No. 74227

RESPONDENT'S ANSWER TO PETITION FOR EXTRAORDINARY RELIEF

As directed by an Order dated January 22, 2018, respondent State of Nevada, by and through the Washoe County District Attorney, answers and generally denies each and every material allegation of fact included within the "Petition for Extraordinary Relief Writ" filed by petitioner Voss. The unstructured narrative nature of the petition, intermingling assertions of fact with propositions of law, precludes a more specific answer.

As directed, the undersigned has reviewed the record and informs this Court that the Findings of Fact appended to the petition seem to be a true and correct copy. The undersigned further informs this Court that before there could be a new sentencing hearing as ordered by the district court in 2001, Voss appealed the judgment of the district court. The Supreme Court rejected the arguments presented by Voss and Affirmed the judgment of the district court. Voss v. State, Docket No. 38373, Order of Affirmance (January 17, 2002). To date, the new sentencing hearing that was ordered in 2001 has not occurred.

After Voss appealed and thereby prevented the new sentencing hearing, he began a lengthy series of attacks on his conviction. As indicated in the district court docket records (See Exhibit A), he has filed approximately nine separate collateral attacks on this instant conviction in the district court and in the Supreme Court. He has been similarly prolific in case No. CR97-2077, the murder conviction. Not once has he sought to get that new sentencing hearing that was ordered by the district court in 2001.

Now, Voss has filed some sort of petition in this court, seeking some sort of writ, directed to someone, commanding someone to do something that would wholly avoid the conviction in the instant case due to the delay in re-sentencing. Because he makes no sense is reason enough to deny the petition. Taken literally, he asks only that this Court compel the Supreme Court to vacate the Order of Affirmance in docket No. 38373, and order a remand, and order that the conviction be vacated entirely, even though it was he that appealed and divested the trial court of jurisdiction and he never sought an order of remand in that appeal. The State suggests that this Court should deny the petition for several reasons, including the fact that Voss has improperly invoked the jurisdiction of this Court, seeking a non-existent remedy. The proper course would have been to seek relief in the district court in the first instance. The remedy that he seeks, vacating the conviction entirely, is not available and is supported by no law. The other potential remedy, a new sentencing hearing, ought not to be ordered by this Court.

The State asserts Laches as a defense. In fact, the State asserts that the defense is made out on the face of the petition as Voss claims that he does not want a new sentencing hearing due to the passage of time, but instead seeks an order directing the district court to vacate the judgment of conviction. The State agrees that the passage of time in which Voss has repeatedly sought other forms of relief tends to make a new sentencing hearing impractical. Indeed, one of the effects is that time has proven that the comments of the sentencing judge, indicating a belief that Voss had killed the victim of the crime in CR96-1581A, have been proven true.

Because Voss murdered that victim, Beverly Baxter, she is no longer available to give evidence at a new sentencing hearing.

Laches is available as a defense to a writ petition, or at least it would be if Voss had identified what sort of writ he wanted. See State v. District Court, 116 Nev. 127, 994 P.2d 692 (2000). One of the issues is whether there has been inexcusable delay in seeking the writ. Id. Here, it has been 17 years and Voss has never showed any interest in getting that new sentencing hearing. What may have changed is that he now thinks (incorrectly) that if he can completely vacate the conviction, he can then use that as a new basis for attacking his murder conviction. That may also be why he seeks only to vacate the conviction and not to get an actual sentencing hearing.

Another factor in laches is whether there is an implied waiver from acquiescence in the conditions. Id. Again, Voss was aware of what relief he sought and what remedy was ordered in the 2001 post-conviction action. He was present in court when the court announced that there would be a new sentencing hearing but he has never made any effort to actually get the hearing. Finally, prejudice is a factor. As noted above, the victim in the burglary/forgery case is not available to give victim impact testimony because Voss murdered her. Other potential sentencing witnesses, such as police officers, have retired and are not readily available.

The State also contends that the district court should not have ordered the new sentencing hearing in 2001. First, the claim itself was barred as it could have been raised on direct appeal. See NRS 34.810. We now know that those procedural bars are mandatory. State v. District Court (Riker), 121 Nev. 225, 112 P.3d 1070 (2005). Furthermore, the claim was based on the incorrect assumption that a sentencing court may only consider conduct for which a defendant has already been convicted. That is an incorrect assumption of law. See Riker v. State, 111 Nev. 1316, 1326–27, 905 P.2d 706, 712–13 (1995). Finally, the district court ignored the correct standard, announced by the courts so many times, that the reviewing courts should reverse a sentence only if it is supported solely by impalpable and highly suspect evidence. Renard v. State, 94 Nev. 368, 369, 580 P.2d 470, 471 (1978); Silks v. State, 92 Nev. 91, 545 P.2d 1159 (1976).

The State acknowledges that it did not cross-appeal in 2001, but would point out that the ruling in Riker, supra, to the effect that the procedural bars are mandatory, did not exist at the time of the district court's ruling in this case. Furthermore, this Court may now consider those errors in the 2001 proceeding because extraordinary relief is never mandatory and is always discretionary, and a writ by this Court would be giving effect to an order that should never have issued in the first place.

That seems contrary to general principles of equity. Because the 2001

Order granting partial relief was wrongly decided, this Court should not exercise its discretion and should not issue a writ to compound the error by Judge Elliott.

Another reason why this Court should decline to issue whatever sort of writ Voss wants, is that he had a plain, speedy and adequate remedy at law. Among them, he could have asked for remand for the new sentencing hearing in the appeal from the order that now interests him. He could have sought the remedy in the district court at any time in the last 17 years. Even now, he could have sought a ruling in the district court but failed to do so, choosing to invoke the original jurisdiction of the appellate court without first asking the district court for the appropriate relief. The State would mention that NRS 34.724 provides that the post-conviction habeas corpus petition comprehends and takes the place of all other common law, statutory or other remedies which have been available to challenge a conviction, and must be used in place of them. For many years now, Voss has been continually ignoring that law, and making up weird pleadings, and /// the courts have let him do so. It is time to stop and require Voss to follow the procedural laws set out by the legislature. Those laws do not include invoking the original jurisdiction of the appellate court to require a remedy that would be unlawful it he had sought it in properly in the district court.

This Court should recognize the defense of laches, and should recognize that a writ to give effect to an order of the district court that was itself incorrect would simply compound the error. Therefore, the "Petition for Extraordinary Relief Writ" should be denied.
