JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT

Respondents agree with the Jurisdictional Statement contained in Appellant’s Opening Brief (the “Opening Brief”).

ROUTING STATEMENT

Respondents agree with the Routing Statement contained in the Opening Brief.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

Respondents agree that an order granting summary judgment is reviewed de novo. Wood v. Safeway, Inc., 121 Nev. 724, 729, 121 P.3d 1026, 1029 (2005).

STATEMENT OF ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

1. Whether the District Court correctly determined that Baiguen’s negligence claim is preempted by worker’s compensation because his alleged injuries arose out of alleged acts or omissions of Harrah’s employees occurring in the workplace at a time when Baiguen was in Harrah’s Housekeeping Department and beginning the tasks associated with his work.

2. Whether the District Court correctly found that its determination was not altered by the “increased risk” test, an issue which Baiguen did not even raise until the summary judgment hearing.

1 STATEMENT OF THE CASE

2 Israel Baiguen (“Baiguen”), a former employee of Harrah’s Las 3 Vegas, LLC dba Harrah’s Casino Hotel Las Vegas (“Harrah’s”), filed a
4 Complaint against Harrah’s and Caesars Entertainment Corporation
5 (“Caesars”) claiming that but for the alleged negligent acts or omissions of 6 Harrah’s employees occurring in the workplace on October 19, 2012, the 7 consequences of a stroke he supposedly suffered on that day could have 8 been avoided or mitigated. (App. Vol. 1 00002-00006).<sup>1</sup> Respondents
9 moved for summary judgment. At the hearing, Baiguen agreed that 10 summary judgment in favor of Caesars was appropriate. (App. Vol. 2 11 00209:16 – 00210:2).<sup>2</sup> Following argument, the District Judge also 12 granted summary judgment to Harrah’s, finding that Baiguen’s claim was 13 preempted by worker’s compensation because his injuries arose out of and 14 in the course of his employment. (App. Vol. 2 00232-00234). Baiguen

21 <sup>1</sup> Herein, “App. Vol. 1” shall refer to Appellant’s Appendix, Vol. 1 and 22 “App. Vol. 2” shall refer to Appellant’s Appendix, Vol. 2.

23 <sup>2</sup> Despite this statement on the record, presumably erroneously, Baiguen’s
24 Case Appeal Statement identifies Caesars as one of the Respondents
25 involved in the appeal. (App. Vol. 2 00238:5-8). Caesars was and is a 26 parent company of Harrah’s and had no employment relationship with 27 Baiguen or any other nexus to this case. The Opening Brief does not 28 make any arguments contesting the granting of summary judgment to Caesars and the issue will not be discussed further in this Answering Brief.

1 filed a Notice of Appeal. (App. Vol. 2 00235-00236).

3 STATEMENT OF FACTS

4 In 2012 (and presently) Harrah’s was the employer of the employees
5 working at the Harrah’s Hotel Casino in Las Vegas. (App. Vol. 1 00044 ¶
6 3). On October 19, 2012, Baiguen’s significant other, Estrelita Bradley,
7 visited his apartment, leaving at approximately 3:30 p.m., at which time
8 she testified that Baiguen “[s]eemed okay” and “looked normal,” although 9 “I don’t know inside his body.” (App. Vol. 1 00052:6 – 00053:2).
10 Bradley testified that she saw Baiguen get in his car to leave for work.
11 (App. Vol. 1 00053:3-8).<sup>3</sup>

12 Baiguen’s shift started at 4:30 p.m. (App. Vol. 1 00065:7-22).
13 Houseperson, Romalito Santaren, testified that on October 19 he saw 14 Baiguen in an area of the parking garage where employees congregated 15 before it was time to clock-in, with Baiguen arriving between 4:10 and 16 4:15 p.m. (App. Vol. 1 00063:9-15; 00066:5-25; 00067:14 – 00068:5).
17 Santaren testified that Baiguen then walked under his own power down to 18 the Housekeeping Office area. (App. Vol. 1 00071:20 – 00072:8). There,
21
22
23

24
25 <sup>3</sup> Baiguen resided in an apartment at 4630 Koval Lane. (App. Vol. 1 00129
26 ¶ 2; 00131). Respondents asked the District Court to take judicial notice
27 that this is 1.40 miles from Harrah’s (3475 Las Vegas Boulevard South).
28 (App. Vol. 1 00044 ¶ 3; 00059).

1 Baiguen clocked-in. (App. Vol. 2 00200 ¶ 3). Baiguen also got in line to 2 get his radio and keys. (App. Vol. 1 00073:12-14).

4 Housekeeping Supervisor, Mercedes Raez, met Baiguen at the 5 window where radios and keys were passed out and asked Baiguen if he 6 needed these items; Baiguen did not respond. A co-worker, Lucito, told 7 Raez that Baiguen was “not good.” (App. Vol. 1 00083:2-19; 00084:16-
8 23). Raez then reported to Assistant Housekeeping Manager, Karla
9 Young, that “Israel is not fine.” (App. Vol. 1 00085:6-13; 00089:9-12).
10 Young briefly saw Baiguen at about 4:30 p.m. and he did not respond
11 (which from her perspective, was not unusual because he typically did not 12 respond to her). Santeren asked Young if he could assist Baiguen in 13 getting a ride home, and Young said yes. (App. Vol. 1 00074:8-19; 14 00075:4-16; 00090:11 – 00091:24).

17
18 Santeren arranged to have two Maids take Baiguen home. (App.
19 Vol. 1 00095:12 - 00096:25). (There is no evidence anyone in Harrah’s
20 management was involved in the logistics of getting Baiguen home).
21
22 Bradley claimed to next see Baiguen again two days later, and took him to 23 the hospital, where he was diagnosed as having suffered a stroke. (App.
24 Vol. 1 0004 ¶ V; 00054:13-17; 00055:21 – 00056:7).

1 In October 2012, t-PA<sup>4</sup> was the only FDA-approved treatment for 2 acute ischemic stroke. (App. Vol. 1 00112:9-12).<sup>5</sup> For patients who have
3 diabetes such as Baiguen, there is a three-hour window to administer t-PA
4 from the onset of stroke symptoms. (App. Vol. 1 00112:13 – 00113:6).

6 It is important to have an “historian that [can] attest to [the] time 7 when [the] stroke symptoms started” and be “very confident” about the 8 patient’s “last seen well” time because risks such as bleeding can outweigh
9 the potential benefits if t-PA is administered outside the three-hour
10 window. (App. Vol. 1 00114:4-17; 00115:18 – 00117:9; 00118:6-8).
11 Even administering t-PA within the window can result in death. (App.
12 Vol. 1 00119:1 – 00120:4). While Dr. Shprecher presumes Baiguen’s
13 stroke started sometime between 3:30 p.m. and the time he arrived to work
14 on October 19, 2012, it is possible the stroke started earlier and that 15 Bradley did not notice the onset of the symptoms. (App. Vol. 1 00108:16-16 25; 00109:17-24; 00110:17 – 00111:8).

17 ///

18 ///

24 <sup>4</sup>t-PA is an acronym for tissue plasminogen activator, which is a blood clot-
25 busting medication. (App. Vol. 1 00104).

26 <sup>5</sup> Unless otherwise indicated, this and all the remaining citations to the 27 record in this section are to the report or deposition testimony of Baiguen’s
28 expert, Dr. Shprecher.

1 Under the best case scenario, t-PA would likely not be administered
2 until about 40 minutes after a patient’s arrival at the Emergency Room,
3 what Dr. Shprecher referred to as “door to needle time.” (App. Vol. 1
4 00121:2-21). Dr. Shprecher agreed with Dr. Selco’s<sup>6</sup> estimate that, on 5 average, only about 50% of patients get t-PA within an hour of arrival.
6 (App. Vol. 1 00122:6-13).

9 Dr. Shprecher’s report states: “When administered within 3 hours of 10 when symptoms start, t-PA improves the chance that a stroke patient will 11 recover (within 3 months) to have minimal or no disability by 30%.”
12 (App. Vol. 1 00104). This did not necessarily mean that Baiguen
13 personally would have benefitted from the treatment. (App. Vol. 1 14 00123:9 – 00124:6). As Dr. Shprecher testified: “None of these treatments
15 are like with penicillin where you cure the infection and it is guaranteed
16 . . . There is just . . . percentage chances of improvement.” (App. Vol. 1 17 00120:13-17).
18

21 SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

22 “The NIIA<sup>7</sup> provides the exclusive remedy for employees injured on 23 the job, and an employer is immune from suit by an employee for injuries
24

26 _____

27 <sup>7</sup> The Nevada Industrial Insurance Act, NRS Chapters 616A to 616D.

1 arising out of and in the course of the employment.” Wood, 121 Nev. at 2 732, 121 P.3d at 1031 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

4 The “in the course of employment” requirement refers “to the time
5 and place of employment, i.e., whether the injury occurs at work, during 6 working hours, and while the employee is reasonably performing his or her 7 duties.” Wood, 121 Nev. at 733; 121 P.3d at 1032 (citation omitted). The 8 alleged negligence of Harrah’s for which Baiguen seeks to recover
9 occurred in the Housekeeping Office at the start of the shift after Baiguen 10 went to the window at which he received the radio and keys necessary to 11 perform his job duties. Pursuant to the principles set forth in MGM Mirage
12 v. Cotton, 121 Nev. 396, 400-401, 116 P.3d 56, 58-59 (2005), Baiguen was 13 in the course of his employment.<sup>8</sup>

14
15
16
17 “An injury is said to arise out of one’s employment when there is a
18 causal connection between the employee’s injury and the nature of the 19 work or workplace.” Wood, 121 Nev. at 733; 121 P.3d at 1032 (citation
20 omitted). Employment-related risks arise out of one’s employment, while 21 personal ones generally do not. Rio All Suite Hotel & Casino v. Phillips,

24
25 <sup>8</sup> In Cotton, this Court found that the “injury arose out of and in the course
26 of [Cotton’s] employment” even though it occurred in the employee
27 parking lot outside the MGM about ten minutes before the start of Cotton’s
28 shift. Id., at 57; 59.

1 126 Nev. 346, 351, 240 P.3d 2, 5 (2010) (citations and internal quotation
2 marks omitted).

4 Typically, suffering a stroke at work would constitute a personal risk
5 that would not be covered by worker's compensation. Here, however,
6 Baiguen is not contending that Harrah's is liable because it caused his 7 stroke. The theory of the liability is that the stroke coupled with the 8 alleged inadequate response of Harrah's employees to the symptoms of 9 stroke combined to deprive Baiguen of the opportunity to receive treatment
10 during the limited period of time he had to receive t-PA and possibly 11 mitigate or avoid the consequences of the stroke.
12

14 This case is very similar to Dugan v. American Express Travel
15 Related Services Company, Inc., 912 P.2d 1322 (Ariz. App. 1995), in 16 which the court affirmed summary judgment granted to the employer on a 17 negligence claim based on worker's compensation being the exclusive
18 remedy. In Dugan, the combination of the employee's heart event and a 19 delay in being able to obtain emergency medical relief due to the 20 employer's decision to block the ability to call 911 caused irreversible 21 brain damage which was deemed to constitute an accident for purposes of 22 Arizona's worker's compensation statutes. Id., at 1328-29.
23
25
26
27
28

1 Baiguen contends the court below erred in failing to apply the 2 “increased-risk” test enunciated in Phillips, under which he claims his 3 injury would have been found to not be covered by worker’s
4 compensation. However, this test is only applied to “determine whether an 5 injury resulting from a neutral risk is compensable.” Id., 126 Nev. 346 at 6 353, 240 P.3d at 6 (emphasis added). The risk experienced by Baiguen in 7 the Harrah’s workplace was not neutral, but employment-related.

10 Even if, hypothetically, the risk was neutral such that the increased-11 risk test applied, worker’s compensation coverage exists if the employee 12 “is subjected ‘to a risk greater than that to which the general public [is] 13 exposed.’” Phillips, 126 Nev. 346 at 353, 240 P.3d at 7 (citation omitted).
14 The general public typically has no authorized access to “back of the 15 house” areas such as the employee parking garage and the Housekeeping
16 Office (where Baiguen performed activities upon arrival at work).
17 Baiguen was in these areas when he supposedly exhibited his stroke
18 symptoms and purportedly needed medical assistance. To the extent there 19 was a risk that his co-workers would not recognize the symptoms of a 20 stroke and/or not know to promptly summon medical attention in response
21 thereto, Baiguen faced a greater risk in these areas than members of the 22 general public.
23
24
25
26
27

1 Finally, even if Baiguen’s negligence claim is not preempted by 2 worker’s compensation (which it is), he cannot establish the element of 3 causation. At most, Baiguen can only establish that if a number of things
4 had happened, he might have been able to receive a treatment (t-PA) that is 5 successfully administered to about 30% of the patients who receive it (but 6 did not definitely offer Baiguen himself a 30% chance of recovery from his 7 stroke). This is insufficient to apply the “loss of chance” doctrine, which 8 has in the past been limited to medical malpractice cases.

11
12 ARGUMENT

13 WORKER’S COMPENSATION IS
14 BAIGUEN’S EXCLUSIVE REMEDY

15 Introduction

16 Baiguen’s sole claim is for negligence. The Complaint contends the 17 alleged acts or omissions of Harrah’s employees squandered the “golden 18 window’ of time in which to effectively diagnose and treat a stroke when it
19 first manifests itself,” and that as a result, the “stroke was proximately 20 and/or legally caused by, or worsened by, or the chances of avoiding or 21 mitigating or treating [the] same were significantly decreased by, the delay
22 in diagnosis and treatment caused by Defendants.” (App. Vol. 1 00004 ¶ 23 VI).

1 Citing Lee v. GNLV Corp., 117 Nev. 291, 22 P.3d 209 (2001),
2 Baiguen claims Harrah’s had the same duty to render him aid as it does to 3 its guests. (Opening Brief, p. 15). Lee does hold that when “a special
4 relationship exists between the parties, such as with an innkeeper-guest, 5 teacher-student or employer-employee, an affirmative duty to aid others in 6 peril is imposed by law.” Id., 117 Nev. at 295, 22 P.2d at 209 (citations
7 omitted). This is consistent with the Restatement (Third) of Torts § 40 8 (2012).
11

12 However, while Lee has occasionally since been cited by the Nevada
13 Supreme Court in support of the proposition that there are various types of 14 special relationships out of which arises a duty to aid others in peril, this 15 Court has never actually cited Lee in holding that an employee can state a 16 negligence claim if his or her employer fails to come to his or her aid. This 17 is because any duty owed by an employer to an employee is normally
18 preempted by worker’s compensation. See, Restatement (Third) of Torts § 19 40 (2012), comment k (“Workers’ compensation has displaced most 20 common-law occupational tort claims. Where workers’ compensation is 21 applicable, it governs employer liability for employees’ occupational 22 injuries”).

1 Baiguen contends “[h]is injury: (1) did not occur at work, but rather
2 just at his employer’s premises; (2) did not occur during working hours
3 because he never clocked in and was sent home; and (3) he was not 4 performing any of his job duties.” (Opening Brief, p. 14). Baiguen is 5 wrong on all counts.

8 The alleged “injury” in this case results from Harrah’s failure to 9 render aid to Baiguen when he was supposedly displaying classic signs of 10 suffering a stroke. Baiguen does not pinpoint the exact time of Harrah’s
11 alleged negligence. Presumably, it was about the time that Housekeeping
12 Supervisor Raez and Assistant Housekeeping Manager Young,<sup>10</sup>
13 encountered Baiguen.<sup>11</sup> Young believes she saw Baiguen at close to 4:30
14 p.m. (App. Vol. 1 00090:3-8). Although the shift started at 4:30 p.m., 15 employees were expected to clock-in at 4:23 p.m. (App. Vol. 1 00065:7-16 22; App. Vol. 2 00168, p. 35:3-14). Baiguen was in the Housekeeping
17 area at this time. (App. Vol. 1 00071:16 – 00072:14).
18

22 <sup>10</sup> At several points in the Opening Brief, Young is identified as the 23 department manager. She was actually the Assistant Housekeeping
24 Manager. (App. Vol. 1 00089:9-12).

25 <sup>11</sup> Page 3 of the Opening Brief states: “Despite the fact that Mr. Baiguen 26 was displaying classic signs of stroke none of his co-workers, including his 27 supervisor Mercedes Raez and his department manager Karla Young, . . .
28 ever summoned emergency medical assistance or notified the hotel security department.”

1           The contention that Baiguen was not “at work” in the 4:23 – 4:30
2 p.m. timeframe is ludicrous. In Cotton, this Court held that “an employee
3 injured on the employer’s premises while proceeding to or from work
4 within a reasonable interval before or after work may be entitled to 5 worker’s compensation.” Id., 121 Nev. at 400-401, 116 P.3d at 58-59.
6 The court found that the “injury arose out of and in the course of [Cotton’s]
7 employment” even though it occurred in the employee parking lot outside
8 the MGM about ten minutes before the start of Cotton’s shift. Id., at 57;
9 59.

13           Here, there is an even stronger basis for finding that the injury
14 occurred during the course of employment, as Harrah’s alleged negligence
15 occurred as Baiguen’s shift was starting, in the area where Baiguen
16 commenced his workday. Cotton was cited by Harrah’s in the briefing
17 before the lower court. Baiguen fails to cite (let alone tackle) Cotton in his 18 Opening Brief, pretending that this issue-deciding precedent does not exist.

21           Baiguen also claims that “[w]itness testimony indicates Mr. Baiguen 22 did not clock in that day and documents produced by Harrah’s during the 23 course of the litigation indicate that Mr. Baiguen did not clock in for work
24 at any time on October 19, 2012.” (Opening Brief, p. 11). The “witness 25 testimony” portion of the previous sentence apparently is a reference to 26
27

1 “Mr. Santaren stat[ing that] he did not see Mr. Baiguen clock in at any time
2 on October 19, 2012.” (Opening Brief, p. 11). Mr. Santaren’s testimony
3 was that he saw Baiguen with his badge in his hand to clock-in, but does 4 not know if he actually did. (App. Vol. 1 00073:1-11). This is not an 5 affirmative statement that Mr. Baiguen “did not clock in that day.”

8 Most importantly, there was evidence in the record that Baiguen did
9 clock-in on October 19. Specifically, during the summary judgment
10 briefing in the lower court, Harrahs submitted a Declaration from the 11 Director of Consolidated Payroll Operations stating that Baiguen clocked-
12 in at 4:26 p.m. on that day. Once again, Baiguen chooses to completely
13 ignore a portion of the record that contains inconvenient, indisputable
14 facts.<sup>12</sup>
15
16

17 Finally, Baiguen contends he was not performing any job duties at 18 the time he was injured and that “[n]o testimony or other evidence 19 indicates that Mr. Baiguen ‘started doing the[se] preliminary activities’ to 20 commence his workday as was found by the District Court.” (Opening
21
22

---

23
24 <sup>12</sup> Harrah’s would also note that even if it were true that Baiguen did not 25 clock-in on October 19, this would not mean that he was not acting in the 26 course of his employment when the injury occurred. If clocking-in were 27 the litmus test, then an employee who forgot or deliberately failed to clock-28 in on a particular day and was injured after working two hours would not be covered by worker’s compensation.

1 Brief, p. 11). The undisputed facts are that before Young okayed
2 Santaren’s request to have someone take Baiguen home, he had gotten into 3 the line, and reached, the window where he receives the radio and keys he 4 used to perform his job. (App. Vol. 1 00073:12-14; 00084:16-23).

6 If the employee in Cotton was deemed to be in the course of 7 employment in the parking garage ten minutes before the start of his shift,
8 then Baiguen was clearly acting in the course of employment when he was 9 punched-in and in the Housekeeping Department receiving the items
10 needed to start the workday. The District Court correctly found that 11 undisputed facts established that Baiguen was in the course of his 12 employment when his alleged injuries occurred.

13
15
16 Baiguen’s Alleged Injuries Arose Out Of His Employment

17 “An injury is said to arise out of one’s employment when there is a
18 causal connection between the employee’s injury and the nature of the
19 work or workplace.” Wood, 121 Nev. at 733; 121 P.3d at 1032 (citation 20 omitted).

21
22 [An injury is covered by worker’s compensation
23 when] the origin of the injury is related to some 24 risk involved within the scope of employment 25 . . .

whether the employee’s injury arose out of her employment . . .

The types of risks that an employee may encounter are categorized as those that are solely employment related, those that are purely personal, and those that are neutral . . .

Generally, injuries caused by employment-related risks are deemed to arise out of employment . . .

Personal risks are those that are so clearly personal that, even if they take effect while the employee is on the job, they could not possibly be attributed to the employment . . . For example, a fall caused by the [employee’s] personal condition such as a bad knee, epilepsy or multiple sclerosis is a personal risk. Phillips, 126 Nev. 346, 350-351, 240 P.3d 2, 5 (2010) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

Baiguen contends “his stroke and any subsequent injuries related to his stroke, are ‘personal risks’ not reasonably attributable to his employment with Harrah’s.” (Opening Brief, p. 6). [See, also, Opening Brief, p. 16 (“Mr. Baiguen’s stroke, combined with Defendants’ failure to render aid to him, is a personal risk that is clearly not ‘attributed to the employment’”)].

Harrah’s agrees that based on the facts of this case, Baiguen suffering a stroke on or about October 19, 2012 is a personal risk and not work-related. However, Baiguen does not claim in his suit that the alleged

1 negligence of Harrah’s caused the stroke. Instead, Baiguen seeks to 2 recover because of various alleged negligent acts or omissions of Harrah’s
3 employees, as itemized in Paragraph VIII of the Complaint, such as alleged 4 inadequate training, a lack of effective procedures and a failure to call for 5 medical assistance. (App. Vol. 1 0005 ¶ VIII). As summarized in the 6 Opening Brief: “The injury for which Mr. Baiguen seeks compensation in 7 this case is the loss of chance from recovery of the underlying stroke
8 resulting from the Defendants’ negligence in responding to the obvious
9 signs of stroke exhibited by Israel Baiguen on the afternoon of October 19, 10 2012.” (Opening Brief, pp. 8-9).

11
12 Thus, the alleged negligence for which Baiguen seeks to recover is 13 completely connected to the Harrah’s workplace. This is demonstrated by 14 Dugan. Dugan had a “heart event” at work. Her co-workers tried to call 15 911, but could not do so because the company “had blocked that number in 16 favor of an in-house emergency number.” Id., 912 P.2d at 1325. “Due to 17 the inability to reach [911] . . . , emergency medical assistance was delayed, 18 and Mrs. Dugan suffered prolonged oxygen deprivation . . . resulting in 19 severe, irreversible brain damage.” Id., at 1325. Dugan filed a negligence 20 lawsuit.

1           Similarly, here, Baiguen perhaps exhibited stroke symptoms while
3 in the workplace, he claims there was a delay in receiving medical 4
5 treatment due to decisions made by Harrah’s employees, resulting in
7 severe, irreversible injuries, and he has brought a negligence action.

8           The lower court granted summary judgment to the employer,
10 regarding “Mrs. Dugan’s brain injury as an aggravation of a pre-existing 11
12 physical condition, the damages from which are covered by worker’s
13
14 compensation.” Id., at 1326. The appellate court affirmed, holding:

15                   [T]he parties agree that Mrs. Dugan’s heart event
16
17 is non-compensable because there was no
18
19 employment-related injury, stress or exertion
20
21 which substantially contributed to this episode.
22
23 Nonetheless, even under the plaintiffs’ theory,
24
25 Mrs. Dugan’s brain injury was not an 26
27 uninterrupted consequence of her heart event,
28
[but] . . . caused in whole or in part by an intervening incident – the delay in emergency medical attention caused by [the employer’s] action in blocking [911] access . . .

[T]he delay in emergency medical attention caused by [the employer’s] bar to [911]
telephone access combined with Mrs. Dugan’s non-compensable, pre-existing heart condition to cause, at least in part, her severe brain injury.
This inability to reach emergency assistance through [911] constitutes an ‘accident’ for purposes of [Arizona’s worker’s compensation statute].” Id., at 1328-29.

1 Here, similarly, the parties agree that Baiguen’s stroke itself is not
2 covered by the NIIA. However, Baiguen’s theory of the case is that the 3 long-term effects of the stroke were exacerbated by a delay in receiving 4 medical treatment (or at least the delay denied him the opportunity to 5 receive t-PA, which might have allowed him to avoid or mitigate the long-6 term consequences of the stroke). Thus, as in Dugan, his claim is 7 exclusively covered by worker’s compensation because Baiguen’s present 8 condition (according to him) resulted from a combination of his non-9 compensable, pre-existing condition and the alleged negligent acts or 10 omissions of Harrah’s employees.
11

12 Harrah’s extensively discussed Dugan in the lower court. In another
13 instance of pretending that unfavorable case law does not exist, Baiguen
14 does not even cite this salient case in his Opening Brief, let alone try to 15 distinguish it.

22 The Affirmation Of Summary Judgment Because
23 Baiguen Was Subjected To A Greater Risk

25 Baiguen claims the District Court committed reversible error by 26 failing to consider and apply the “increased risk” test enunciated in 27

1 Phillips. (See, e.g., Opening Brief, p. 18).<sup>13</sup> As demonstrated below, the 2 increased risk test is inapplicable to this case, and even if it was, would not
3 warrant the reversal of summary judgment.

5 Citing Phillips, Baiguen claims: “The determination of whether an 6 injury ‘arose out of employment’ is made by the application of the 7 ‘increased risk test.’” (Opening Brief, p. 8). This is a misstatement of the 8 law and Phillips’ holding.

10 As stated above, “determining the type of risk faced by the 11 employee is an important first step in analyzing whether the employee’s 12 injury arose out of her employment,” with risks being categorized as “those 13 that are solely employment related, those that are purely personal, and 14 those that are neutral.” Phillips, 126 Nev. 346 at 350-351, 240 P.3d at 5.
15 In Phillips, this Court “adopt[ed] the increased-risk test to determine 16 whether an injury resulting from a neutral risk is compensable.” Id., 126
17 Nev. 346 at 353, 240 P.2d at 6 (emphasis added). The increased risk test

25 <sup>13</sup> While the test is now an integral part of Baiguen’s position on appeal, he 26 did not mention the test or cite Phillips in his summary judgment
27 opposition, raising the matter for the first time at oral argument. (App.
28 Vol. 2 00212:20-23).

1 does not apply in this case because, for the reasons set forth above, the 2 risks faced by Baiguen were employment-related, not neutral.<sup>14</sup>

4 Even if, hypothetically, the risks involved in this case were neutral
5 such that the increased risk test applied, under the test, worker’s
6 compensation applies if the employee “is subjected ‘to a risk greater than 7 that to which the general public [is] exposed.’” Phillips, 126 Nev. 346 at 8 353, 240 P.3d at 7 (citation omitted). The general public typically has no
9 authorized access to the “back of the house” areas such as the employee
10 parking garage and the Housekeeping Office (where Baiguen performed 11 activities upon arrival at work). Baiguen was in these areas when he 12 supposedly exhibited his stroke symptoms and purportedly needed medical 13 assistance. To the extent there was a risk that his co-workers would not 14 recognize the symptoms of a stroke and/or not know to promptly summon 15 medical attention in response thereto, Baiguen faced a greater risk in these 16 areas than members of the general public.
17

23 <sup>14</sup>As noted in the previous section, Baiguen repeatedly takes the position 24 that his injuries did not arise out of his employment because the risks were 25 “personal” in nature. While this is inaccurate for the reasons set forth 26 above, if the risks were, in fact, “personal” – as opposed to “neutral” – then 27 the increased risk test would not apply at all. Phillips, 126 Nev. 346 at 28 353, 240 P.3d at 6.

5                    Even if Baiguen’s negligence claim is not preempted by worker’s 6                    compensation (which it is), such a claim requires causation, which consists 7                    of both actual cause and proximate cause. Dow Chemical Company v.
8                    Mahlum, 114 Nev. 1468, 1481, 970 P.2d 98, 107 (1998), overruled in part
9                    on other grounds by 117 Nev. 265, 21 P.3d 11. Actual causation requires 10                    Baiguen to “show that but for [Harrah’s] negligence, his . . . injuries would 11                    not have occurred.” Sims v. General Telephone & Electronics, 107 Nev.
12                    516, 524, 815 P.2d 151, 156 (1991) (citation omitted), overruled on other 13                    grounds by 113 Nev. 1349, 951 P.2d 1027.

14                    Baiguen claims his “stroke was proximately and/or legally caused 15                    by, or worsened by, or the chances of avoiding or mitigating or treating 16                    [the] same were significantly decreased by, the delay in diagnosis and 17                    treatment caused by Defendants.” (See, App. Vol. 0003 ¶ VI). Dr.
18                    Shprecher testified that if t-PA had been administered, on average, it 19                    improves by 30% the chances that the patient will recover to a level of 20                    minimal or no disability. However, there was no guarantee that Baiguen’s
21                    personal situation would have fallen into this 30%. In fact, there was a 22                   
23                   
24                   
25                   
26                   
27                   
28

1 possibility that the administration of t-PA could have resulted in Baiguen's
2 death.

4 Moreover, a number of things had to happen for Baiguen to even 5 have been administered t-PA, and whether these would have all occurred is 6 a matter of speculation. First, with a diabetic patient like Baiguen, t-PA
7 must be administered within three hours of the onset of stroke symptoms.
8 While Baiguen would like everyone to believe the symptoms started one 9 minute before Santaren saw him between the estimated time of 4:10 or 10 4:15 p.m., this is uncertain. It is possible the symptoms started before
11 Baiguen left his apartment or while driving.<sup>15</sup> Even if the symptoms
12 started only after Baiguen got to the parking garage, given that Bradley
13 saw Baiguen get into his car about 3:30 p.m. and the drive between 14 Baiguen's apartment and Harrah's is only 1.40 miles, Baiguen could have 15 started experiencing the symptoms in the garage by 3:40 or 3:45 p.m. and 16 remained in his vehicle for a period of time before going to the employee
17 congregation area.
18
19
20
21

22 Once Baiguen got in the Housekeeping Department area and came 23 in contact with supervisors close to 4:30 p.m., even if an almost immediate 24

26 <sup>15</sup> Dr, Shprecher testified that while uncommon, it is possible Baiguen
27 could have driven to work while experiencing the initial symptoms of a 28 stroke. (App. Vol. 1 00125:15-21; 00126:22-24).

1 decision was made to call 911, it would have taken emergency providers
2 time to arrive at the hotel, assess the situation and, if appropriate, take 3 Baiguen to an emergency room. Once at the emergency room, on average,
4 only about 50% of patients are administered t-PA within the first hour of 5 arrival, and under no scenario is it likely that t-PA would have been 6 administered within 40 minutes of arrival. t-PA would likely not have 7 been administered if there was a lack of certainty as to the onset time of the 8 stroke symptoms, which would have required contact with Bradley, the last
9 known person to see him when he appeared to be “normal.” It is unknown
10 if hospital employees would have been able to elicit that Bradley was the 11 appropriate person to call, had her contact information and been able to 12 reach her on the first attempt.

17 Again, it is speculative whether everything would have aligned such 18 that Baiguen would have been a candidate to receive t-PA, which might or 19 might not have made a difference, if it did not make the situation worse, up 20 to and including killing Baiguen. It cannot be established that but for 21 Harrah’s failure to call 911 or otherwise get Baiguen to the hospital,
22 Baiguen would have been given t-PA and returned to, or close to, his pre-

8 <sup>16</sup> Baiguen claims he is entitled to the benefit of the “loss of chance”
9 doctrine. (Opening Brief, pp. 6; 9). This doctrine provides that the “injury 10 to be redressed by the law . . . [is] the decreased chance of survival [or 11 avoiding a debilitating injury or illness] caused by the medical 12 malpractice.” Perez v. Las Vegas Medical Center, 107 Nev. 1, 6, 805 P.2d 13 589, 592 (1991) (citation omitted) (emphasis added). The purpose of the 14 doctrine is to avoid barring recovery, “no matter how blatant the health 15 care provider’s negligence” in situations where the person at issue may 16 have died or suffered serious injury or illness notwithstanding the 17 negligence. Id., 107 Nev. at 5, 805 P.2d at 591 (emphasis added).

18 Since the loss of chance doctrine was adopted by Perez in 1991, it appears
19 there have only been a limited number of Nevada Supreme Court cases 20 which have subsequently cited it in relation to the doctrine, all of these 21 involving medical malpractice. There is no indication the doctrine would 22 be applied to the alleged negligence of an employer.

23 Moreover, even if the doctrine were deemed applicable, “in order to create 24 a question of fact regarding causation . . ., the plaintiff must present 25 evidence tending to show, to a reasonable medical probability, that some 26 negligent act or omission . . . reduced a substantial chance of survival 27 given appropriate medical care.” Perez, 107 Nev. at 6, 805 P.2d at 592. In 28 Perez, summary judgment was avoided because a doctor testified the decedent “had a reasonable chance of survival given proper medical attention.” Id., 107 Nev. at 7, 805 P.2d at 592. Dr. Shprecher did not report or testify that Baiguen would have definitely or even likely benefitted from being given t-PA. He did not even testify that Baiguen personally would have had a 30% chance of recovery to his pre-stroke state if he had been administered t-PA. As stated above, Dr. Shprecher’s report merely talks in terms of statistics without taking into consideration the circumstances applicable to Baiguen.
