.
28 Thomas or the result of a face to face interview? Was the report

1 written by the person who conducted the face to face interview or 2 was in prepared based on a report written by the person who 3 conducted the interview. All of these factors were not presented 4 by the State and as such, even if this Court were to follow the 5 reasoning of the Littlesun court, there was no indicia of 6 reliability presented upon which to base the admission of the 7 documentary hearsay.

8 The State, again, accuses THOMAS of intentionally trying "to 9 take unfair advantage of the bifurcated nature of the penalty 10 hearing by eliciting favorable character evidence in the mitigation 11 phase, but then denying the State the right to impeach their 12 witnesses with prior inconsistent statements." (Answering Brief 13 page 19) As discussed above, use of a hearsay written report 14 containing an alleged prior consistent statement is not proper 15 impeachment. This argument by the State ignores the clear 16 precedent that the aggravating circumstances must be weighed 17 against the mitigating circumstances before the other character 18 evidence can be considered by the jury. In Byford v. State, 116 19 Nev. 215, 994 P.2d 700 (2000) the Court reiterated that in 20 "deciding whether to impose a death sentence, [the jury] 21 may not consider general character evidence until they 22 have determined that a defendant is eligible for the 23 death penalty..."

24 Byford, 116 Nev. at 239.

25 Thus any impeachment using other character evidence not 26 related to proof of aggravating circumstances should not be 27 admissible as impeachment of mitigation evidence presented by the 28 defendant at the weighing stage of the eligibility process in a capital trial.

II.

THE COURT IMPROPERLY LIMITED THE MITIGATION
AND INSTRUCTIONS ON MITIGATION OFFERED BY THOMAS

A. The Court Erred in Refusing to Instruct the Jury That the Absence of Premeditated Intent to Kill Could Be Considered as a Mitigating Circumstance.

The State cites to a 1986 case, Howard v. State, 102 Nev. 572, 729 P.2d 1341 (1986), for the proposition that the refusal to give a proposed non-statutory mitigating jury instruction is reviewed under an abuse of discretion standard. Such an argument ignores the large body of case law since the Howard decision that modifies, if not impliedly overruling said holding. In Howard, supra, the trial court even refused to instruct on the statutory mitigating circumstances and the Court found that the failure was not an abuse of discretion or judicial error because there was no evidence to support the statutory mitigators and although the subject of objection at trial was not raised on direct appeal. Howard, 102 Nev. at 578. The jury only received one mitigator instruction, i.e., "any other mitigating circumstance." Id.

In Byford v. State, 116 Nev. 215, 994 P.2d 700 (2000) this Court considered a claim that it was error to refuse to instruct the jury on the defense theory of mitigation. The Court found that the trial court may have erred in refusing the instruction. The Court went on to state:

"NRS 175.554(1) therefore requires instructions on alleged mitigators upon which evidence has been presented and does not restrict such instructions to the enumerated statutory mitigators. Therefore, Byford was entitled to appropriate jury instructions on unenumerated mitigating circumstances for which he had presented evidence."

Byford, 116 Nev. at 238.

1 The State also cites to Castillo v. State, 114 Nev. 271, 956 2 P.2d 103 (1998) as being analogous to the instant case. In 3 Castillo, the trial court refused to give an instruction that 4 listed five (5) non-statutory mitigating circumstances; that 5 Castillo had (1) admitted his guilt of the offense charged; (2) had 6 demonstrated remorse for the commission of the offense, (3) 7 cooperated with police after he was identified as a suspect (4) had 8 not planned to commit the murder and (5) had a difficult childhood.
9 This Court found that the "catch-all" definition of mitigating 10 circumstances was sufficient, a position that the Court retreated 11 from in Byford, supra.

12 In Holloway v. State, 116 Nev. 732, 6 P.3d 987 (2000) the 13 Court found that the jury required further instruction regarding 14 its responsibilities in assessing the evidence during the penalty 15 phase:

16 "The record before us exhibits sufficient evidence to 17 support the conviction for first-degree murder. However, 18 it also reveals a number of potential mitigating factors.
19 For example, there was substantial evidence that Holloway 20 was remorseful following the murder. There was extensive 21 evidence that alcoholic intoxication played a major role 22 in the crime. The record also showed that Holloway and 23 Whiting had been arguing incessantly when the killing 24 occurred. Further, the crime did not threaten or 25 endanger any other persons. Also, Holloway did not flee 26 or conceal the crime in any way or deny his actions; 27 rather he immediately reported the crime and admitted his 28 guilt." (emphasis added)

Holloway, 116 Nev. at 743.

 The mitigation instruction in the instant case that included that there was a lack of premeditation in the homicide is the equivalent to that found in Holloway that the killing occurred during an argument. THOMAS' jury was therefore not properly

1 instructed in the penalty defense theory of mitigation in the 2 penalty hearing. Although the Court has not deemed such error to 3 be plain or constitutional error, in the instant case there was a 4 timely tender of the proposed mitigation instruction, and the 5 failure should be reviewed under an abuse of discretion standard.

6 The refusal of the District Court to fully instruct the jury 7 on THOMAS' theory of mitigation reasonably prevented the jury from 8 giving full consideration to the mitigation proffered by THOMAS.
9 The fact that THOMAS described the incident as having occurred 10 during a confrontation and not with premeditated intent to cause 11 death should have been open to full consideration by the jury. The 12 denial of proper instruction violated the Eighth and Fourteenth 13 Amendments. See, Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 602-609, 98 S.Ct.
14 2954 (1978) plurality opinion; Brown v. Payton, 544 U.S. 133, 125 15 S.Ct. 1432 (2005).

16 B. The State Committed Error in Limiting the Consideration of 17 Mitigation in It's Closing Argument.

18 The State takes the position that the closing argument of the 19 prosecutor properly tells the jury that "there should be some 20 connection between a fact and a defendant's actions before it has 21 much weight as a mitigating factor." (Answering Brief page 22).
22 This argument in the Answering Brief incorrectly reflects the 23 statement made by the prosecutor in his closing which drew the 24 objection. Specifically the prosecutor told the jury: "In other 25 words, there has to be some causation, connection between that fact 26 and the thing that the person did before it becomes a mitigator" 27 (12 APP 2853-54). There is clearly no requirement that a mitigator 28 has to have a causal connection to the murder to be considered by

1 the jury. Whenever a prosecutor tells jurors that they cannot 2 consider evidence the defense presents as mitigation, he or she 3 violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. Penry v. Lynaugh, 4 492 U.S. 302, 326-328 (1980).

5 The relevant authority is clear that the "catch-all"
6 mitigation provision in a state's statutory scheme encompasses 7 anything that happened before and after the crime or later. Brown 8 v. Payton, 544 U.S. 133, 125 S.Ct. 1432 (2005). Argument to the 9 jury that it could not consider mitigating evidence of post 10 conviction conduct in determining whether the defendant should 11 receive a sentence of life imprisonment violates the Eighth 12 Amendment. Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 602-609, 98 S.Ct. 2954 13 (1978) (plurality opinion).

14 It was improper argument for the prosecutor to tell the jury 15 that there should be a connection between the fact and the 16 defendant's actions before it can be mitigation. In fact, events 17 that transpire long after the underlying crime and which have no 18 connection whatsoever to the actions of the defendant, are properly 19 admitted as mitigation.

20 C. The District Court Erred in Limiting the Defense Theory of 21 Mitigation in the Case Involving the Failure to Charge Angela Love.

22 The State, in part, makes the point for THOMAS on the error of 23 the trial court in limiting examination concerning the involvement 24 of Angela Love in the events that proceeded and transpired at the 25 Lone Star Restaurant. The State acknowledges the propriety of the 26 defense "theory that Angela Love was a bad influence on [Thomas] or 27 that her involvement with Defendant precipitated the murder and was 28 a factor to be considered in mitigation" (Answering Brief page 24-

1 25). The comment by the trial court was that the information 2 concerning Love was "not even mitigation. So I don't know why you 3 brought it up" (11 APP 2543), was totally contrary to existing 4 precedent, and in itself forms a basis for reversal of the 5 sentence.

6 The United States Supreme Court has held that to ensure that 7 jurors have reliably determined death to be the appropriate 8 punishment for a defendant "the jury must be able to consider and 9 give effect to any mitigating evidence relevant to a defendant's 10 background and character or the circumstances of the crime." Penry 11 v. Lynaugh, 492 U.S. 302, 328 (1980). In Penry the absence of 12 instructions concerning certain mitigation evidence resulted in the 13 case being remanded for a resentencing.

14 While the District Court and the prosecution may not agree 15 that the failure to prosecute the person who aided and abetted in 16 the commission of the homicide is mitigation, the decision is not 17 left to the prosecutor. It is a jury of the defendant's peers that 18 is called upon to make the ultimate decision. If any one juror 19 believe that the selective prosecution of the case was a factor 20 upon which to spare the life of THOMAS, it would have thwarted the 21 State's efforts to obtain a death sentence. It was error to deny 22 THOMAS the ability to present and argue the full available 23 mitigation to his jury.

III.

THE COURT ERRED BY NOT LIMITING PENALTY HEARING
EVIDENCE TO AVOID VIOLATION OF THE EIGHTH AMENDMENT AND DUE PROCESS RIGHT TO A FUNDAMENTALLY FAIR PENALTY HEARING

A. The Trial Court Should Not Have Admitted Cumulative and Otherwise Inadmissible Evidence of Prior Bad Acts During the Penalty Phase.

THOMAS agrees that Nevada law allows the admission of character evidence at the penalty phase of a capital trial. NRS 175.552. The problem that exists is that the discretion of the trial court in controlling the admission of such evidence is unbridled and as such can result in the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty in violation of the Eighth Amendment. Death penalty statutes must be structured to prevent the penalty being imposed in an arbitrary and unpredictable fashion. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S.Ct. 2909, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976); Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2126, 33
L.Ed.2d 346 (1972).

Nevada cases do recognize that there must be some discretion exercised in the admission of unrelated or uncharged other acts at a penalty hearing:

Evidence of unrelated crimes for which a defendant has not been convicted is inadmissible during the penalty phase if it is dubious or tenuous, or if its probative value is outweighed by danger of unfair prejudice, confusion or issues, misleading the jury, undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence."

Jones v. State, 107 Nev. 632, 636, 817 P.2d 1179 (1991). See also, Allen v. State, 99 Nev. 485, 665 P.2d 238 (1983) and Hollaway v.
State, 116 Nev. 732, 6 P.3d 987 (2000), however rarely, if ever, do

1 the trial courts limit the admission of evidence proffered by the 2 State.

3 The State cites a number of cases that allow for the admission 4 of other bad acts so long as the danger of unfair prejudice does 5 not substantially outweigh the probative value of the evidence.
6 Pellegrini v. State, 104 Nev. 625, 630-31, 764 P.2d 484 (1988); 7 McKenna v. State, 114 Nev. 1044, 1051-1052, 968 P.2d 739, 744 8 (1988). In the instant case the Court should have limited the 9 quality and quantity of the "prison incident" evidence that was 10 presented to the jury. The cumulative effect of the volume of 11 evidence outweighed any probative value to said evidence. The 12 Opening Brief and the State's Answering Brief contain fairly full 13 descriptions or summaries of the evidence that was presented, with 14 the competing points of view whether the presentation of this type 15 of evidence needs to be controlled.

16 In addition to preventing introduction of evidence in 17 contravention of the confrontation clause the Court should have 18 placed some limiting factors upon the prison records probative 19 value. The failure to do so violates the Eighth Amendment and 20 resulted in the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death 21 sentence.

22 B. The Statutory Scheme Adopted by Nevada Fails to Properly 23 Limit Victim Impact Statements.

24 As set forth in the Opening Brief, THOMAS respectfully urges 25 that this Court enact guidelines on the presentation of victim 26 impact testimony at a penalty hearing in a capital case. The Court 27 has adequately set forth such guidelines with respect to the 28 statement of allocution made by the defendant at his penalty

1 hearing. Homick v. State, 108 Nev. 127, 825 P.2d 600 (1992), cert.
2 denied 117 S.Ct at 519 (1996). A similar pronouncement would be 3 appropriate for victim impact testimony. Even though such 4 testimony is given under oath with the opportunity to cross-5 examine, such is an illusory control mechanism, with such cross-6 examination rarely, if ever, conducted due to the negative impact 7 same would likely have on the jury.

8 The failure to have such a framework in place resulted in the 9 rehearsed violation of admissibility by the father of Carl Dixon 10 stating with respect to THOMAS that he was "a person who is in my 11 opinion the lowest form of social sewage". (13 APP 2973). While 12 THOMAS understands and accepts that victim impact testimony is 13 admissible as stated in Lane v. State, 110 Nev. 1156, 881 P.2d 1358 14 (1994), citing to Payne v. Tennessee, 501 U.S. 808, 111 S.Ct. 2597 15 (1991) that : "A State may legitimately conclude that evidence 16 about the victim and about the impact of the murder on the victim's 17 family is relevant to the jury's decision as to whether or not the 18 death penalty should be imposed." Id, 501 U.S. at 827, 111 S.Ct.
19 at 2609.

20 The inherent problem with making such evidence admissible 21 without restraint is that death sentences could be imposed based on 22 the status of the victim and not the death worthiness of the 23 defendant. Such evidence also invites prosecutor misconduct in 24 arguing for the death penalty to the jury. For instance in 25 Hollaway v. State, 116 Nev. 732, 6 P.3d 987 (2000) the Court found 26 that:

27 "The prosecutor's statement to the jury that Whiting's 28 family would have no more holidays with their daughter and their sister was improper. See Quillen v. State 112

1 Nev. 1369, 1182, 929 P.2d 893, 901 (1996). The statement 2 encouraged the jury to impose a sentence under the 3 influence of passion: 'holiday arguments' are meant only 4 to appeal to jurors emotions and arouse their passions.
5 Id."

6 Holloway, 116 Nev. at 742-743.

7 The question remains whether, if during testimony concerning 8 victim impact, the witnesses referred to missing their daughter or 9 sister at Christmas would be deemed as improper and meant to appeal 10 to "jurors emotions and arouse their passions" when the same 11 statement is misconduct if made in the context of closing argument.
12 This Court must set appropriate limits and the failure to do so has 13 resulted in the arbitrary, capricious, and "freakish" imposition of 14 the death penalty.

IV.

THE SENTENCE OF DEATH MUST BE REVERSED BECAUSE NEVADA'S DEATH PENALTY SCHEME IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

The State takes the position that "Nevada has adopted a statutory scheme which clearly satisfies the concerns expressed in Furman and the solutions proposed by Gregg. As in the Georgia scheme which passed muster in Gregg, Nevada has set forth a series of statutory [aggravating] factors; one of which must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt before a sentence of death can be imposed" (Answering Brief page 31). The State, however, in making this argument, misses the point: the Nevada aggravating circumstances are so broad as to fail to legitimately narrow the class of murders eligible for the death penalty, and the ultimate decision on whether to seek death is decided in an uncontrolled decision making process of the prosecuting authority without review procedures to avoid arbitrary and capricious decisions.

The State while defending the aggravating circumstances legislatively created and carried out by the executive branch through the prosecutors office, hails the decision of this Court in McConnell v. State, 120 Nev. Ad. Op. 105, 102 P.3d 606 (2004) as narrowing the discretion of the statutory scheme. The fact that the judicial branch was compelled to intervene is clear evidence that the Nevada statute is overbroad and results in the arbitrary and capricious eligibility for the death penalty. This is an obligation that the Court undertakes under the mandatory review provisions of NRS 177.055(2) because the Court is:

"also cognizant that because the death penalty is unique in its severity and irrevocability, this Court must carefully review every death sentence to minimize the risk that the penalty is imposed in error or in arbitrary

1 and capricious manner."

2 Hollaway v. State, 116 Nev. 732, 6 P.3d 987 (2000).

3 Until such time as there is a legitimate narrowing of the 4 aggravating circumstances that allow the State the exercise
5 discretion on which cases are death penalty eligible the Nevada 6 scheme will be unconstitutional in violation of the Eighth 7 Amendment. THOMAS' sentence should therefore be vacated and the 8 case remanded for imposition of a sentence less than death.

V.

THE STATE VIOLATED THE ORDER OF THE COURT
BIFURCATING THE EVIDENCE AT THE PENALTY HEARING

The State takes the position that THOMAS was not entitled to a bifurcated penalty hearing and as such any violation of the order to the District Court bifurcating the hearing was not error in the case. While THOMAS does not concede that a bifurcated penalty hearing is not constitutionally mandated, most current decisions of this Court do not require such a procedure. Accord Weber v. State, 121 Nev. Ad. Op. 57, 119 P.3d 107 (2005); McConnell v. State, 120 Nev. Ad. Op. 105, 102 P.3d 606 (2004). THOMAS reasserts that once the District Court determined to conduct a bifurcated penalty hearing to comply with Due Process, the Eighth Amendment and the Nevada statutory scheme, the Court was obligated to enforce it's ruling and the State required to abide by the ruling. Presentation on cross-examination of character evidence tainted the bifurcated process and allowed the jury to consider improper factors in weighing aggravation against mitigation. This error invalidates the death eligibility determination and mandates either a new penalty hearing or the imposition of a life sentence.

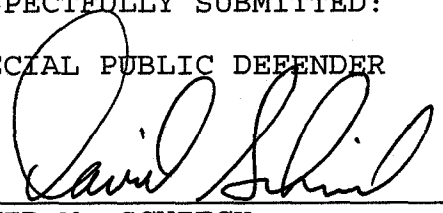

1 CONCLUSION

2 Based on the arguments and authorities herein contained and in 3 the Opening Brief heretofore filed with the Court, it is 4 respectfully requested that the Court vacate the sentence of death
5 imposed against MARLO THOMAS and remand the matter to District 6 Court for further proceedings consistent with the decision of the 7 Court.
