STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This is a workers' compensation case. On March 7, 2015, the Respondent, DAVID FIGUEROA (hereinafter "Respondent") was involved in a motor vehicle accident while driving his personal motorcycle on his commute home from work. The evidence showed that Respondent's sergeant had given Respondent and a co-officer (Tyler McMeans) an "early out" for their shift and that Respondent's accident happened at 12:25 a.m., i.e. five (5) minutes before his shift technically ended at 12:30 a.m. At the time of the accident, Respondent was driving his personal vehicle, wearing civilian clothes, and although he was carrying service items with him such as his department issued radio, duty weapon, handcuffs, and badge, it was undisputed that Employer LAS VEGAS METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT (hereinafter "Employer") did not require that Respondent have any of those items with him.

Employer's workers' compensation Administrator CANNON COCHRAN MANAGEMENT SERVICES, INC. (hereinafter "Administrator") denied this claim as Respondent was not performing work at the time of his accident and his injuries were not related to his employment. Respondent appealed and transferred this matter directly to the Appeals Office.

1 On May 10, 2017, this matter came on for hearing before the Appeals
2 Officer. Respondent and Employer's Director of Risk Management, Jeff Roch
3 (hereinafter "Mr. Roch"), gave testimony.

5 On July 25, 2018, after hearing testimony and receiving written closing
6 arguments from both parties, the Appeals Officer affirmed claim denial, finding 7 that Respondent had not satisfied his burden to prove that he was injured within the 8 course and scope of his employment.

10 Respondent filed this Petition for Judicial Review, contesting the Appeals
11 Officer's July 25, 2018 Decision and Order.
12

13 On April 30, 2019, the District Court issued an Order Reversing the Appeals
14 Officer's Decision and Order. The Court determined that the Appeals Officer's 15 Decision was affected by error of law and contained clearly erroneous facts.
16

17 Appellants filed a Motion for Stay and Request for Reconsideration. The 18 District Court denied both stating that it had not misapprehended the Appeals
19 Officer's Order.
20

21 Appellants timely filed an appeal to this Honorable Court and sought a stay
22 of the District Court's Order, which this Court denied.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

This case presents a challenge to the “law enforcement” exception to the going and coming rule that was adopted in Tighe v. Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Dept., 110 Nev. 632, 877 P.2d. 1032 (1994). Under that exception, this Court reasoned that “police officers are generally charged with a duty of law enforcement while traveling on public thoroughfares” and therefore injuries sustained on the commute “may be compensated.” (Id.) However, this Court also made it clear that the law enforcement exception “is not sufficiently broad and all-inclusive to justify the conclusion that all law enforcement officers are always excluded from the general rule that injuries sustained while traveling to or from work do not arise out of and in the course of employment.”(Emphasis in original)(Id.)

The Appeals Officer in this case properly concluded that Respondent had failed to prove that Employer had a necessary amount of control over him sufficient to establish that Respondent’s injuries were sustained due to the performance of job duties. Indeed, the Appeals Officer concluded that Respondent was discharging his duties as a police officer at the time of the injury. However, the District Court disagreed, finding in principle that Respondent was necessarily discharging his duties as a police officer as “there is no question the Appellant was

1 on the clock at the time of the accident and, therefore, under the control of
2 LVMPD unlike an off-duty officer returning home.”

4 The District Court erred in three respects. First, the ultimate determination in 5 this case was fact based and therefore within the purview of the Appeals Officer.
6 The Appeals Officer’s Decision was supported by substantial evidence and 7 therefore entitled to deference. Second, the District Court explicitly concluded that 8 being on the clock was sufficient to render this claim compensable, a position that 9 this Court has refuted numerous times over. Third, the import of the District
10 Court’s decision is that it would allow the “law enforcement” exception to swallow
11 entirety of the going and coming rule as, according to Respondent, he could always 12 be called back to work. If the fact that police officers can always be called into 13 service were dispositive, there would be no need for an “exception” to the rule as 14 police officers would always be covered by workers’ compensation for all injuries
15 ever sustained because they are technically always subject to being called into 16 service. That is not the purpose of workers’ compensation coverage. The District
17 Court’s Decision effectively transforms coverage for injuries sustained within the 18 course and scope of employment into coverage for injuries sustained by police
19 officers whenever and wherever they may go, no matter the activity. This is 20 contrary to the entire grand bargain of workers’ compensation. The District Court
21
22
23
24
25
26
27

1 erred and the Appeals Officer's Decision should be affirmed as being supported by 2 substantial evidence.

5 STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES FOR REVIEW

7 1. WHETHER AN APPEALS OFFICER IS ENTITLED TO DEFERENCE
8 IN DETERMINING WHETHER AN EMPLOYER EXERCISED A 9 SUFFICIENT AMOUNT OF CONTROL OVER AN EMPLOYEE TO 10 RENDER A CLAIM COMPENSABLE?
11
12 2. WHETHER AN INJURY SUSTAINED BY A POLICE OFFICER
13 WHILE ON HIS COMMUTE HOME IS COMPENSABLE UNDER 14 THE LAWS GOVERNING WORKERS' COMPENSATION
15 INSURANCE BY VIRTUE OF THE FACT THAT THE OFFICER
16 WAS STILL TECHNICALLY "ON THE CLOCK" FOR FIVE (5)
17 MORE MINUTES AT THE TIME OF HIS ACCIDENT?

18 19 III.

20 FACTS NECESSARY TO UNDERSTAND ISSUE PRESENTED

21 This is a workers' compensation case. The Respondent has multiple prior 22 industrial claims. In the instant matter, on March 7, 2015, according to the C-4
23 form, the Respondent was "driving" and was in an "MVA." (Appellants'
24 Appendix p. 12.)(hereinafter "APP p. ____")

25 The Employer completed its C-3 form upon receiving the C-4 form. (APP p.
26 13.)
27

1 An Injury Report was also completed on March 7, 2015. This report
2 indicated the Respondent was not in the normal course of his work or duties as a
3 police officer at the time of the incident. (APP p. 14.)

5 The Respondent was notified on April 9, 2015 that his claim was being
6 denied. (APP pp. 15-16.)

8 The Respondent appealed the determination letter of April 9, 2015, 9 regarding claim denial, to the Hearing Officer. (APP p. 17.) This appeal was 10 transferred directly to the Appeals Office. (APP p. 18.)
11

12 This matter came on for hearing before the Appeals Officer on May 10,
13 2017. Respondent and Employer's Director of Risk Management, Jeff Roch
14 (hereinafter "Mr. Roch"), gave testimony. (APP pp. 151-226)
15

16 On July 25, 2018, the Appeals Officer for Appeal Number 1511793-MM
17 issued the subject Decision and Order. The Appeals Officer noted that, on the day 18 of the subject incident, Respondent had been released early from his shift. The 19 Appeals Officer also noted that Respondent testified that his sergeant told him to 20 leave early to get some "seat time" on Respondent's personal motorcycle and that 21 Respondent was involved in the subject accident at 12:25 a.m. on his commute
22 home while he was still technically on the clock. The Appeals Officer also found 23 that Respondent's co-worker, Tyler McMeans, was also released early.
26
27

1 The Appeals Officer made three salient determinations based the above
2 referenced facts. The Appeals Officer concluded that Tyler McMeans had not been 3 released early for Respondent to get some seat time. Further, the Appeals Officer
4 also concluded that Respondent's commute home on the day in question was no
5 different than any other day. Finally, the Appeals Officer concluded that there was 6 no evidence that Respondent's sergeant explicitly required Respondent to "get 7 some seat time" as a condition of his employment. Further, it should also be noted
8 that the Appeals Officer included a discussion in the Decision as to how simply 9 being on the clock does not render this claim compensable. (APP pp. 227-239)

12
13 On August 21, 2018, Respondent filed the subject Petition for Judicial 14 Review. (APP p. 560-576)

15
16 On March 26, 2019, after the parties had presented to Department 18 for 17 hearing, the judge called a bench conference, informed that he had not read the 18 briefing, and the hearing was rescheduled for April 23, 2019. (APP p. 654)

19
20 On April 23, 2019, counsel for Appellant had a conflict and could not attend
21 the hearing that had been reschedule after the bench conference and sent an e-mail
22 to the law clerk for Department 18 and requested a continuance. The District Court
23 chose to set this matter for an in chambers decision. (APP p. 655)

24
25 On April 30, 2019, the District Court issued an Order Reversing the Appeals
26 Officer's Decision and Order. (APP pp. 656-663) That Court determined that the 27

1 Appeals Officer's Decision was affected by error of law and contained clearly
2 erroneous facts. The Court found four errors. First, the Court determined that the 3 Appeals Officer had omitted the fact that Respondent was still on the clock
4 because it was not discussed in the Findings of Fact section. Second, the Court also 5 determined that the Appeals Officer had omitted the fact that Respondent was 6 given an "early out" to "get some additional practice riding a motorcycle, as he 7 called it 'seat time.'"

10 Third, the Court concluded the Appeals Officer committed an error of fact in 11 finding that Respondent Employer received no benefit from Respondent being on 12 the road at the time of incident. The Court concluded that Respondent Employer
13 did receive a benefit because Respondent was on the clock, could have been called 14 back, was ordered to get some "seat time," and Respondent was still subject to 15 Employer's rules and regulations. Therefore, the Employer did receive a benefit.
16 Finally, the Court concluded that it was dispositive that Appellant "had his radio
17 and the general duty of law enforcement while traveling public thoroughfares
18 under Tighe."

22 Appellants filed a Motion for Stay and Request for Reconsideration. (APP
23 pp. 676-695) The District Court denied both stating that it had not misapprehended
24 the Appeals Officer's Order. (APP pp. 745-754)

1 Appellants timely filed an appeal to this Honorable Court and sought a stay
2 of the District Court's Order, which This Court denied.

4 IV.

5 JURISDICTION

6 Respondent timely appealed this Petition for Judicial Review of the Appeals
7 Officer's Decision dated July 25, 2018. NRS 233B.130. Said Petition was timely
8 filed with the District Court on August 21, 2018. On April 30, 2019, the Notice of 9 Entry of Order of the District Court's Decision and Order reversing the Appeals
10 Officer's Decision was filed. Appellants timely and properly filed an appeal of that 11 Decision and Order with this Honorable Court on May 30, 2019. See NRS
12 233B.150; NRAP Rule 3; NRAP Rule 4. This Court has jurisdiction over the 13 instant appeal.

14
15
16
17 A. Routing Statement

18 Under NRAP 17(b)(10), this case would be presumptively assigned to the 19 Court of Appeals as it concerns a Petition for Judicial Review of an administrative 20 agency's final decision. However, under NRAP 17(a)(11) and (12), the Supreme 21 Court would be justified in retaining jurisdiction over this case as this case deals
22 directly with the application of Tighe v. Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Dept., 110
23 Nev. 632, 877 P.2d. 1032 (1994). The District Court improperly extended the 24 decision in Tighe to effectively encompass all police officers at all times.
25
26
27

1 B. Standard Of Review

2 Judicial review of a final decision of an agency is governed by NRS
4 233B.135.

5 NRS 233B.135 Judicial review: Manner of 6 conducting; burden of; standard for review.

7 1. Judicial review of a final decision of an agency
8 must be:

- 9 (a) Conducted by the court without a jury; and 10 (b) Confined to the record.

11 In cases concerning alleged irregularities in procedure
12 before an agency that are not shown in the record, the 13 court may receive evidence concerning the irregularities.

14 2. The final decision of the agency shall be 15 deemed reasonable and lawful until reversed or set aside
16 in whole or in part by the court. The burden of proof is on 17 the party attacking or resisting the decision to show that 18 the final decision is invalid pursuant to subsection 3.

19 3. The court shall not substitute its judgment for 20 that of the agency as to the weight of evidence on a
21 question of fact. The court may remand or affirm the final
22 decision or set it aside in whole or in part if substantial 23 rights of the petitioner have been prejudiced because the 24 final decision of the agency is:

25 (a) In violation of constitutional or statutory 26 provisions;

27 (b) In excess of the statutory authority of the agency;

(c) Made upon unlawful procedure;

(d) Affected by other error of law;

(e) Clearly erroneous in view of the reliable,
probative and substantial evidence on the whole record;
or

(f) Arbitrary or capricious or characterized by abuse of discretion.

26 The standard of review is whether there is substantial evidence to support 27

1 the underlying decision. The reviewing court should limit its review of 2 administrative decisions to determine if they are based upon substantial evidence.
4 North Las Vegas v. Public Service Comm'n., 83 Nev. 278, 291, 429 P.2d 66
5 (1967); McCracken v. Fancy, 98 Nev. 30, 639 P.2d 552 (1982). Substantial 6 evidence is that quantity and quality of evidence which a reasonable man would
8 accept as adequate to support a conclusion. See, Maxwell v. SIIS, 109 Nev. 327, 9 331, 849 P.2d 267, 270 (1993); and Horne v. SIIS, 113 Nev. 532, 537, 936 P.2d 10 839 (1997).

11
12 When reviewing administrative court decisions, the Court has held that, on 13 factual determinations, the findings and ultimate decisions of an appeals officer are 14 not to be disturbed unless they are clearly erroneous or otherwise amount to an 15 abuse of discretion. Nevada Industrial Comm'n. v. Reese, 93 Nev. 115, 560 P.2d
16 1352 (1977). An administrative determination regarding a question of fact will not 17 be set aside unless it is against the manifest weight of the evidence. Nevada Indus.
18 Comm'n. v. Hildebrand, 100 Nev. 47, 51, 675 P.2d 401 (1984). A decision by an 19 appeals officer that is based upon the credibility of Respondent and other witnesses
20 is "not open to appellate review." Brocas v. Mirage Hotel & Casino, 109 Nev.
21 579, 585, 854 P.2d 862, 867 (1993).

22
23 In determining whether an administrative decision is supported by 24 substantial evidence, the methodology of the District Court is also well-defined.
25
26
27

1 First, for each issue appealed, the pertinent rule of law is identified. Thereafter, the 2 Record on Appeal is reviewed to determine whether the agency's decision on each
3 issue is supported by substantial factual evidence. State Dep't of Motor Vehicles
4 v. Torres, 105 Nev. 558, 560, 799 P.2d 959, 960-961 (1989).

6 If the decision of the administrative agency on the appealed issue is 7 supported by substantial factual evidence in the Record on Appeal, the District
8 Court must affirm the decision of the agency as to that issue. On the other hand, a 9 decision by an administrative agency that lacks support in the form of substantial
10 evidence is arbitrary or capricious and, thus, an abuse of discretion that warrants
11 reversal. NRS 233B.135(3); Titanium Metals Corp. v. Clark County, 99 Nev.
12 397, 399, 663 P.2d 355, 357 (1983).

15 Substantial evidence has been defined as that quantity and quality of 16 evidence which a reasonable man could accept as adequate to support a conclusion.
17 State Emp't Sec. Dep't v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 102 Nev. 606, 608 at n.1, 729 P.2d
18 497 (1986). Additionally, substantial evidence is not to be considered in isolation
19 from opposing evidence, but evidence that survives whatever in the record fairly 20 detracts from its weight. Universal Camera Corp. v. NLRB, 340 U.S. 474, 477,
21 488 (1951); Container Stevedoring Co. v. Director, OWCP, 935 F.2d 1544, 1546
22 (9th Cir. 1991). This latter point is clearly the significance of the requirement in 23

26
27

1 NRS 233B.135(3)(e) which states that the reviewing court consider the whole
2 record.

4 Further, this Court “[does] not give any deference to the district court
5 decision when reviewing an order regarding a petition for judicial review.” City of 6 Reno v. Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council of N. Nev., 127 Nev. 114, 119, 251 P.3d
7 718, 721 (2011)).

9 While the Court is not required to give deference to pure legal questions
10 determined by the agency, those conclusions of the agency which are “closely 11 related to the agency’s view of the facts, are entitled to deference, and will not be 12 disturbed if they are supported by substantial evidence.” Jones v. Rosner, 102
13 Nev. 215, 217, 719 P.2d 805, 806 (1986)..

15 In this case, the Appeals Officer’s decision is supported by substantial 16 evidence. As such, the District Court erred in reversing the same. This Honorable 17 Court retains review of the instant Petition for Judicial Review.

21 LEGAL ARGUMENT

22 A. Standard At The Appeals Officer Level

23
24 It was the Respondent, not Appellants, who had the burden of proving 25 entitlement to any benefits under any accepted industrial insurance claim by a 26 preponderance of all the evidence. State Industrial Insurance System v. Hicks, 100
27

1 Nev. 567, 688 P.2d 324 (1984); Johnson v. State ex rel. Wyoming Worker's
2 Compensation Div., 798 P.2d 323 (1990); Hagler v. Micron Technology, Inc., 118
3 Idaho 596, 798 P.2d 55 (1990).

5 In attempting to prove his case, the Respondent has the burden of going
6 beyond speculation and conjecture. That means that the Respondent must establish 7 all facets of the claim by a preponderance of all the evidence. To prevail, a 8 claimant must present and prove more evidence than an amount which would make 9 his case and his opponent's "evenly balanced." Maxwell v. SIIS, Id.; SIIS v.
10 Khweiss, 108 Nev. 123, 825 P.2d 218 (1992); SIIS v. Kelly, 99 Nev. 774, 671 P.2d
11 29 (1983); 3, A. Larson, the Law of Workmen's Compensation, § 80.33(a).

14 NRS 616A.010(2) makes it clear that:

16 A claim for compensation filed pursuant to the provisions
17 of chapters 616A to 616D, inclusive, or chapter 617 of 18 NRS must be decided on its merit and not according to 19 the principle of common law that requires statutes
20 governing workers' compensation to be liberally
21 construed because they are remedial in nature.

22 B. The Standard of Review For This Court is Substantial Evidence

23 The issue in this case is whether the Appeals Officer properly affirmed the 24 denial of this claim. Specifically, given that this injury happened while the 25 Respondent was on his commute home, the Appeals Officer was charged with 26 determining whether the Employer had sufficient control over the Respondent to 27 render this claim compensable. This was a fact sensitive determination requiring

1 the Appeals Officer to weigh the testimony of multiple witnesses and other
2 evidence. The standard for review is substantial evidence. (“[The appeals officer’s]
3 decision is based on the conclusion of the appeals officer that appellant was not
4 acting within the course and scope of his employment at the time of his accident.
5 This conclusion was supported by substantial evidence in the form of appellant’s
6 testimony. Under appellant’s own version of the facts, the appeals officer could 7 have reasonably concluded that this case does not fall under any exception to the 8 coming and going rule.”Schepcoff v. State Indus. Ins. Sys., 109 Nev. 322, 325-26, 9 849 P.2d 271, 274 (1993)(This Court “[does] not give any deference to the district
10 court decision when reviewing an order regarding a petition for judicial review.”
11 City of Reno v. Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council of N. Nev., 127 Nev. 114, 119, 12 251 P.3d 718, 721 (2011)).

13
14 As will be demonstrated below, the Appeals Officer’s Decision and Order 15 was based on substantial evidence and a proper application of the law. The 16 Appeals Officer concluded that the Respondent’s injuries did not arise out of and 17 in the course and scope of his employment. That is a fact based finding and the 18 substantial evidence supports the same.

19 C. Definition of Course and Scope of Employment

20 Under NRS 616C.150(1), the Respondent has the burden of proof to show
21 that the injury arose out of and in the course and scope of his employment. The 22

1 Respondent must satisfy this burden by a preponderance of the evidence. Further,
2 NRS 616B.612 mandates that an employee is only entitled to compensation if he is
3 injured in the course and scope of his employment. Here, the Respondent was not
4 in the course and scope of his employment when the subject accident occurred
5 while Respondent was on his commute home while driving his personal 6 motorcycle.

9 NRS 616A.030 defines an accident as “. . . an unexpected or unforeseen 10 event happening suddenly and violently, with or without human fault, and 11 producing at the time objective symptoms of an injury.” Furthermore, NRS 12 616A.265 defines an injury as “. . . a sudden and tangible happening of a traumatic 13 nature, producing an immediate or prompt result which is established by medical 14 evidence . . .”
15
16

17 This Court has held that:

18 An award of compensation cannot be based solely upon
19 possibilities and speculative testimony. A testifying
20 physician must state to a degree of reasonable medical 21 probability that the condition in question was caused by 22 the industrial injury...

23 United Exposition Services Co. v. SIIS, 109 Nev. 421, 851 P.2d 423 (1993).

24 This holding has been affirmed and bolstered in the Horne v. SIIS, 113 Nev.
25 532, 936 P.2d 839 (1997) case, which held that “mere speculation and belief does 26 not rise to the level of reasonable medical certainty.”
27

1 Further, this Court has held that:

2 An accident or injury is said to arise out of employment
3 when there is a causal connection between the injury and 4 the employee's work ... the injured party must establish a 5 link between the workplace conditions and how those 6 conditions caused the injury ... a Respondent must 7 demonstrate that the origin of the injury is related to 8 some risk involved within the scope of employment.

8 Rio Suite Hotel v. Gorsky, 113 Nev. 600, 939 P.2d 1043(1997).

9 The same Court further stated that the "Nevada Industrial Insurance Act is 10 not a mechanism which makes Employers absolutely liable for injuries suffered by 11 employees who are on the job." (Id.).

13 Here, the accident in question occurred while Respondent was on his 14 commute home while driving his personal motor cycle. (ROA pp. 23:6-24:21)
15 Respondent was wearing civilian clothes and although he was carrying service
16 items such as his department issued radio, duty weapon, handcuffs, and badge
17 (ROA p. 34:8-36:2), Employer did not require that Respondent have any of those 18 items with him. Mr. Roch testified that Respondent could have those items on his 19 person if he wanted, but he was not required to have them. (ROA pp. 56:17-57:18)
20 Further, Respondent testified that it was merely his own personal habit to take 21 those items with him. ("My radio I have an option to leave it in my locker if so 22 be.") In short, there is substantial evidence showing that Respondent was not
23
25
26
27

1 acting within the course and scope of his employment at the time of the accident
2 and was simply driving home just as he would on any other day.

4 Indeed, the Appeals Officer weighed all of the facts and found that 5 Respondent was not acting within the course and scope of his employment at the 6 time of the injury. Put simply, there is no "causal connection between the injury
7 and the employee's work." Gorsky, Id.

9 D. The Going and Coming Rule

10 The case at bar presents a going and coming rule scenario given that 11 Respondent was not performing any work for the Employer and was on his 12 commute home at the time of the accident. As a general rule, the going and coming
13 rule provides that employers are not liable for injuries sustained by employees
14 while commuting to and from work. Tighe v. Las Vegas Metropolitan Police 15 Dept., 110 Nev. 632, 877 P.2d. 1032 (1994). The reason for the rule is inherent in 16 the grand bargain that is the workers' compensation system: when an employee is 17 under the control of his/her employer, injuries sustained within the course and 18 scope of employment are covered by workers' compensation insurance to avoid the 19 monetary and human expense of litigation by either party. Indeed, as this Court has 20 stated:
21
22
23
24

25 Nevada looks to whether the employee is in the 26 employer's control in order to determine whether an 27 employee is acting within the scope of employment when an accident occurs outside of the actual period of

1 employment or off the employer's premises. Thus, we
2 have embraced a "going and coming" rule, precluding
3 compensation for most employee injuries that occur
4 during travel to or from work. This rule frees employers
5 from liability for the dangers employees encounter in 6 daily life.

7 MGM Mirage v. Cotton, 121 Nev. 396, 399-400, 116 P.3d 56, 58 (2005)

8 However, as this Court well knows, when dealing with travel to and from 9 work, "daily life" and "the employee's work" are often intertwined. Therefore, this 10 Court has recognized several exceptions to the going and coming rule which 11 allows for the rule to more accurately comport with the realities of the 12 employee/employer relationship. As noted above in the citation from Cotton, the 13 tie that binds all of these exceptions involves a fact based determination as to 14 whether the employee was under the employer's control at the time of the accident.
15

16 In Evans v. Southwest Gas Corp., 108 Nev. 1002, 842 P.2d 719 (1992), this 17 Court held that, although an accident occurred while an employee was commuting, 18 an employee may still be within the course and scope of his employment when the 19 travel to or from work confers a distinct benefit upon the employer or the employer
20 exercised significant control over the employee. In Evans, the employee was 21 provided a hand held radio and a radio in his van. He would be notified of those 22 emergencies via the radio or the hand held radio. The employee was required to 23 take the van home to respond to emergencies.
25
26
27

1 Note also that Evans is not technically a workers' compensation case. It is a
2 summary judgment case. Ms. Evans was injured when the Southwest Gas
3 employee's van made contact with the school bus that Ms. Evans was driving. Ms.
4 Evans brought a civil action against Southwest Gas but the District Court
5 dismissed the case on summary judgment, finding that the Southwest Gas
6 employee was not acting within the course and scope of his employment at the 7 time of the accident.

10 On appeal, this Court exercised de novo review (because it was a summary
11 judgment case), and reversed the District Court, finding that, as discussed above,
12 there was evidence that the Southwest Gas employee was acting within the course
13 and scope of his employment at the time of the accident. Therefore, the matter was 14 remanded for trial where the jury could have concluded that the employee was 15 within the course and scope of his employment.
16

18 A second case which is of particular import to the current matter is Tighe. In 19 that case, the claimant, an undercover narcotics officer, was commuting home and 20 was involved in a traffic accident. At the time of the accident, the officer was 21 driving an unmarked undercover vehicle provided by the police department. The 22 vehicle in question was equipped with a radio and the officer was carrying a beeper
23 provided by the police department as he was "on call." The claimant's claim was 24 denied under the going and coming rule. The Appeals Officer reversed claim 25
26
27

1 denial, finding that the claimant was within the course and scope of his
2 employment. However, on appeal, the District Court reversed the Appeals Officer.
4 The Respondent appealed to this Court. This Court reversed the District Court,
5 finding that the Appeals Officer's decision was supported by substantial evidence.
7 The Court supported its conclusion, noting that two exceptions to the going and 8 coming rule applied to the facts of that case.

9 The first exception is satisfied "when the travel to or from work confers a 10 distinct benefit upon the employer." Id., 110 Nev. at 635, 877 P.2d at 1035 (citing 11 Evans). The Court found it dispositive that the officer was driving a vehicle 12 provided by the employer, was "on call" as evidenced by the beeper and radio, and 13 that the employer benefited from having an officer out driving an undercover
14 vehicle. Therefore the Court concluded that the officer in Tighe was providing a
15 vehicle. Therefore the Court concluded that the officer in Tighe was providing a 16 "distinct benefit" to the employer.
17

18 Second, the Tighe Court adopted the "law enforcement exception." The 19 Court reasoned that "police officers are generally charged with a duty of law 20 enforcement while traveling on public thoroughfares" and therefore injuries
21 sustained on the commute "may be compensated." (Id.)

24 However, this Court made it clear that the law enforcement exception "is not 25 sufficiently broad and all-inclusive to justify the conclusion that all law
26 enforcement officers are always excluded from the general rule that injuries
27

1 sustained while traveling to or from work do not arise out of and in the course of 2 employment.”(Emphasis in original)(Id.) This Court specifically concluded that 3 Tighe satisfied the law enforcement exception because “Tighe was on call and 4 driving a police vehicle equipped with a police radio, and he was prepared to 5 respond to any public emergency he may have encountered.”

8 Note also that unlike Evans, Tighe is a workers’ compensation case. The 9 administrator denied Mr. Tighe’s claim and the Appeals Officer reversed, finding 10 among other things that Mr. Tighe’s injuries arose out of and in the course of his 11 employment. The District Court reversed the Appeals Officer, finding it was legal 12 error to conclude that Mr. Tighe’s injuries arose out of and in the course of his 13 employment. This Court reversed the District Court, finding that “there is 14 substantial evidence in the administrative record to find that Tighe's injuries
15 occurred within the course of his employment.” Id.
16

18 1. Other States’ Application of the Law Enforcement Exception

19

20 This application of the going and coming rule is echoed in other states.
21 Indeed, other states have ruled that in situations such as the one in the present case,
22 where the officer is not performing police work or is otherwise simply commuting
23 just as any other employee would, the going and coming rule operates to exclude 24 coverage.
25
26
27

1 Of the cases to be cited in this section, the case of Rogers v. Indus. Com.,
2 40 Colo. App. 313, 315, 574 P.2d 116, 118 (1978) provides the best outline as to
3 how the going and coming rule should apply to police officers and contains facts
4 that are strikingly similar to the present case. In Rogers, the claimant, a police 5 officer, was driving his personal motorcycle to work when he was involved in an
6 accident. At the time of the accident, he was not in uniform but carried his service
7 revolver, badge, and police identification card, as required by police regulations.
8 The claimant argued that his claim should be compensable because he was 9 required to be "always on duty, although periodically relieved from [his]
10 performance of it."
11

12 The Court therein held that the claim was not compensable based on the 13 following:
14

15 The controlling factor is whether, at the time of the 16 accident, the officer was actually engaged in the 17 performance of law enforcement activities. Where the 18 policeman is not engaged in police work when the injury
19 occurred, no compensation is awarded.
20

21 This criterion is in accord with the general rule in 22 Colorado that in order for an injury to be compensable,
23 the employee, at the time of the accident, must be 24 "engaged in doing an act, or performing a duty, which he
25 is definitely charged with doing as a part of his contract
26 of service, or under the express or implied direction of 27 his employer."
28

...

1 Like Colorado and Nevada, California also recognizes a law enforcement
2 exception to the going and coming rule but, also like Colorado and Nevada, has
3 opined that such an exception "is not sufficient to render the going and coming rule
4 inapplicable." State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd., 29 Cal.
5 App. 3d 902, 906, 106 Cal. Rptr. 39, 42 (1973). In that case, the California Court
6 of Appeals was faced with a police officer who was commuting to work in his
7 personal automobile. It was notable that the officer was not wearing his uniform
8 and was simply commuting just as he would on any other day. The Court held that 9 the claim was not compensable as the officer was not engaged "in conduct
10 reasonably directed toward the fulfillment of his employer's requirements, 11 performed for the benefit and advantage of the employer." In arriving at that 12 conclusion, the Court stated as follows:

17 In street clothes, the officer would have been 18 indistinguishable from any other worker on his way to 19 work. Having made provision for the officer to change
20 into uniform at the police station, and not having 21 requested or required the officer to wear his uniform on 22 the way to work, the employer should not be charged
23 with liability resulting from an injury that does not arise
24 from the officer's performance of law enforcement
25 activities while the officer is in everyday transit from his 26 home to the police station. Any other conclusion would 27 permit the officer to impose liability upon the employer
28 at his own whim or caprice.

26 The state of Georgia has adopted a similar position. In the case of Mayor &
27 Aldermen of Savannah v. Stevens, 278 Ga. 166, 166, 598 S.E.2d 456, 457 (2004) a

1 police officer was injured while driving to work. Like Nevada, the Court held that
2 although the going and coming rule generally prevents workers from establishing a
3 claim if an injury is incurred while commuting to or from work, “[t]he unique role
4 of police officers, however, will sometimes require a departure from this general
5 rule.” The Georgia rule recognizes that “police officers are often called to enforce 6 the law at any time within their jurisdiction, regardless of whether or not they are 7 actually on-duty at the time.” As such, under that rule, the Court concluded that the 8 claimant’s injury therein arose “in the course of” her employment.

11
12 However, because she was merely commuting and not actually performing 13 any work at the time of her injury, the Court went on to conclude as follows:

14
15 Stevens’ car accident in this case was in no way related 16 to her work as a police officer. At the time of the 17 accident, she was not actively engaged in any police
18 work nor was she responding to a law enforcement
19 problem. The hazards she encountered were in no way
20 occasioned by her job as a police officer. Because there
21 was no causal connection between her employment and 22 her accident, Stevens’ injuries did not arise out of her
23 employment.

24
25 Finally, in Tighe, this Court used as primary authority an opinion from the 26 Appellate Court of Illinois, Springfield v. Indus. Comm’n, 244 Ill. App. 3d 408, 27 185 Ill. Dec. 344, 346, 614 N.E.2d 478, (1993). In that case, an officer had taken a lunch break in an unmarked squad car. It was undisputed that claimant was “on call” 24 hours a day and was required to have a department issued radio turned on

1 to receive calls. On his way back from lunch, the officer was involved in a motor
2 vehicle accident when another motorist ran a stop sign. Benefits were awarded and 3 the Appellate Court affirmed.

5 In affirming, the Court made it clear that being “‘on call’ 24 hours a day is 6 not always determinative since it ‘does not necessarily follow that every injury
7 suffered by a peace officer is compensable.’” However, the reason why this case
8 was significant to the Court was that:

10 although claimant was not responding to any particular
11 call or emergency, he had his police radio activated
12 pursuant to department directive at the time the accident
13 occurred....In this sense, claimant was not acting outside
14 his employment-related duties or engaged in a purely 15 personal diversion or enterprise. The principal issue, as 16 we have indicated, was whether the employer, under all
17 the circumstances, can be deemed to have retained
18 authority over the employee. Actively monitoring the 19 police radio during the course of claimant's return trip to 20 the station is sufficient evidence upon which the 21 Commission could draw the conclusion that the employer
22 intended to retain authority over claimant at the time his 23 injuries arose.

24 Id., 244 Ill. App. 3d at 411, 185 Ill. Dec. at 346-47, 614 N.E.2d at 480-81
25 (1993)(emphasis added)
26

27 In a more recent decision, the Appellate Court of Illinois distinguished 28 Springfield and upheld the denial of benefits for an officer who was injured while 29 commuting to work, a situation which more accurately tracks with the present case.

1 In Allenbaugh v. Ill. Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 2016 IL App (3d) 150284WC, 405
2 Ill. Dec. 611, 58 N.E.3d 872 (Opinion filed on July 12, 2016), the claimant was a
3 patrol officer who was commuting to police headquarters for mandatory training
4 when he was involved in a motor vehicle accident after another vehicle crossed
5 over into his lane. According to the claimant, police officers were on duty 24 hours
6 a day. Claimant was initially awarded benefits by the arbitrator. This was appealed
7 to the workers' compensation commission (which appears to be akin to Nevada's
8 workers' compensation Appeals Officer) which reversed the award of benefits.
9 Claimant appealed and the Circuit Court affirmed the Commission. Claimant
10 appealed again and the Appellate Court affirmed the denial of benefits.
11

12 Claimant's main argument in Allenbaugh was that the holding from 13 Springfield should apply and benefits should be awarded. Just as Mr. Figueroa is 14 arguing in the present case, Mr. Allenbaugh argued that his employer maintained 15 sufficient control over him that he was within the scope of his employment at the 16 time of the accident, relying heavily on Springfield, Id. wherein the claimant was 17 injured while returning from lunch. The Court was not persuaded by the analogy,
18 holding as follows:
19
20
21
22
23

24 [I]t seems to us that all employees are required to go to 25 work. Thus, we fail to see how the fact that claimant was 26 going someplace he was required to go for work
27 distinguishes his situation from normal commuting.
Claimant cites nothing to support the proposition that one's obligation to go to the place where one works

1 supports an inference that one is within the scope of 2 employment while commuting. Claimant states he would
3 have been subject to discipline if he missed the training
4 session; this is simply another way of saying he was ordered to attend and that attendance was mandatory.

5 ...
6 Claimant points out that, per departmental directive, he 7 was ordered to bring several items of equipment with 8 him. It is true that the City of Springfield court relied on 9 the fact that the officer had a radio (that was required to 10 be on at all times) and a beeper with him at the time of 11 the accident. However, in City of Springfield, the court
12 mentioned that equipment because it allowed the 13 respondent to maintain control over the officer while he 14 was otherwise off duty. In claimant's case, he was required to bring to training his nightstick, gun belt, handcuffs and key, tazer, holster, and training uniform.
Unlike a radio and beeper, none of these items allowed respondent to maintain control over claimant. Therefore,
City of Springfield is distinguishable on this basis.

16 E. Substantial Evidence Supports The Appeals Officer's Decision

17 The District Court determined that the law enforcement exception adopted in 18 Tighe was sufficiently broad to encompass the factual scenario at bar. However, as 19 noted above, the law enforcement exception is fact based and the Appeals Officer 20 concluded that there was insufficient facts to find sufficient control to render this 21 claim compensable. When determining whether an exception to the going and 22 coming rule applies, the Appeals Officer must necessarily conduct a weighing of 23 the facts and decide whether the evidence supports the exercise of an exception. As 24 noted above, the Court in Tighe reversed the District Court in that case for 25
26
27

1 invading on the Appeals Officer's purview, holding that the Appeals Officer's
2 decision was supported by substantial evidence. (See also Schepcoff,
3 Id.) Therefore, deference must be given to the Appeals Officer.

5 Here, Respondent was not performing any work at the time of the incident.
6 He was operating his own personal vehicle at the time of the incident while
7 wearing civilian clothes. Indeed, Respondent would have been indistinguishable
8 from any other civilian motorcycle rider. The Employer received no benefit by 9 Respondent simply being on the road, unlike the undercover "on call" officer from 10 Tighe or the employee in Evans who was required to take a company vehicle and 11 company radio to respond to emergencies. (See Also State Comp. Ins. Fund, Id.)
12

14 Further, although Respondent had a radio with him, he was not required to 15 have it and only carried it out of his own personal habit. Therefore, the two things
16 which both the Tighe and Evans courts found dispositive (i.e. an employer 17 provided vehicle and a mandatory form of radio from the employer) are not present
18 in this case. Respondent even testified that he is never required to use his personal
19 motorcycle while he is on duty (ROA p. 43:23-44:15) and only carries his radio out
20 of personal habit. At the time of the accident, Respondent was not providing any 21 distinct benefit to his employer and was simply driving home just as any non-law 22 enforcement employee would.
23
25
26
27

1 It must also be noted that Respondent's accident happened at 12:25 a.m. and
2 he was technically still "on the clock" at the time of the accident. Respondent
3 testified that although his shift ended at 12:30 a.m., he was released early. Mr.
4 Roch confirmed that it is common practice for officers to sometimes be released
5 prior to the official conclusion of their shift but that they would be paid for the 6 entire shift. (ROA pp. 54:18-53:9) He referred to this as an "early out," or "EO."

9 Respondent further testified that the reason he was released early was 10 because his sergeant had informed him that he was being released from a re-
11 acclimation program to return to his position with the Traffic Bureau as a 12 motorcycle officer¹ and that the sergeant wanted Respondent to ride his personal 13 motorcycle to "get some seat time." (ROA pp. 36:24-39:25) Though Mr. Roch was 14 not present for this alleged conversation between Respondent and his sergeant, Mr.
15 Roch questioned the same, stating that "I don't know why you would mix personal 16 with work, but seat time on a personal bike is a whole lot different than seat time
17 on a Metro bike." (ROA pp. 63:12-15)

21 Furthermore, it should also be noted that Respondent's co-worker, Tyler
22 McMeans, was working the exact same shift as Respondent, had been released at 23

24 ¹ Respondent, who had previously been a motorcycle officer with the Traffic
25 Bureau, had been participating in a re-acclimation program while recovering from 26 a prior work injury. Respondent had been using an employer provided SUV to 27 perform his job while in the re-acclimation program and he testified that he would be returning to motorcycle duty on either the next shift or the shift after that.

1 the exact same time, was also driving his personal motorcycle, and was traveling
2 close enough to Respondent at the time of the incident to both witness the incident
3 and speak with the driver who caused the accident. (ROA pp. 39:1-43:22) The 4 Appeals Officer found that this fact drew Respondent's testimony into question, 5 noting that "[s]urely Mr. McMeans was not released early from his shift because 6 Respondent was ordered to 'get some seat time.'" (ROA p. 85:23-24)

9 F. Respondent's Injuries Were Not Connected to His Employment

10 Respondent's entire argument and apparently the District Court's reasoning
11 to reverse the Appeals Officer is premised on the fact that Respondent was still on 12 the clock at the time of his injury. Therefore, Respondent argues that Respondent 13 was still under enough of the Employer's control at the time of the accident to 14 render this claim compensable. However, simply being on the clock is not a 15 dispositive factor in the state of Nevada. Indeed, it is a mainstay of the Nevada
16 workers' compensation law that a Respondent must establish more than the fact 17 that they are getting paid at the time of an injury to make out a compensable claim:
18 "an injured employee is not entitled to receive workers' compensation 'unless the 19 employee . . . establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that the employee's 20 injury arose out of and in the course of his employment.'" Mitchell v. Clark Cty.
21 Sch. Dist., 121 Nev. 179, 181, 111 P.3d 1104, 1105 (2005)(citing NRS 22 616C.150(1))
23
24
25
26
27

1 Just as with the Respondent in Mitchell, the fact that Respondent was “on 2 the clock,” by itself, does not render this claim compensable. Respondent must
3 establish a workplace connection to his injury. Here, there is no work place
4 connection. Respondent was on his personal motorcycle in civilian clothes while 5 commuting home (just as he or any other non-law enforcement employee would)
6 and happened to be involved in a traffic accident. He was not being compensated
7 for his commute nor was he performing any employment related tasks at the time.
8 There is no workplace connection and Respondent was not conferring any benefit
9 on his employer at the time of the incident.
10

12 Further, there is no “police” connection to Respondent’s accident/injury.
13 Unlike the officer in Tighe, Respondent was driving his own personal vehicle and 14 had been released from service for the day. Though he was still technically “on the 15 clock” at the time of the incident, not only would it have been impossible for 16 Respondent to be called back in prior to his shift’s conclusion given that he was ten
17 (10) minutes away from his place of employment and there was only five (5)
18 minutes left in his shift, but Respondent also claims that he could have been called 19 back in at any time even if he was “off the clock.” As such, there does not appear
20 to be any real meaningful difference in Employer’s ability to call Respondent back
21 when the subject accident happened or five (5) minutes later when his shift
22 technically concluded. If the Appeals Officer were to conclude that the fact that he 23
25
26
27

1 was "on the clock" had significance because he could have been called back, then,
2 according to Respondent's testimony, the law enforcement exception would 3 swallow the rule as apparently police officers are always subject to being called 4 back.

6 Finally, the fact that Respondent had his radio on him at the time of the 7 incident is inconsequential as Respondent made the personal choice to carry it with 8 him and was in no way required to have it while he was off duty. Nor is there any 9 indication that he was required to monitor the same. (See Allenbaugh, Id.)
10 Respondent does not satisfy the law enforcement exception to the going and 11 coming rule.
12

13 Claim denial is proper. This case is a going and coming rule scenario with 14 no exceptions applicable. There is substantial evidence to support the Appeals
15 Officer's Decision to affirm the April 9, 2015 claim denial determination and there
16 is no legal error. The Appeals Officer should be affirmed.
17

18 G. The District Court Committed Error

19 To begin with, although the District Court reversed the Appeals Officer, this 20 Court should disregard that District Court decision given that this Court "[does]
21 not give any deference to the district court decision when reviewing an order
22 regarding a petition for judicial review." City of Reno v. Bldg. & Constr. Trades 23 Council of N. Nev., 127 Nev. 114, 119, 251 P.3d 718, 721 (2011)) Should the 24
25
26
27

1 reasoning of the District Court be considered, it should still be disregarded as it
2 fails to defer to the Appeals Officer and also fails to adequately account for the 3 proper control analysis that is required in this case.

5 In the April 30, 2019 Order, the District Court found fault with the Appeals
6 Officer's Order for not including reference in the Findings of Fact that Respondent
7 was on the clock or the fact that Respondent was given an "early out" to "get some 8 additional practice riding a motorcycle, as he called it 'seat time.'" However, both 9 of these facts were discussed at length in the Conclusions of Law section of the 10 Appeals Officer's Order and there was an explicit line in the Decision noting that 11 "[a]ny Finding of Fact more appropriately deemed a Conclusion of Law shall be so 12 deemed, and vice versa." The District Court found that it was legal error to not 13 contemplate the fact that Respondent was on the clock at the time of the incident.
14 However, the Appeals Officer absolutely considered this fact. Although it was not 15 mentioned in the Findings of Fact section, the Appeals Officer noted in the 16 Conclusions of Law that "the claimant was still on the clock at the time of the 17 accident." Not only that, the Appeals Officer went into detail discussing the import 18 of this fact to the case:
19
20
21
22
23

24 24. It must also be noted that the fact that this accident
25 happened while claimant was still technically "on the 26 clock" does not somehow render this claim compensable.
27 Indeed, it is a mainstay of the Nevada workers' compensation law that a claimant must establish more than the fact that they are getting paid at the time of an

1 injury to make out a compensable claim: "an injured
2 employee is not entitled to receive workers'
3 compensation 'unless the employee . . . establishes by a
4 preponderance of the evidence that the employee's injury
5 arose out of and in the course of his employment.'" Mitchell v. Clark Cty. Sch. Dist., 121 Nev. 179, 181, 111
6 P.3d 1104, 1105 (2005)(citing NRS 616C.150(1))

7 25. Just as with the claimant in Mitchell, the fact that 8 claimant was "on the clock," by itself, does not render 9 this claim compensable. Claimant must establish a
10 workplace connection to his injury. Here, as established
11 above, there is no work place connection. Claimant was 12 on his personal motorcycle in civilian clothes while commuting home and happened to be involved in a traffic accident. Claimant's employment did not contribute to his accident in any way.

13 The Appeals Officer also quoted Rio Suite Hotel v. Gorsky, 113 Nev. 600, 14 939 P.2d 1043(1997) which held that the "Nevada Industrial Insurance Act is not a 15 mechanism which makes Employers absolutely liable for injuries suffered by 16 employees who are on the job." The Appeals Officer absolutely considered the fact
17 that Appellant was still on the clock at the time of this incident and included a 18 detailed discussion of the same in the Decision.
19

21 As for the District Court's finding that the Appeals Officer "left out" the fact 22 that Appellant testified that he was told to leave early and "get some seat time," the 23 Appeals Officer addressed this fact at length as well. It was not "left out." And 24 again, the subject Decision and Order explicitly noted that "[a]ny Finding of Fact 25
26
27

1 more appropriately deemed a Conclusion of Law shall be so deemed, and vice
2 versa.”

4 As for the merits of the position that being on the clock should have 5 rendered this claim compensable, the fact that Respondent or any other claimant in 6 the state is on the clock and subject to an Employer’s rules and regulations is 7 simply not dispositive. As this Court has held numerous times over, it is the 8 claimant’s burden to prove more than just being on the clock when an injury 9 occurs – the claimant must prove by a preponderance of evidence that the origin of 10 the injury is related to some risk involved within the scope of employment.
11
12 Gorsky; Mitchell; Rio All Suite Hotel and Casino v. Phillips, 126 Nev. 346, 240
13 P.3d 2 (2010).
14
15

16 Furthermore, from a public policy standpoint, under the District Court’s
17 current ruling, if Respondent’s accident had happened five (5) minutes later when 18 Respondent was five (5) minutes further down the road with all other facts being 19 the same, this claim would not be compensable. There is no further work
20 connection other than the passage of five (5) minutes. Appellants would submit 21 that such an outcome is arbitrary on its face, especially considering this Court’s
22 opinion that being on the clock by itself is not enough for a compensable claim.
23
25
26
27

1 Further, if this Court interprets the District Court's holding to be based on 2 something other than the passage of time, then the District Court is explicitly
3 concluding that the police officer exception should swallow the general rule.

5 Next, the District Court concluded that it was error for the Appeals Officer
6 to find that Employer "received no benefit from claimant being on the road." The 7 District Court reasoned that Employer did receive a benefit because Respondent
8 was on the clock, could have been called back, was ordered to get some "seat
9 time," and Respondent was still subject to Employer's rules and regulations.
10 However, save for the "seat time" which will be discussed more below, all of the 11 reasons listed by this Court as "benefits" to the Employer are simply consequences 12 of being on the clock which, as discussed above, is not enough reason by itself to 13 render a claim compensable. (See Allenbaugh, Id.)
14
15
16

17 The District Court concluded that "there is no question the Appellant was on 18 the clock at the time of the accident and, therefore, under the control of LVMPD
19 unlike an off-duty officer returning home." Indeed, Appellants agree that the only 20 difference between an off-duty police officer and Respondent is the fact that 21 Appellant was on the clock. However, again, this Court has stated several times
22 over that that is simply not enough to render a claim compensable.
23
24

25 Regarding the fact that Respondent testified that his sergeant ordered him to 26 "get some seat time," the Appeals Officer weighed the facts and concluded that 27

1 there was no evidence to show that Respondent's job required him to ride his 2 personal motor cycle as a condition of his employment. Indeed, it was
3 Respondent's choice to have a personal motor cycle to commute to and from work
4 and Respondent was not performing any training or any other police function while
5 he was driving that personal motor cycle on the day in question. The Employer
6 received as much benefit from Respondent commuting home on his personal motor 7 cycle as it would have if Respondent were commuting home in a mini-van. That is 8 to say that Employer received no benefit from Respondent commuting home in a 9 vehicle of his choosing just as he would on any other day. It nothing else, this was 10 a fact question for the Appeals Officer and there was substantial evidence to 11 support the Appeals Officer conclusion.
12

14 Finally, the District Court concluded that it was error to affirm claim denial
15 given that Respondent "had his radio and the general duty of law enforcement 16 while traveling on public thoroughfares under Tighe." However, that is not the 17 complete holding of Tighe. Indeed, the Tighe Court held that injuries sustained by 18 law enforcement officers on their commute "may be compensable" and that the 19 "law enforcement exception is not sufficiently broad and all-inclusive to justify the 20 conclusion that all law enforcement officers are always excluded from the general
21 rule that injuries sustained while traveling to or from work do not arise out of and 22 in the course of employment." (Id.) This Court specifically concluded that Tighe 23
25
26
27

1 satisfied the law enforcement exception because “Tighe was on call and driving a 2 police vehicle equipped with a police radio, and he was prepared to respond to any
3 public emergency he may have encountered.”

5 Here, just as being injured on the clock is not enough by itself for a
6 compensable claim, the fact that Respondent was a police officer on his commute
7 home is not enough to render this or any other claim compensable. The law
8 enforcement exception is fact sensitive and does not apply across the board to 9 police officers on their commute home. Further, the fact that Respondent had his 10 radio is not dispositive as he chose to bring the radio with him. In Tighe, the 11 employer mandated that Tighe carry a radio to respond quickly given his “on call”
12 status. Here, Respondent admitted that it was his choice to bring the radio and that 13 he could have left the same at the station if he wanted to.
14
15
16

17 Respondent was not performing any police work at the time of the incident –
18 he was commuting home just as any other police officer (or non-police officer)
19 would. The only potential work connection that this claim has is that it occurred 20 five (5) minutes before Respondent was technically off the clock. This Court has 21 been clear that being on the clock is not enough, there must be a work connection.
22 Other than being on the clock, the only other facts which the District Court found 23 dispositive were Respondent’s personal choices to drive a motor cycle and his 24 personal choice to bring his radio with him. There is no evidence that Employer
25
26
27

1 instructed Respondent to purchase a motorcycle or even to undertake police duties
2 while driving his personal motor cycle. Nor is there any evidence that Employer
3 instructed Respondent to carry a radio with him. The District Court should be 4 reversed and the Appeals Officer affirmed.

7 VI.

8 CONCLUSION

9 Based upon the foregoing, Appellant requests that this Court affirm the 10 Appeals Officer, reverse the District Court, and find that the Respondent has failed 11 to prove that injuries arose out of and in the course of his employment.
