TRACIE'K. LINDEN NI CLEPK OF SUPREME COURT BY DEPUTY CLERK

OPPOSITION TO "MOTION TO CONSOLIDATE APPEALS AND MOTION TO ALLOW FULL BRIEFING" AND COUNTERMOTION FOR FEES AND COSTS

I. INTRODUCTION; SCOPE OF ISSUES

Scott argues that he has received formal legal education.¹ If anything, that makes his misguided and meritless filings less deserving than those of other "proper person" litigants to whom this Court might give latitude. His current Motion is merely a continuation of his efforts, detailed in our last two filings, to tie up scarce judicial resources and inflict damage on our client and this law firm by requiring us to respond to frivolous motions.

POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

II. FACTS

Since July, 2008, Scott has filed, or caused to be filed, seven separate appeals or writs in this Court. All but two of these have already been dismissed. Our research – and Answer – on his Petition for En-Banc Reconsideration reveals that his remaining filings still pending before the Court should also be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

TRACIE K. LINDEMAN

¹ Scott apparently received a JD from Washington and Lee School of Law in Virginia. He has applied for admission in California, where his application is (pretty understandably) stalled in the Character and Fitness examination process.

As was pointed out in the recent Answering Brief for case No. 52593, the cost of litigating this case has risen to over $600,000 in time incurred and costs. Attorney's fee awards already made against Scott, plus interest, exceed $220,000. Scott has not paid a dime toward these awards, despite his six-figure income.² We ask the Court to look to the Answering Brief for a complete recitation of the tortuous history of filings of Appeals and Writs by Scott. They can be deemed nothing short of frivolous, vexatious, and without procedural, precedential, or moral value.

III. ARGUMENT

A. Appeals Should Not Be Consolidated

The Answering Brief as to whether this Court should allow En Banc Reconsideration, explains that this Court has been correct in dismissing every Writ and Appeal filed by Scott. The two Appeals filed by him – Case No. 52593 and Case No. 53687 – are both for orders that were substantively unappealable at the time they were filed.

In Case No. 52593, Scott has appealed from Orders that were not final and/or were out of the jurisdictional time limit established for appeals.³

In Case No. 53687, Scott filed his appeal seven days before the final order was even issued by the lower court.⁴

We are confident that this Court will find – as it has in every other instance where he has filed an Appeal or Writ – that the remaining Appeals are untimely and substantively unappealable.

Allowing a consolidation of a valid appeal with two "even arguably" questionable appeals would only serve to create confusion and aid in frustrating justice.⁵

² Scott has submitted a Financial Disclosure Form where he admits making over $120,000 a year.

³ See Answering Brief for Case No. 52593, for a detailed explanation of why these Orders were unappealable.

⁴ Id. Also see NRAP 4(a)(6) for timeliness of appeals.

⁵ Id. at Exhibit QQ, demonstrates how Scott has attempted to confuse matters with his multiple filings.

B. NRAP 3(b) and NRCP 42 Are Inapplicable To This Case

1. NRAP 3(b)

NRAP 3(b) states:

If two or more persons are entitled to appeal from a judgment or order of a district court and their interests are such as to make joinder practicable, they may file a joint notice of appeal, or may join in appeal after filing separate timely notices of appeal, and they may thereafter proceed on appeal as a single appellant. Appeals may be consolidated by order of the Supreme Court upon its own motion or upon motion of a party, or by stipulation of the parties to the several appeals.

(Emphasis Added.) Here, joinder is not possible as Scott's interests are not "such as to make joinder practicable" and he has not filed a "separate timely notice of appeal."

As to consolidation, Scott's appeals are to orders that have already been ruled as substantively unappealable and raise no identical issues. Lacking some linkage, the appeals can't be consolidated.6

A cross-appeal would have been proper - had Scott timely filed such a pleading with the Court.⁷ Of course, he did not.

In short, NRAP 3(b) is inapplicable to this case and does not support a consolidation of Scott's frivolous, untimely, and unserved appeals with Case No. 53798 – the only timely appeal before the Court.

2. NRCP 42

NRCP 42 states:

When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending before the court, it may order a joint hearing or trial of any or all the matters in issue in the actions; it may order all the actions consolidated; and it may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay.

⁶ See Ewell v. State, 105 Nev. 897, 785 P.2d 1028 (1989), where the Court found that "Since appeallants were codefendants in proceedings in district court, and since their appeals raised some identical issues on appeal, accordinginly, their appeals were consolidated for purposes of disposition.

⁷ See Mahaffey v. Investor's Nat'l Sec. Co., 102 Nev. 462, 725 P.2d 1218 (1986), where the Court found timely notice of cross-appeal is jurisdictional with respect to the cross-appeal.

Here, there is no "common question of law or fact" pending before the Court. Scott wants to relitigate a matter having nothing to do with the pending appeal (which addresses the correct calculation methodology of penalties on long-outstanding child support awards). Scott wants to find some way to cause this Court to revisit its 2002 Opinion that ordered return of the kidnaped children.

Absent a finding of a common issue of law or fact, a case can't be consolidated based upon NRCP 42.

C. No Full Briefing Is Required

Based solely on the above, no briefing is required for appeals this Court will surely find to be untimely and lacking jurisdiction.

As to Scott's argument that the lower Court misinterprets the Opinion from this Court in Vaile v. Eighth Judicial District Court, 8 as he has done every time he has referred to this case, he mis-reads or mis-quotes the Court's opinion. What this Court actually said was:

Because the voidable decree has not been set aside, the court had colorable personal jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of their marital status. Simply because a court might order one party to pay child support to another in the exercise of its personal jurisdiction over the parties does not permit the court to extend its jurisdiction to the subject matters of child custody and visitation.

We hope that the Court finally puts this "issue" to rest. The Court had personal jurisdiction over Scott because he submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the Court by way of his multiple fraudulent filings; as such, the court below had the jurisdiction under UIFSA9 to order support for the minor children. However, the Court lacked jurisdiction over custody and visitation, because the children never lived in Nevada.

⁸ 118 Nev. 262, 275, 44 P.3d 506 (2002).

⁹ Codified in NRS 130.

Scott fails to understand – or pretends to fail to understand – that under the principle of "divisible divorce," jurisdiction over a marriage does not necessarily carry with it jurisdiction to alter every legal incident of marriage.¹⁰

In Estin, the wife had obtained a New York separate maintenance award. The husband subsequently sought to terminate that order in a Nevada divorce. Entry of a divorce decree was affirmed, but the Court added that if the divorce proceeded ex parte, the Nevada court could only terminate the marriage. The resulting decree would not prevent a court of another state with jurisdiction over the parties from adjudicating the remaining incidents of the marriage.

The Uniform Interstate Family Support Act ("UIFSA") governs child support and has been adopted in every State. Nevada adopted it in 1997 as NRS Chapter 130. The Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act, or UCCJEA, replaced the older UCCJA, and was intended to provide clearer standards for which States can exercise original jurisdiction over a child custody determination, and clarify continuing and modification jurisdiction in custody cases.

The rules governing support and custody operate independently of one another. The courts of this State might be called upon to enforce a child support obligation against someone found here, or filing here, while having no jurisdiction over custody matters.¹¹ The obligor parent can always be sued for child support where that parent lives or has submitted to the jurisdiction of the court,¹² because child support is set by the court with personal jurisdiction over the paying parent.

In other words, every incident of a divorce action has its own jurisdictional test for when a court may, or may not, act. Each must be answered separately by the court hearing the matter, when Ct. 1690 (1978) (where a defendant is subject to a State's jurisdiction, his rights in the matters ancillary to divorce may be determined by its courts).

¹² See NRS 130.201(1)-(2); see also, e.g., Prof. John J. jurisdiction is in question.¹³ As explained by the United States Supreme Court over 60 years ago in Estin, a court might have jurisdiction over some, but not all, of these incidents.

There is no question that the court below had jurisdiction over the parties and to issue a child support order. Since this is true, there are no complex, or important, or even arguable issues in any of Scott's appeals that require briefing. His request should be denied.

IV. CONCLUSION

Scott wants to consolidate the valid pending appeal with two others, both of which should be promptly dismissed. His motion should be denied with prejudice. Scott's current motion, like every other appeal and/or writ he has filed, has only served to raise litigation costs and divert scarce judicial resources for attempted re-argument of a matter decided nearly a decade ago. There is no basis to brief or consolidate appeals that are not jurisdictionally before the Court and that seek to address issues long since decided in published opinions.

In addition to an order denying consolidation and full briefing, Scott should be ordered to pay all costs and fees for having to respond to yet another frivolous filing. Proof of actual payment of those fees should be a precondition to this Court's allowance of any further filings by Scott.
