CORPUS (POST-CONVICTION)

(DEATH PENALTY CASE)

(Execution Warrant Sought for the Week of June 7, 2021)

Petitioner, Zane Michael Floyd, hereby files this Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus pursuant to Nevada Revised Statutes sections 34.724 and 34.820. Floyd alleges that he is being held in custody in violation of the Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States of America;
Article 1, sections Three, Six, Eight, and Nine and Article Four, section Twenty-one

1 of the Constitution of the State of Nevada; and the rights afforded him under 2 international law enforced under the Supremacy Clause of the United States
3 Constitution, U.S. Const. art VI, cl.2.

4 DATED this 15th day of April, 2021.

5 Respectfully submitted

1 Nature of offense involved in conviction being challenged: N/A

2 Nature of offense involved in conviction being challenged:

3 Zane Floyd was charged by information with, on or about June 3, 1999:

4 (1) burglarizing Albertsons while in possession of a firearm; (2) four

5 counts of murder with use of a deadly weapon for shooting Thomas

6 Michael Darnell, Dennis Troy Sergeant, Carlos Chuck Leos, and Lucille

7 Alice Tarantino, who died as a result of their injuries; (3) attempted

8 murder with use of a deadly weapon for shooting Zachary Emenegger;

9 (4) first degree kidnapping of Tracie Rose Carter with use of a deadly

10 weapon; and (5) four counts of sexual assault upon Tracie Rose Carter

11 with use of a deadly weapon.

12 What was your plea?

13 (a) Not guilty x (c) Guilty but mentally ill

14 (b) Guilty (d) Nolo contendere

15 If you entered a plea of guilty or guilty but mentally ill to one count of an 16 indictment or information, and a plea of not guilty to another count of an indictment 17 or information, or if a plea of guilty or guilty but mentally ill was negotiated, give 18 details: N/A

19 If you were found guilty after a plea of not guilty, was the finding made by:

20 (a) Jury x (b) Judge without a jury

21 Did you testify at the trial? Yes No x

22 Did you appeal from the judgment of conviction? Yes x No

1 If you did appeal, answer the following:

2 (a) Name of Court: Nevada Supreme Court

3 (b) Case number or citation: Floyd v. State, 118 Nev. 156, 42 P.3d
4 249 (2002)

5 (c) Result: Conviction and sentence affirmed.

6 If you did not appeal, explain briefly why you did not: N/A

7 Other than a direct appeal from the judgment of conviction and sentence, have 8 you previously filed any petitions, applications or motions with respect to this 9 judgment in any court, state or federal? Yes × No

10 If your answer to No. 15 was “yes,” give the following information:

11 (a) (1) Name of Court: Eighth Judicial District Court

12 (2) Nature of proceeding: State post-conviction Petition for Writ
13 of Habeas Corpus

14 (3) Ground raised:

15 I. The trial court committed constitutional error in 16 denying Defendant’s motion to sever counts for trial.

17 II. The trial court committed constitutional error in 18 denying Defendant’s motion for a change of venue.

19 III. The trial court committed constitutional error in 20 denying Defendant’s motion to dismiss statutory 21 aggravators based on a failure to find probable cause for 22 existence of aggravating circumstances.

- IV. The trial court committed constitutional error by improperly requiring Defendant to disclose expert witness test results and allowing the State to make use of that data in presenting penalty phase rebuttal evidence.
- V. The trial court committed constitutional error in denying Defendant’s motion to suppress Defendant’s statements.
- VI. Prosecutorial misconduct during closing argument requires that a new trial be conducted.
- VII. Prosecutorial misconduct during the presentation of victim-impact testimony at the penalty hearing requires that a new penalty hearing be conducted.
- VIII. Floyd’s conviction and death sentence are invalid under the State and Federal guarantee of effective assistance of counsel, due process of law, equal protection of the law, cross-examination and confrontation and a reliable sentence due to the failure of trial counsel to provide reasonably effective assistance of counsel.
- IX. Trial counsel failed to make contemporaneous objections on valid issues during trial and appellate counsel failed to raise these issues on direct appeal,

1 both failures being in violation of Floyd's rights under 2 the Sixth Amendment to effective counsel and under the 3 Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to due process and 4 a fundamentally fair trial.

5 X. Trial counsel failed to request an instruction during the 6 penalty phase that correctly defined the use of 7 character evidence for the jury.

8 XI. Trial counsel failed to object and move to strike
9 overlapping aggravating circumstances and appellate 10 counsel failed to raise the issue on direct appeal.

11 XII. The malice instruction given to the jury contained an 12 unconstitutional presumption that relieved the State of 13 its burden of proof and violated Floyd's presumption of 14 innocence.

15 XIII. Floyd's conviction and sentence are invalid under the 16 State and Federal Constitutional guarantee of due
17 process, equal protection of the laws, and reliable
18 sentence due to the failure of the Nevada Supreme 19 Court to conduct fair and adequate appellate review.

20 XIV. Floyd's conviction and sentence is invalid under the 21 State and Federal Constitutional guarantees of due
22 process, equal protection, impartial jury from cross-

1 section of the community and reliable determination
2 due to the trial, conviction, and sentence being imposed
3 by a jury from which African Americans and other 4 minorities were systematically excluded and under-5 represented.

6 (4) Did you receive an evidentiary hearing on your petition,
7 application or motion? Yes _____ No x

8 (5) Result: Denial of the Writ for Habeas Corpus

9 (6) Date of Result: February 4, 2005

10 (7) If known, citations of any written opinion or date of orders
11 entered pursuant to such result: District Court entered an 12 order of denial on February 4, 2005; Nevada Supreme Court
13 affirmed the denial on February 16, 2006. Nevada v. Floyd, 14 Order of Affirmance (Feb. 16, 2006).

15 (b) As to any second petition, application or motion, give the same
16 information:

17 (1) Name of court: Eighth Judicial District Court

18 (2) Nature of proceeding: Successive Petition for Writ of Habeas 19 Corpus

20 (3) Grounds raised:

21 I. Floyd's convictions and death sentence are invalid
22 under state and federal constitutional guarantees of

1 due process, equal protection, the effective assistance of 2 counsel, and a reliable sentence due to the ineffective
3 assistance of counsel.

4 II. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under
5 state and federal constitutional guarantees of due
6 process, equal protection, right to effective assistance of 7 counsel, a fair trial and a reliable sentencing because 8 Floyd was deprived of expert assistance to aid in his 9 defense during the guilt and penalty phases of his trial.

10 III. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under 11 state and federal constitutional guarantees of due
12 process, equal protection, trial before an impartial jury,
13 and a reliable sentence in violation of U.S.
14 Constitutional Amends. V, VI, VIII, & XIV and Nev.
15 Const. Art. I, IV, because he is actually innocent of first-16 degree murder.

17 IV. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid
18 because Floyd's state and federal constitutional 19 guarantees of due process, equal protection, trial before
20 an impartial jury, and a reliable sentence were violated
21 because of prosecutorial misconduct.

- V. Floyd’s conviction and death sentence are invalid under the state and federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal protection, trial before an impartial jury, a reliable sentence, and protection from cruel and unusual punishment because Nevada law fails to properly channel death sentences by limiting the scope of victim-impact testimony.
- VI. Floyd’s conviction and death sentence are invalid under state and federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal protection, a reliable sentence, an impartial jury, and the effective assistance of counsel due to the improper actions of the trial court during the voir dire proceedings which deprived Floyd of his right to a fair and impartial jury.
- VII. Floyd’s conviction and death sentence are invalid under the state and federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal protection, trial before an impartial jury, and a reliable sentence because of the trial court’s failure to grant a change of venue and sequester the jury.
- VIII. Floyd’s conviction and death sentence are invalid under the constitutional guarantees of a trial before an

1 impartial jury, due process, and a reliable sentence
2 because the trial court failed to properly instruct the 3 jury.

4 IX. Floyd was deprived of his state and federal 5 constitutional rights to communicate with counsel, to 6 the effective assistance of counsel, due process, equal
7 protection, and a reliable sentence due to the jurors
8 viewing him in prison clothes, handcuffs, and shackles.

9 X. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under 10 the federal constitutional guarantees of due process,
11 equal protection, and a reliable sentence because of the 12 failure to preserve Floyd's blood sample.

13 XI. Floyd was deprived of his state and federal 14 constitutional right to adequate notice of the charges 15 against him, a pretrial review of probable cause to 16 support aggravating factors as elements of capital
17 eligibility, due process of law and a reliable sentence by 18 the failure to submit all the elements of capital
19 eligibility to the grand jury or to the court for a probable 20 cause determination.

21 XII. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under

1 process, equal protection, trial before an impartial jury,
2 and a reliable sentence because of the trial court's 3 failure to grant a motion to sever counts relating to 4 events at his apartment from those relating to events at 5 the Albertson's store.

6 XIII. Floyd's death sentence is invalid under state and 7 federal constitutional guarantees of due process of law,
8 equal protection of the laws, and a reliable sentence due
9 to the failure of the Nevada Supreme Court to conduct
10 fair and adequate appellate review.

11 XIV. Floyd's death sentence is invalid under federal 12 constitutional guarantees of due process, equal
13 protection, and a reliable sentence because the Nevada 14 capital punishment system operates in an arbitrary and 15 capricious manner.

16 XV. Floyd's death sentence is invalid under the federal 17 constitutional guarantees of due process, equal
18 protection, and a reliable sentence because execution by 19 lethal injection violates the constitutional prohibition
20 against cruel and unusual punishment.

21 XVI. Floyd's conviction and sentence violate the 22 constitutional guarantees of due process of law, equal

1 protection of the laws, a reliable sentence, and 2 international law because Floyd's capital trial and 3 sentencing and review on direct appeal were conducted 4 before state judicial officers whose tenure in office was 5 not dependent on good behavior but whose tenure was 6 dependent on popular election.

7 XVII. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under 8 the federal constitutional guarantees of due process,
9 equal protection, right to counsel, and a reliable
10 sentencing because the State improperly withheld
11 exculpatory evidence in violation of U.S. Const.
12 Amends. V, VI, VIII, and XIV, and Nev. Const. Art. I, 13 IV.

14 XVIII. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under 15 state federal and constitutional guarantees of due 16 process, equal protection, the effective assistance of 17 counsel, a fair tribunal, an impartial jury, and a reliable
18 sentence due to the cumulative errors in the admission
19 of evidence and instructions, gross misconduct by state
20 officials and witnesses, and the systematic deprivation
21 of Floyd's right to the effective assistance of counsel.

1 XIX. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under
2 the federal constitutional guarantees of due process,
3 equal protection, the effective assistance of counsel, a
4 fair tribunal, an impartial jury, and a reliable sentence
5 due to the use of peremptory strikes against women in 6 a discriminatory manner.

7 (4) Did you receive an evidentiary hearing on your petition,
8 application or motion? Yes × No

9 (5) Result: Petition dismissed as procedurally barred.

10 (6) Date of result: April 2, 2008

11 (7) If known, citations of any written opinion or date of orders
12 entered pursuant to such result: Case No. C159897, dismissed
13 petition as procedurally barred on April 2, 2008. Nevada
14 Supreme Court affirmed dismissal on January 19, 2011

15 (d) As to any third petition, application or motion, give the same
16 information:

17 (1) Name of court: Federal District Court, District of Nevada

18 (2) Nature of proceeding: Second Amended Petition for Writ of 19 Habeas Corpus

20 (3) Grounds raised:

21 I. Floyd's convictions and death sentence are invalid
22 under federal constitutional guarantees of due process,

1 equal protection, and a reliable sentence due to the 2 ineffective assistance of counsel.

3 II. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under
4 federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal
5 protection, the right to effective assistance of counsel,
6 the right to a fair trial and the right to a reliable
7 sentence because Floyd was deprived of expert 8 assistance to aid in his defense during the guilt and 9 penalty phases of his trial.

10 III. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under 11 federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal
12 protection, a trial before an impartial jury, and a 13 reliable sentence because he is actually innocent of 14 first-degree murder.

15 IV. Floyd's conviction and death sentence are invalid under 16 federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal
17 protection, a reliable sentence, an impartial jury, a fair 18 tribunal, and the effective assistance of counsel due to 19 the improper actions of the trial court during the voir
20 dire proceedings which deprived Floyd of his right to a

- XI. Floyd’s death sentence is invalid under the federal constitutional guarantees to freedom from cruel and unusual punishment, due process, equal protection, a reliable sentence, and compliance with international law because execution by lethal injection is unconstitutional under all circumstances, and specifically because it violates the constitutional prohibition against cruel and unusual punishments.
- XII. Floyd’s conviction and sentence violate the federal constitutional guarantees of due process, equal

1 Has any ground being raised in this petition been previously presented to this 2 or any other court by way of petition for habeas corpus, motion, application or any 3 other post-conviction proceeding? No If so, identify:

4 Which of the grounds is the same: N/A

5 The proceedings in which these grounds were raised: N/A

6 Briefly explain why you are again raising these grounds. N/A

7 If any of the grounds listed in Nos. 23(a), (b), (c) and (d), or listed on any 8 additional pages you have attached, were not previously presented in any other court,
9 state or federal, list briefly what grounds were not so presented, and give your reasons
10 for not presenting them. (You must relate specific facts in response to this question.
11 Your response may be included on paper which is 8 ½ by 11 inches attached to the 12 petition. Your response may not exceed five handwritten or typewritten pages in 13 length.). See Grounds for Relief Claims One and Two, below

14 (a) Claim One is raised for the first time in the instant petition.
15 Claim One was not previously raised because the factual basis of the claim did not 16 exist during any of the prior state proceedings. The factual basis for Claim One is 17 based upon new scientific evidence demonstrating the equivalence in adaptive 18 functioning deficits between individuals who suffer from Intellectual Disability (ID)
19 and those who suffer from fetal alcohol spectrum disorder (FASD) and delayed brain
20 development due to a combination of age and FASD. Based on this new science, Zane 21 Floyd is categorially ineligible for execution and this Court must decline to sign the 22 execution warrant proffered by the State. In the alternative this Court should stay

1 its decision on the execution warrant until Floyd has had the opportunity to receive
2 factual development on its claim of categorial exclusion from the death penalty. Floyd
3 is entitled to a stay until he has been able to fully litigate the instant petition.
4 176.415(6), NRS 176.486, 176.487(3)-(6) (stay of execution required when necessary
5 to litigate pending habeas petition).

6 (b) Claim Two is raised for the first time in the instant petition. The 7 factual basis for the claim is that Floyd has been deprived of an adequate and 8 meaningful opportunity to seek commutation of his death sentence with the Nevada
9 Board of Pardons. The factual basis for Claim Two was not known until the State 10 filed an order for a warrant of execution without giving Floyd the opportunity to 11 pursue clemency. Claim Two is accordingly not procedurally defaulted from review
12 by this Court. NRS 176.415(6), NRS 176.486, NRS 176.487(3)-(6) (stay of execution 13 required when necessary to litigate pending habeas petition). Floyd is entitled to a 14 stay until he has been able to fully litigate this Claim. Id.

15 Are you filing this petition more than one year following the filing of the 16 judgment of conviction or the filing of a decision on direct appeal? If so, state briefly
17 the reasons for the delay. (You must relate specific facts in response to this question.
18 Your response may be included on paper which is 8 ½ by 11 inches attached to the 19 petition. Your response may not exceed five handwritten or typewritten pages in

1 GROUND FOR RELIEF

2 Floyd alleges the following grounds for relief from the judgment of conviction
3 and sentence. References in this Petition to the accompanying exhibits incorporate 4 the contents of the exhibit as if fully set forth herein.

5 CLAIM ONE: Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder Renders Floyd Ineligible for 6 Execution

7 Zane Floyd's death sentence is invalid under state and federal constitutional 8 guarantees of due process, equal protection, a reliable sentence, and freedom from 9 cruel and/or unusual punishments because his Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder 10 categorically removes him from the class of offenders that may be punished by the 11 death penalty. U.S. Const. amends V, VI, VIII, XIV; Nev. Const. Art. I, § 1, 5, 6, 8; 12 Art. 4, § 21.

13 SUPPORTING FACTS

14 Floyd is categorically exempt from the death penalty, as he suffers from Fetal 15 Alcohol Spectrum Disorder (FASD), stemming from prenatal exposure to alcohol.
16 Further, Floyd is exempt from capital punishment because his brain was not fully 17 developed at the time of the offense due to his prenatal exposure to alcohol which 18 would have had an additive and cumulative effect on the brain damage he was born 19 with.

20 The litany of deficits suffered by Floyd are akin to those identified by the 21 United States Supreme Court in Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 318, 320–21
22 (2002) and Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 578 (2005), and require his exclusion
23 from the class of persons eligible for the death penalty. See also Scott E. Sundby,

1 The True Legacy of Atkins and Roper: The Unreliability Principle, Mentally Ill
2 Defendants, and the Death Penalty's Unraveling, 23 Wm. & Mary Bill Rts. J. 487,
3 512–24 (2014). As such, Floyd is ineligible for the death penalty and this Court
4 must set aside his death sentence and decline to sign the State's warrant requesting 5 his execution.

6 A. FASD is Equivalent to Intellectual Disability

7 Floyd has been diagnosed with FASD. Ex. 1 at ¶15; Ex. 2 at ¶9, ¶18, ¶24, 8 ¶25. As will be discussed below, Floyd's FASD is a "brain-based, congenial, lifelong, 9 impactful disorder" with corresponding adaptive functioning deficits analogous to 10 "Intellectual Disability (ID) Equivalence," making him ineligible for the death
11 penalty. Ex. 2 at ¶9, ¶32.

12 1. Brief Summary of FASD

13 A fetus is susceptible to damage from alcohol exposure throughout the 14 mother's pregnancy. Prenatal alcohol exposure typically causes widespread 15 structural damage throughout the fetus' brain. Ex. 2 at ¶14. Alcohol exposure
16 during pregnancy is a major known cause of birth defects, neurodevelopmental 17 disorders, and learning disabilities. Id.

18 The toxic effects of prenatal alcohol exposure are widespread throughout the 19 brain causing potent irregularities in brain structure that compromise the brain
20 function and impact cognition and behavior. Ex. 2 at ¶14.

21 FASD is an umbrella term that encompasses all the medical conditions
22 caused by prenatal alcohol exposure described in the diagnostic guidelines

1 published in 1996 by the Institute of Medicine. Ex. 2 at ¶14 (fetal alcohol syndrome
2 (FAS), partial FAS, alcohol related neurodevelopmental disorder (ARND), and 3 alcohol related birth defects (ARBD)). Under the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual
4 of Mental Disorders 5 (DSM-5), the term FASD also includes the diagnosis for the 5 Central Nervous System (CNS) dysfunction due to prenatal alcohol exposure:
6 neurodevelopmental disorder associated with prenatal alcohol exposure (ND-7 PAE/FASD). Id. This diagnosis requires evidence of prenatal alcohol exposure, at 8 least one impairment in neurocognitive functioning, at least one impairment in self-9 regulation, and at least two domains of adaptive impairment. Id.

10 Organic brain damage in FASD directly impairs the cognitive skills needed to 11 think adequately and self-regulate one's behavior. Ex. 2 at ¶19. In turn, cognitive 12 dysfunction in FASD impairs adaptive functioning. Id. Of the many possible 13 cognitive impairments in FASD, executive dysfunction is the most serious because 14 the executive system controls self-regulation, conscious decision-making, and 15 everyday adaptive behavior. Ex. 2 at ¶14. Prenatal exposure creates 16 hypersensitivity to stress via faulty neurological hard-wiring of the hypothalamic-17 pituitary-adrenal system which causes chronic overreaction to stressful events. Id.
18 But because of the executive functioning deficits, individuals with FASD lack the 19 top-down moderating influence of a fully functioning prefrontal cortex. Id. As a 20 result, those with FASD are prone to act out their emotions, particularly in high 21 stress everyday situations. Id.

1 It is not surprising then that a deficient adaptive profile is a universal 2 finding in persons with FASD. The DSM-5 defines adaptive functioning as 3 everyday behavior that meets developmental and sociocultural standards for 4 personal independence and social responsibility. Ex. 2 at ¶14.

5 2. Floyd Suffers From ND-PAE/FASD

6 Floyd meets the current diagnosis under the DSM-5 for the CNS impairment
7 in FASD. Ex. 2 at ¶24, ¶25, ¶28.

8 First, Floyd's mother has a well-documented history of drinking while 9 pregnant with Floyd. Ex. 2 at ¶24.

10 Second, testing from 1989, 2000, and 2006 demonstrates that Floyd suffers 11 from neurocognitive impairments in four areas (although only one area is needed for 12 a diagnosis): sub-test discrepancies in intellectual testing; complex visuospatial 13 memory deficits; academic learning disabilities; and deficits in visuospatial
14 construction. Ex. 2 at ¶19, ¶24.

15 Third, Floyd suffers from impairments in three areas of self-regulation
16 (although only one is needed): attention, impulse control, and problem solving. Ex. 2 17 at ¶24.

18 Fourth, Floyd suffers from adaptive impairments in four areas (although only 19 two are needed): communication, daily living skills, socialization, and motor 20 coordination. Ex. 2 at ¶18, ¶24.

21 Further, Floyd's FASD is long standing from childhood and his FASD causes 22 clinically significant distress or impairment in social, occupational, or other 23

1 important areas of functioning. Ex. 2 at ¶24. And finally, Floyd's FASD is not better
2 explained by the direct physiological effects of postnatal use of a substance, a 3 general medical condition other than FASD, a genetic condition, or environmental 4 neglect. Id.

5 Floyd also suffers from secondary disabilities from his FASD. According to 6 studies, children with FASD are at a very high risk of negative developmental 7 outcomes. Ex. 2 at ¶22. In Floyd's case, the secondary disabilities include disrupted 8 education, mental health problems, substance abuse, employment problems, and 9 dependent living. Id.

10 3. FASD is ID Equivalent from the Perspective of Floyd's Moral 11 Culpability

12 FASD and ID are both classified by DSM-5 as neurodevelopmental disorders
13 meaning both disorders typically: (1) manifest early in development, often before 14 grade school; (2) are characterized by developmental deficits that produce 15 impairments of personal, social, academic, or occupational functioning; and (3)
16 involve a range of developmental deficits that vary from the very specific limitations 17 of learning or control of executive functions to global impairments of social skills or 18 intelligence. Ex. 2 at ¶26.

19 DSM-5 diagnoses can be classified by disability severity. One way to measure 20 disability severity is by definitional complexity: the number of domains that must 21 be impaired under the DSM-5 to meet diagnostic criteria. ID and FASD are similar 22 in that both require five diagnostic elements: neurocognitive deficit (executive

1 function); adaptive function deficits; deficits that significantly interfere with 2 functioning; and deficits that constitute a lifelong disorder. Ex. 2 at ¶30.
3 Further, the adaptive functioning component is a more stringent requirement for 4 FASD (impairments in two categories) while ID only requires one impaired adaptive 5 domain. Id.

6 Disability severity also can be compared in terms of how extensively a 7 disorder typically impairs functional capacity. FASD impairs nineteen domains of 8 functional capacity while ID impairs twenty-one. Thus, both are similar in terms of 9 widespread functional deficiency in both cognition and adaptive functioning. Ex. 2 10 at ¶30.

11 Another way of looking at disability severity is the risk of adverse 12 developmental outcomes, including secondary disabilities. Individuals with FASD 13 are at a much greater risk of a negative developmental trajectory than those with 14 ID: FASD has negative developmental outcomes in nineteen areas while ID has 15 negative developmental outcomes in only nine areas. Ex. 2 at ¶30. ID is a mild 16 severity disability compared to FASD in terms of negative life course outcomes. Id.
17 However, most people with FASD and ID cannot live independently in society as 18 adults. Id.

19 Whether measured by definitional complexity, functional capacity, or 20 outcome risk, FASD is equal to and in some cases a more severe disorder than ID.
21 Thus, FASD is deserving of being viewed under the category of “ID Equivalence.”
22 Ex. 2 at ¶31.

1 Both ID and FASD stem from permanent structural brain damage. Ex. 2 at 2 ¶31. Typically, ID is diagnosed by a single provider (mental health provider or 3 pediatrician) and requires relatively minimal testing (IQ and adaptive assessment).
4 Id. FASD on the other hand is diagnosed by a multidisciplinary team comprised of a 5 neuropsychologist, adaptive functioning specialist, and a medical doctor to access 6 physical indicia of FASD. Thus, FASD requires more resources to diagnose. Id.

7 While IQ distinguishes ID from FASD in the majority of FASD individuals, 8 executive and everyday functioning in both conditions tends to be identical.
9 Significant discrepancies in IQ domains are seen frequently in persons with FASD, 10 as is the case here with Floyd, which makes full scale IQ an inaccurate way to 11 classify functional deficiency in FASD. Ex. 2 at ¶19, ¶31. Full scale IQ also has 12 become less important in ID, according to the DSM-5, as “intellectual deficiency now 13 is defined as a broad array of mixed impairments that mostly involve executive 14 dysfunction.” Id. Further, executive functioning tends to be universally impaired in 15 FASD as well as ID. Id.

16 Both ID and FASD have an adaptive impairment diagnostic criteria in the 17 DSM-5 (one deficient domain for ID and two deficient domains for FASD), making 18 individuals with FASD and ID indistinguishable in terms of everyday behavior. Ex.
19 2 at ¶31.

20 Of particular interest is that FASD is the leading cause of ID and is 21 misdiagnosed or undiagnosed more than ID. Ex. 2 at ¶31. In children with FASD, 22 average or low-average IQs in the context of learning disabilities, self-regulation

1 problems, social deficits, and interpersonal difficulties often lead teachers and 2 providers to attribute the difficulties to parenting deficiency. Id. Thus FASD is very 3 much a hidden disability. Id.

4 Symptom manifestation in both FASD and ID is lifelong and permanent. Ex.
5 2 at ¶31. With regard to ID, symptom course remains relatively stable over the 6 developmental years into adulthood, but FASD symptoms become more complex
7 and debilitating, leading to greater adaptive severity into adulthood. Id.

8 Life expectancy in males in the general population is seventy-six years. Ex. 2
9 at ¶31. For males with ID, life expectancy is seventy-four years and it is only thirty-
10 four years with FASD. Thus, FASD has a greatly increased risk of mortality 11 compared to ID. Id.

1 4. Summary

2 Floyd’s FASD diagnosis under the DSM-5, ND-PAE, is a brain-based, life-
3 long impactful disorder deserving of the classification “ID Equivalence.” Regardless 4 of how severity is measured—definitional complexity, diagnostic protocol, functional 5 capacity, risk of negative outcomes, cognitive dysfunction, adaptive dysfunction,
6 comorbidity, likelihood of misdiagnosis, lifetime course, or mortality—Floyd’s FASD
7 is similar to ID with broad ramifications that have affected all important functional 8 domains in his life. Ex. 2 at ¶32. Thus, like the categorical exclusion of an 9 individual with ID to capital punishment, Atkins, 536 U.S. at 320–21,¹ here, Floyd’s
10 FASD too should make him ineligible for the death penalty. Because of his FASD, 11 Floyd’s execution would constitute cruel or unusual punishment.

12 The execution of a person such as Floyd who suffers from FASD is prejudicial
13 per se, and no additional showing of prejudice is required. Therefore, this Court 14 must permanently set aside his death sentence and refuse to sign the warrant for 15 his execution that has been sought by the State. Floyd’s case should therefore be set 16 for resentencing where the death penalty is not a sentencing option.

19 20
21 ¹ The Atkins Court found that the consensus against executing individuals 22 with intellectual disability “unquestionably reflects widespread judgment about the 23 relative culpability of mentally retarded offenders, and the relationship between mental retardation and the penological purposes served by the death penalty.
Additionally, it suggests that some characteristics of mental retardation undermine the strength of the procedural protections that our capital jurisprudence steadfastly guards.” Atkins, 536 U.S. at 317.

1 B. Floyd is Ineligible for Execution Because of His Age at the Time of the 2 Incident

3 In Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 578 (2005), the Supreme Court
4 established a categorical rule forbidding the execution of offenders under the age of 5 eighteen when their crimes were committed. The Court relied in large part on three 6 “general differences” between juveniles under eighteen and adults, “demonstrat[ing]
7 that juvenile offenders cannot with reliability be classified among the worst
8 offenders.” Id. at 569. Pointing to scientific and sociological studies, the Court noted 9 that juveniles exhibit a “lack of maturity and an underdeveloped sense of 10 responsibility,” which “often result in impetuous and ill-considered actions and 11 decisions.” Id.

12 The Court in Roper also recognized juveniles are “more vulnerable or 13 susceptible to negative influences and outside pressures, including peer pressure.”
14 Id. Finally, the Court explained “the character of a juvenile is not as well formed as 15 that of an adult.” Id. at 570 (personality traits of juveniles more transitory, less 16 fixed). Noting “the death penalty is reserved for a narrow category of crimes and 17 offenders,” the Court concluded that juveniles under the age of eighteen simply 18 “cannot with reliability be classified among the worst offenders.” Id. at 568-69.

19 In addition to the lesser culpability of juvenile offenders, the Court adopted a 20 categorical exemption from the death penalty because the status as a juvenile 21 prevents the finder of fact from giving full effect to mitigation evidence. See Roper, 22 543 U.S. at 573 (“An unacceptable likelihood exists that the brutality or cold-
23 blooded nature of any particular crime would overpower mitigating arguments

1 based on youth as a matter of course, even where the juvenile offender's objective
2 immaturity, vulnerability, and lack of true depravity should require a sentence less
3 severe than death."). The Eighth Amendment requires a reliable and individualized
4 decision in capital cases. See Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 605 (1978) (plurality
5 opinion) (Burger, C.J., Stewart, Powell, Stevens, JJ.). This individualized decision 6 precludes the introduction of factors that create "the risk that the death penalty will 7 be imposed in spite of factors which may call for a less severe penalty." Id. Only by 8 ensuring that the sentencer considers and gives effect to a capital defendant's
9 mitigation evidence can a court ensure the Eighth Amendment's right to a reliable 10 sentencing determination. Id.

11 Extending Roper to Floyd, who committed the offense at age twenty-three, is 12 required under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. Indeed, Roper itself was 13 an extension of Thompson v. Oklahoma, which precluded the execution of offenders 14 under the age of sixteen. See Roper, 543 U.S. at 561-62 (discussing Thompson v.
15 Oklahoma, 487 U.S. 815 (1988)). Although Roper drew a cut-off at age eighteen, the 16 rationale of Roper extends to individuals age twenty-three because the human brain 17 continues to develop beyond the age of eighteen. Even Roper recognized "[t]he 18 qualities that distinguish juveniles from adults do not disappear when an individual 19 turns 18." Id. at 574. This reasoning is particularly applicable to individuals like 20 Floyd whose cognitive functioning is actually below that of their chronological age.
21 Ex. 2 at ¶41.

1 Born with widespread brain damage, people with FASD exhibit abnormal
2 and delayed brain maturation across the developmental years. Ex. 2 at ¶38. Studies
3 have found that significant maturation alterations and delays in the prefrontal
4 cortex and its microstructure in children, adolescents, and adults with prenatal 5 alcohol exposure compared to normally developing age peers. Id. Compared with 6 normal changes in brain structure during adolescence that improve speed and 7 efficiency of neurochemical communication, research finds that individuals with 8 prenatal alcohol exposure show: (1) blunted volume changes in grey matter in 9 adolescence, indicating compromised pruning and diminished plasticity in the 10 cerebral cortex, as well as (2) delayed white matter myelination. Id. Together these 11 two brain development abnormalities in individuals with prenatal alcohol exposure 12 significantly impair global network efficiency, speed of information processing, and 13 executive self-regulation. Id.

14 Other studies show the following with respect to individuals exposed to 15 prenatal exposure: normal processes of brain maturation were significantly delayed 16 or disrupted in children and adolescents; smaller volumes in structure throughout 17 the brain, with significantly different trajectories of brain activation in visuospatial 18 attention and working memory tasks; smaller total brain volume as well as smaller 19 volume of both white and grey and white matter in specific cortical regions;
20 alternations in the shape and volume of the corpus callosum, as well as small 21 volume in the basal ganglia and hippocampi; reduced functional connectivity
22 between cortical and deep grey matter structures; impaired white matter integrity

1 in communication tracts throughout the brain throughout development; and 2 abnormalities in white matter pathways important in self-regulation. Ex. 2 at ¶¶39-3 40.²

4 Given the normally-developing adolescent brain does not have mature
5 executive control capacity until at least the age of twenty-five and brain
6 development in young adults with FASD lag many years behind rates seen in 7 neurotypical age peers, it is likely that Floyd's brain was not fully developed at the 8 time of the offense due to his ND-PAE/FASD, which would have had an additive 9 and cumulative effect on the brain damage he was born with. Ex. 2 at ¶41. Because 10 Floyd was twenty-three at the time of the offenses, he is categorically exempt from 11 the death penalty under the rational of Roper.

12 Allowing a person like Floyd who is categorically exempt from the death 13 penalty to remain on death row is prejudicial per se and would constitute cruel or 14 unusual punishment. Floyds' death sentence must be vacated and permanently set 15 aside.

1 C. Cruel or Unusual Punishment

2 The Nevada Supreme Court has long recognized its ability to find greater 3 constitutional protections under the state constitution than under the federal 4 constitution. See, e.g., State v. Kincade, 129 Nev. 953, 956, 317 P.3d 206, 208 (2013)
5 (“states are permitted to provide broader protections and rights than provided by 6 the U.S. Constitution.”).³ Here, especially, there is cause to construe the Nevada
7 Constitution’s provision more broadly than its federal counterpart: the Nevada
8 Constitution independently prohibits cruel punishments and unusual punishments.
9 Compare Nev. Const. art. 1, § 6 (prohibiting “cruel or unusual” punishments) with written to address the concerns of Nevada citizens and tailored to Nevada’s unique regional location, is a source of protection for individual rights that is independent of and supplemental to the protections provided by the Federal Constitution.”).

19 Indeed, federal judges have emphasized that state constitutions may offer
20 broader protections than the federal constitution. Jeffrey S. Sutton, 51 Imperfect
21 Solutions: States and the Making of American Constitutional Law 16 (2018) (“State 22 courts have authority to construe their own constitutional provisions however they wish. Nothing compels the state courts to imitate federal interpretations of the liberty and property guarantees found in the U.S. Constitution when it comes to the rights guarantees found in their own constitutions, even guarantees that match the federal ones letter for letter.”); William J. Brennan, State Constitutions and the 23 Protection of Individual Rights, 90 Harv. L. Rev. 489, 491 (1977) (“State constitutions, too, are a font of individual liberties, their protections often extending

1 CLAIM TWO: Denial of Due Process from Deprivation of Opportunity to Seek
2 Clemency

3 Zane Floyd's death sentence is invalid under state and federal constitutional
4 guarantees of due process, equal protection, a reliable sentence, and freedom from 5 cruel and/or unusual punishments because he has been deprived of an opportunity
6 to seek clemency before the Pardon's Board. U.S. Const. amends V, VI, VIII, XIV;
7 Nev. Const. Art. I, § 1, 5, 6, 8; Art. 4, § 21; 5, § 13, 14; NRS 176.425.

8 SUPPORTING FACTS

9 Article 5, Section 14(2) of the Nevada Constitution allows the Board of 10 Pardons to commute Zane Floyd's death sentence to a sentence of life without the 11 possibility of parole. For Floyd to be able to vindicate his right to seek commutation 12 of his sentence he must be afforded a meaningful opportunity to investigate and 13 present his case for clemency to the Pardons Board.

14 Floyd has been deprived of the opportunity to seek commutation of his death 15 sentence. At the time the U.S. Supreme Court denied his petition for writ of 16 certiorari, Floyd faced circumstances beyond his control due to the COVID-19 17 pandemic that have prevented him from conducting the investigative and other 18 work necessary to submit a clemency petition. Floyd has not been permitted in 19 person visitation with his counsel since March 16, 2020, when the Nevada
20 Department of Corrections (NDOC) halted all in person visitation at state prisons.
21 At the present time, NDOC still does not permit in person visitation and it is 22 unlikely that it will be permitted before the inmates at Ely State Prison have been 23 fully vaccinated. The inability to conduct in person visitation means Floyd has also

1 been deprived of the ability to receive a mental health evaluation to submit as part 2 of his clemency petition. Cf. NRS 176.425 (noting right to medical and mental 3 health expert assistance to determine sanity for execution).

4 Moreover, the COVID-19 pandemic has prevented counsel for Floyd from 5 conducting the field investigation necessary to complete a clemency petition. The 6 witnesses that have been identified by counsel for interviews reside mainly outside
7 the state. Counsel for Floyd began to plan and prioritize the work that was required
8 for Floyd's clemency investigation well before the start of the pandemic. The team
9 identified twenty-five witnesses that needed to be interviewed on Floyd's behalf. It
10 was decided in February 2020 that witness interviews would commence in April 11 2020, but those plans were derailed by COVID-19 related shelter-in-place
12 directives, travel restrictions, and closures both here in Nevada and in other states.
13 Ex. 3 at ¶5.

14 During the summer when COVID-19 numbers were lower, witnesses in the 15 local Las Vegas area were interviewed with proper safety measures in place.
16 However, the other witnesses lived in Arizona, California, Colorado, Michigan, 17 Missouri, Texas, and Washington, where the rates of infection were high during and 18 following the summer run-up. Further, the pandemic rendered air travel a serious 19 health risk not only to the employees of the FPD but also to the witnesses that 20 counsel wished to interview. Ex. 3 at ¶¶5-7.

21 When COVID-19 cases began to trend downward, some out of state travel
22 was accomplished in Texas and Arizona. However, the other out-of-state witness

1 interviews had to be cancelled in the late Fall and Winter due to the tremendous
2 spike in COVID-19 related illnesses and death and the inability to travel safely. Ex.
3 3 at ¶¶8-9. Presently, counsel for Floyd has determined the need to interview and 4 memorialize statements from over fifteen witnesses, located in five states. Ex. 3 at 5 ¶13.

6 As discussed above, at the time Floyd's federal litigation against his 7 conviction and death sentence concluded, the COVID-19 pandemic prevented his 8 counsel from conducting the field investigation necessary to support a clemency
9 petition. As demonstrated by the chart below, the daily number of new COVID cases
10 escalated to approximately 2,500 per day in the October 2020-January 2021 period:

18 America is Reopening. But Have We Flattened the Curve?, Johns Hopkins
19 University & Medicine, Coronavirus Resource Center, [https://coronavirus.jhu.edu/
20 data/new-cases-50-states/nevada](https://coronavirus.jhu.edu/data/new-cases-50-states/nevada) (last visited March 29, 2021). While the number of 21 new cases have been trending downwards since January, there were 447 new cases
22 on March 25, 2021, which is above the seven-day moving average of 252. Id.

1 Further, in the last weeks, Nevada’s Covid-19 metrics have remained elevated 2 compared to recent lows. [https://www.reviewjournal.com/news/politics-and-3 government/nevada/nevada-covid-19-metrics-remain-at-elevated-levels-over-recent-

5 The impediments identified above by the COVID-19 pandemic have been 6 uniformly acknowledged by both the State and the state and federal courts as 7 extraordinary circumstances warranting continuances to ensure meaningful access 8 to the courts. For example, the Clark County District Attorney’s Office and the 9 Nevada Attorney General’s Office have both acknowledged the COVID-19 pandemic
10 warrants extensions of time to conduct field investigation. See, e.g., Nunnery v.
11 Gittere, Stipulation and Order to Vacate August 26, 2020 Hearing and Set Status

14 “amid the COVID-19 Pandemic”); Nunnery v. Gittere, Stipulation and Order to 15 Vacate February 3, 2021 Hearing and Set Status Check on the Status of Petitioner’s 16 Investigation, Case No. A-20-817636-W (filed January 25, 2021) (same); Biela v.

19 opposition to capital petitioner’s “motion for equitable tolling through July 1, 2021”).
20 The state and federal courts have similarly issued orders granting extensions of 21 time due to the pandemic. See id.; Biela v. Gittere, Case No. 3:20-cv-00026-GMN-
22 WGC, Order Granting Motion for Equitable Tolling (filed December 1, 2020),

3 Proceeding with Floyd’s execution now before he has had an opportunity to 4 file a clemency petition and to be heard by the Pardon’s Board violates his state and 5 federal rights to due process of law.

6 “It is an unalterable fact that our judicial system, like the human beings who 7 administer it, is fallible.” Herrera v. Collins, 506 U.S. 390, 415 (1993). The US
8 Supreme Court has found that “some minimal procedural safeguards apply to 9 clemency proceedings.” Ohio Adult Parole Auth. v. Woodard, 523 U.S. 272, 289
10 (1998) (O’Connor, J., concurring). “Executive clemency [provides] the ‘fail safe’ in 11 our criminal justice system,” and is never more important than when the request for 12 clemency involves an impending execution.” Herrera, 506 U.S. at 415 (quoting K.
13 Moore, Pardons: Justice, Mercy, and the Public Interest 131 (1989)).

14 “[T]he fundamental requirement of due process is the opportunity to be heard 15 at a meaningful time and in a meaningful manner.” Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S.
16 319, 333 (1976) (internal quotation marks omitted). Mathews identifies three 17 factors courts should consider in evaluating the requirements of due process:

18 First, the private interest that will be 19 affected by the official action; second, the risk of an 20 erroneous deprivation of such interest through the 21 procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of 22 additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and 23 finally, the Government’s interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would entail.

Id. at 335.

1 The Supreme Court has recognized that “process is not an end in itself” and 2 “its constitutional purpose is to protect a substantive interest to which the 3 individual has a legitimate claim of entitlement,” Olim v. Wakinekona, 461 U.S.
4 238,250 (1983).

5 Floyd’s interest in seeking clemency is a compelling interest as it is a crucial 6 fail-safe mechanism to guard against arbitrary and capricious state action. The 7 deprivation of Floyd’s life through a state-sanctioned execution is irrevocable. And 8 he has not received even minimal procedural due process protections given that the 9 Pardons Board’s next quarterly meeting is not scheduled to occur next until 10 June 22, 2021. <http://pardons.nv.gov/Meetings/>.

11 The denial of an opportunity to seek clemency also violates Floyd’s
12 constitutional right to equal protection under the laws. By scheduling Floyd’s
13 execution amid the COVID-19 pandemic, the state arbitrarily abridges the process
14 by which Floyd’s petition for clemency may be pursued. Such a process unfairly 15 affords the protections of process to some but not others-namely, affording 16 significantly more process to those scheduled for execution prior to the COVID-19
17 pandemic than those scheduled for execution during the COVID-19 pandemic.

18 By scheduling Floyd’s execution in the midst of a pandemic, the state
19 deprives Floyd of the process historically afforded to death row prisoners to pursue 20 clemency. The Fourteenth Amendment’s guarantee of equal protection is violated
21 where “discrimination reflects no policy, but simply arbitrary and capricious action.”
22 Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 226 (1962). “The touchstone of due process is protection

1 of the individual against arbitrary action of government.” Wolff v. McDonnell, 418
2 U.S. 539, 558 (1974). Procedural due process and substantive due process are 3 separate and independent mandates of the Fourteenth Amendment. Brown v.
4 Supreme Court of Nevada, 476 F. Supp. 86, 89 (D. Nev. 1979). Denial of adequate 5 process, applied unevenly, has been recognized as a cognizable claim under the 6 Fourteenth Amendment. See, e.g., Duncan v. State of LA., 391 U.S. 145, 148 (1968);
7 Daniel v. State, 119 Nev. 498, 517, 78 P.3d 890, 903 (2003).

8 Floyd will be denied equal protection as he has not received the same process 9 that other death row prisoners have been afforded to pursue clemency. The 10 circumstances presented by the COVID-19 pandemic have prevented counsel from 11 conducting the investigation needed to develop a factual record supporting 12 clemency.

1 The deprivation of an opportunity to seek clemency before the Board is 2 prejudicial per se. In the alternative, the State cannot demonstrate beyond a 3 reasonable doubt that the deprivation of an opportunity to seek clemency is 4 harmless.

DECLARATION OF NATALIE NOVICK BROWN, Ph.D.

I, Natalie Novick Brown, know and believe:

1. I practice as a psychologist and am licensed in Washington State and Florida. I also am a certified Evaluator for the Department of Corrections and Division of Developmental Disabilities in Washington State.

2. I specialize in the evaluation and treatment of individuals with fetal alcohol impairment. My training in this field began in 1994 when I accepted a postdoctoral fellowship with Dr. Ann Streissguth at the University of Washington. Dr. Streissguth is a pioneer researcher in Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) and Fetal Alcohol Effects (FAE), which are now referred to as "Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders," or FASD. Up until her retirement earlier this year, Dr. Streissguth was the director of the University's Fetal Alcohol and Drug Unit as well as a prolific research scientist and highly respected international expert in the FASD field. After completing a year of training and research in 1995, I began evaluating and treating youth and adults with FASD or suspected FASD. I estimate that since 1995, I have evaluated and treated approximately 300 children and adults affected by prenatal alcohol exposure. In addition, I currently hold a faculty position at the University of Washington as Clinical Assistant Professor in the Fetal Alcohol and Drug Unit, Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Medicine. In this position, I consult with staff at the Fetal Alcohol and Drug Unit and screen for fetal alcohol impairment in adults and juveniles referred by the Drug and Mental Health Courts in King County (Seattle), Washington. I also evaluate and diagnose individuals referred by the Division of Developmental Disabilities who may have fetal alcohol impairment. I currently provide individual therapy to a caseload of fetal alcohol impaired youth in an effort to prevent adverse life outcomes and to a caseload of adults with FASD, many of whom are sex offenders in Washington State's Community Protection Program. Over the last 12 years, I have published articles and lectured on the behavioral and developmental effects of prenatal alcohol exposure. In the course of this work, I have attended diagnostic trainings and reviewed many medical evaluations involving FASD diagnoses and am quite familiar with the diagnostic criteria and process of evaluation. Thus, I have developed expertise in FASD through a combination of study, practice, and research.

3. I was retained by the Las Vegas Federal Public Defender, Capital Habeas Unit, to examine records related to Zane Floyd's case. I was asked specifically to determine if he met criteria for an FASD diagnosis, address how the condition might impact a child's functioning in general, and explain how this disorder likely affected Zane Floyd's functioning both as a child and as an adult.

4. I reviewed trial testimony from Tracie Carter, Robert Jay Hall, Zach Emenegger, Dr. Mortillaro, Dr. Dougherty, Dr. Roitman, Jorge L. Abreu, and Minoru Aoki. I also reviewed Voluntary Statements from Zane Floyd and Paulina Atomah and the trial allocution of Zane Floyd.

Declaration: Natalie Novick Brown

5. I reviewed summaries of medical interventions involving Valerie Floyd's consumption of alcohol and her drug-related activities. I reviewed Zane Floyd's school records from Princess Ann Elementary, Virginia Beach, Virginia; Boulder Bluff Elementary School, Goose Creek, South Carolina; Marrington Elementary, Charleston, South Carolina; Ellicott Elementary, Ellicott School District, Calhan, Colorado; McClelland Center for Child Study, Pueblo, Colorado; Haaff School, Pueblo, Colorado; various schools in the Clark County School District, Las Vegas, Nevada; Faith Lutheran High School, Las Vegas, Nevada; and records from the Community College of Southern Nevada. I reviewed military records from Zane Floyd's time in the Marines.

6. I reviewed evaluations conducted in 2000 along with the raw data from Frank E. Paul, Ph.D.; David L. Schmidt, Ph.D.; and Edward J. Dougherty, Ed.D. I reviewed an evaluation and raw data from tests conducted in 1989 by Maria J.P. Cardle, Ph.D. I reviewed reports published in 1999 and 2000 by Dr. Jacob O. Camp, M.D. I reviewed the 2000 report by Dr. Thomas F. Kinsora, Ph.D., who critiqued Dr. Schmidt's and Dr. Cardle's reports. I reviewed Dr. Jonathan Mack's 2006 findings of organic brain damage during his examination of Zane Floyd. I also reviewed schoolwork and over 50 photographs of Zane Floyd as an infant and young child.

7. FASD is a permanent birth defect caused by maternal consumption of alcohol during pregnancy. Alcohol is a teratogen that inhibits and disrupts fetal development by causing structural and functional damage to developing organs and systems, including the brain and central nervous system. The damage starts at the cellular level, where ethanol may induce excessive cell death and disrupt cell responses to molecules that regulate neuron proliferation, migration, and differentiation. Because alcohol causes widespread damage throughout the fetus, there is a broad array of physical anomalies and neurobehavioral defects. Hence, the condition is often referred to as a "syndrome." The most serious and pervasive damage occurs in the central nervous system (CNS). Brain imaging studies over the last decade have shown that prenatal alcohol exposure causes significant malformation in structures within the brain (e.g., corpus collosum, basal ganglia, cerebellum) that are necessary for normal development and functioning (e.g., Bookstein et al., 2001, 2002a, 2002b).

8. Fetal Alcohol Syndrome was first recognized and discussed in a public paper by researchers at the University of Washington in 1973 (Jones & Smith, 1973). In addition to a determination of maternal alcohol consumption, these researchers identified three diagnostic features associated with the syndrome: 1) pre- and/or postnatal growth deficiency, 2) a characteristic set of facial anomalies (referred to as "facial dysmorphology"), and 3) CNS damage/dysfunction. Several years later, a study of alcohol related damage in the central nervous system suggested that structural brain damage might be the basis for many of the neurodevelopmental abnormalities classified under the broader heading of "CNS dysfunction" (Clarren & Smith, 1978).

9. By 1978, after more than 250 published case reports, it was clear that FAS was only one of several identifiable disorders associated with maternal alcohol abuse. Hence, the term Fetal Alcohol Effects, or FAE, was developed to classify additional manifestations (Clarren & Smith, 1978). While individuals with FAE did not display all three of the primary facial abnormalities associated with FAS (i.e., short palpebral fissures, flat philtrum, and thin upper lip), research consistently showed that compared to individuals diagnosed with FAS, those with FAE could suffer from as many or more of the neurodevelopmental deficits (Streissguth & O'Malley, 2000). Thus, even without facial evidence of FAS, the brain damage and resulting cognitive-behavioral problems can be as severe in individuals with FAE as in those with FAS.

10. Diagnostic labels applied to fetal alcohol impairment have changed over time to reflect increasing diagnostic precision. For example, in 1996, there was refinement in the diagnosis by the Institute of Medicine (IOM) to include five categories of diagnosis: Type 1: FAS With Confirmed Maternal Alcohol Exposure; Type 2: FAS Without Confirmed Maternal Alcohol Exposure; Type 3: Partial FAS With Confirmed Maternal Alcohol Exposure; Type 4: Alcohol-related Birth Defects; and Type 5: Alcohol-Related Neurodevelopmental Disorder. FAS Type 1 is the "classic" FAS diagnosis and includes all four of the features typically associated with the syndrome: a) confirmed maternal alcohol exposure, b) characteristic facial abnormalities or dysmorphology, c) pre- and/or postnatal growth retardation, and d) evidence of central nervous system neurodevelopmental abnormalities. FAS Type 2 has all of these features except confirmed maternal alcohol exposure. FAS Type 3 is differentiated from FAS Type 1 by virtue of the fact that only some of the facial abnormalities are present, and in addition to confirmed prenatal alcohol exposure, the individual manifests growth retardation, evidence of CNS neurodevelopmental abnormalities, and a complex pattern of behavioral or cognitive abnormalities that are inconsistent with developmental level and cannot be explained by familial background or environment alone (e.g., learning difficulties, deficits in school performance, poor impulse control, problems in social perception, language deficits, poor capacity for abstraction, specific deficits in mathematical skills, and problems in memory, attention, or judgment). FAS Type 4 (Alcohol-Related Birth Defects, or ARBD) requires confirmed maternal alcohol exposure and one or more congenital defects including malformations and dysplasias of the heart, bone, kidney, vision, or hearing systems. FAS Type 5 requires confirmed maternal alcohol exposure, CNS neurodevelopmental abnormalities, and/or a complex pattern of behavioral or cognitive deficits.

11. The facial dysmorphology associated with FASD is seen in only a minority of cases and, typically, only in young children before they enter puberty. Malformation of the face reflects alcohol consumption during the first trimester of pregnancy when facial features are being formed. However, the brain and central nervous system are being formed throughout the full nine months of pregnancy. Thus, alcohol consumption at any point during gestation can cause brain damage.

12. FASD is diagnosed on Axis 3 by dysmorphologists, pediatricians, other medical doctors, and psychologists – sometimes individually and sometimes as part of a multidisciplinary team. While there is now increased specificity by researchers and governmental agencies regarding the various manifestations of FASD, the same cannot be said for diagnosticians. Consequently, FASD diagnoses may be referred to as Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, Fetal Alcohol Effects, Partial FAS (PFAS), Alcohol-Related Neurodevelopmental Disorder (ARND), Alcohol-Related Birth Defects (ARBD), Static Encephalopathy, or by the umbrella term, Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder (FASD). Although

Streissguth and O'Malley (2000) recently proposed psychiatric nomenclature to broadly categorize all manifestations of fetal alcohol impairment under the nomenclature "fetal alcohol spectrum disorders," or FASD, and include the diagnosis as a mental health disorder in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM-IV), this change has not yet been made.

13. While the labels have become more precise and perhaps more confusing, the original diagnostic criteria for FASD established in 1973 have changed very little over time, even after being reconsidered by other groups such as the Fetal Alcohol Study Group of the Research Society on Alcoholism (1980s), the Institute of Medicine (1990s), and the Center for Disease Control (2000). Thus, by the time of Zane Floyd's trial in 2000, which was five years after I completed my FASD postdoctoral fellowship, the syndrome was definitely not a new or novel concept to medicine or psychology.

14. Research has shown that prenatal alcohol exposure causes structural brain damage that affects functioning in the frontal lobe of the brain, particularly the prefrontal cortex, an area that is especially sensitive to the teratogenic effects of ethanol (e.g., Bookstein et al., 2002). Brain imaging research has found that prenatal alcohol exposure seems to target the corpus collosum in particular and is associated with a pattern of deficits in executive functioning in individuals diagnosed with FAS/FAE (Bookstein et al., 2001). Executive functions, which control impulses and channel them into pro-social rather than antisocial behavior, involve cognitive skills such as perception, social awareness, organization, planning, internal ordering, working memory, self-monitoring, inhibition, motor control, regulation of emotion, and motivation. Appropriate socialization depends on intact basic cognitive functioning (Connor et al., 2000). When executive functions are compromised by prenatal alcohol exposure or other sources of brain damage, an individual will:

- have difficulty perceiving, prioritizing, and storing information,
- have difficulty processing and retrieving that information,
- be unable to generalize and apply consequences from past actions to potential future actions,
- lack motivation and initiative,
- need external motivators such as frequent cues or guidance from others,
- be unable to perceive the effect of his/her actions on others or the social inappropriateness of those actions,
- display exaggerated emotions,
- be unable to control behaviors that stem from emotion-evoked urges, and, consequently,
- engage in a wide range of socially (and often legally) inappropriate behaviors.

15. Based upon my knowledge of FASD and its cognitive-behavioral manifestations and review of the case documents listed above, it is my opinion that Zane Floyd meets criteria for a specific FASD diagnosis of FAS Type 3. According to IOM diagnostic criteria, Type 3 (or Partial FAS With Confirmed Maternal Alcohol Exposure) requires some components of the FAS facial pattern, growth retardation, CNS neurodevelopmental abnormalities (e.g., neurological hard or soft signs such as impaired fine motor skills, poor tandem gait, and/or poor eye-hand coordination), and a pattern of behavioral and/or cognitive abnormalities inconsistent with developmental level and unexplained by genetic background or environmental conditions. These abnormalities include learning difficulties, deficits in school performance, poor impulse control, problems in social perception, language deficits, poor capacity for abstraction, specific deficits in mathematical skills, and problems in memory, attention, or judgment. The diagnosis of FAS Type 3 primarily relies upon data prior to Zane Floyd's adolescence and is fully consistent with diagnoses provided by Dr. Mack, whose neuropsychological testing of Zane Floyd this year revealed the type of organic brain damage that is generally seen in individuals diagnosed with confirmed FASD. (Mack 10/13/06) It should be noted that a diagnosis of FAS Type 3 does not rule out additional mental health disorders, such as Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (which has been diagnosed by multiple providers over the course of Mr. Floyd's life), or diagnoses that were beyond the scope of the current analysis (e.g., Posttraumatic Stress Disorder, Dissociative Disorder, substance abuse disorders, personality disorders).

16. Prenatal alcohol exposure is confirmed by the testimony of Mr. Floyd's birth mother at his trial about her drinking pattern during her pregnancy. Growth deficiency is confirmed by birth records. Facial dysmorphology is confirmed through examination of early childhood photographs. A pattern of neurodevelopmental disorders is confirmed by a variety of sources including medical records, school records, childhood evaluations, and family reports. FAS Type 3 is a diagnosis that accounts for all of Mr. Floyd's neurodevelopmental and cognitive-behavioral problems and his behavioral history, not only during his childhood but also up to the present time.

17. Neurodevelopmental disorders are the overt behavioral manifestation of underlying brain damage, particularly (but not exclusively) in the frontal and prefrontal cortex of the brain where executive functioning is controlled. "Executive functions" is an umbrella term for the primary abilities that enable a person to develop new patterns of behavior and cognition and to introspect upon them. Executive functions are critically important in unfamiliar situations where one doesn't know from experience or training what to do or in situations where established ways of behaving are no longer useful or appropriate. Thus, the term refers to a whole range of adaptive abilities such as creative and abstract thought, introspection, planning, multi-tasking, impulse control, socialization, and many processes related to the control of memory. In other words, executive functions involve all of the skills that enable individuals to analyze what it is they want, determine how they might get it, decide whether their plan is appropriate, and then carry out their intentions, sometimes changing their approach if they realize it is unproductive or yielding unwanted results. It is also widely accepted that executive functions play a critical part in complex social behaviors such as understanding how our actions impact others. Because it is generally thought that the frontal lobes of the brain play a critical role in all of these functions, it is not uncommon to hear people refer (imprecisely) to executive functions as "frontal lobe functions." Intact executive functioning is a prerequisite for appropriate pro-social behavior. While those with intact executive functioning can make choices about their behavior and consider consequences before acting, those with deficient executive skills have no choice. They are able to function only to the level that their impairments permit (Connor et al., 2000).

18. Executive function deficits are observed clinically as neurodevelopmental disorders. In infancy, neurodevelopmental deficits are often first noticed in infants who show early evidence of self-regulation problems (e.g., difficulties in self-soothing or excessive non-reactivity to stimuli), over-sensitivity to environmental stimuli, and difficulty in reciprocal social interaction. An example of the latter is an infant who resists the nurturing touches of a caregiver. Examples of neurodevelopmental disorders in early childhood (i.e., toddlers) include delayed development in motor skills (e.g., delays in sitting, standing, crawling, walking, learning to drink from a cup), in verbal skills, in social skills (i.e., learning how to respond reciprocal in interpersonal interactions within the family), in emotional skills (i.e., emotional self-modulation), and in self-regulation of behavioral pace (e.g., hyperactivity versus apathetic passivity). In the elementary school years, neurodevelopmental disorders may manifest in communication disorders, attention deficits, learning disorders, poor impulse control (i.e., behavioral problems), problems in social perception, interpersonal communication deficits, and problems in working memory. In later childhood, or the middle school years, neurodevelopmental disorders may manifest in abstraction deficits (particularly in mathematics as coursework becomes more complex and less dependent upon rote memorization), impulse control and judgment (e.g., pro-social versus antisocial behavior), and socialization deficits. It is often in the adolescent years that that social skills deficits become obvious to professionals outside the school environment. For example, youth who have not developed the ability to make and keep friends begin gravitating to antisocial youth who accept them into their circle on the basis of willingness to engage in antisocial conduct similar to their own. As in Mr. Floyd's case, this is typically the time when alcohol consumption and drug use begin, and rule-breaking behavior escalates to law-breaking behavior. Once an impaired individual enters puberty, which may be delayed a few years compared to age-peers, neurodevelopmental deficits significantly impact the way FASD-affected youth handle their developing sexuality. Maintaining appropriate sexual boundaries is a complex behavior requiring multiple executive skills, including awareness (e.g., perception and understanding of environmental cues), memory (e.g., retention of knowledge about proper social behavior), self-perception (e.g., ability to perceive whether one's behavior is consistent with social boundaries), other-perception (e.g., ability to detect and appreciate how one's behavior is affecting others), and self-regulation (e.g., ability to stop one's behavior if it goes beyond social boundaries). Most unimpaired children learn social and sexual boundaries by assimilating information gradually from parents, television, movies, social interaction with peers, and other environmental sources. However, if the ability to distinguish between appropriate and inappropriate environmental cues and integrate them into one's behavioral repertoire is compromised by neurodevelopmental deficits in multiple areas, the process can go awry. Consequently, sexual boundary violations – both minor and major -- are frequently seen in individuals with executive function deficits. Zane Floyd's history indicates he is no exception.

19. Prenatal Alcohol Exposure: Birth mother Valerie Floyd confirms prenatal alcohol exposure. During Zane Floyd's trial, Valerie Floyd testified that at the time she became pregnant with her son, she was a "hippie" who abused alcohol and used illegal street drugs. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 154) She testified that her first son died of SIDS, or Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, after she and her husband placed him in the back of their van while they watched a baseball game. The infant's death was reportedly devastating for her, and she began drinking alcohol heavily to cope. She further testified that she became pregnant with her son Zane during this period of heavy drinking. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 152-5) She testified that she drank throughout her pregnancy with Mr. Floyd. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 152, 157) Social worker Jorge Abreu, who conducted a psychosocial evaluation of Mr. Floyd, testified at trial that Valerie Floyd told him her substance abuse began as a teenager and "continued through both pregnancies" (Trial 7/17/00pm, p. 40) and that she was drinking alcohol and using drugs including LSD and cocaine "throughout the pregnancy in both cases" (i.e., in her first pregnancy as well as her pregnancy with Zane Floyd). (Trial 7/17/00pm, p. 41) Mr. Abreu further testified that Valerie Floyd told him her first child died of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome. (Trial 7/17/00pm, p. 45) It should be noted that death from SIDS is associated with prenatal alcohol exposure.

20. Growth Deficiency: Birth records confirm growth deficiency for Zane Floyd. Growth deficiency is defined as confirmed height or weight below the 10th percentile. A birth certificate issued by Elizabeth Knutson Memorial Hospital in Estes Park, Colorado (Birth Certificate, 9/20/75), indicates that Zane Floyd was born September 20, 1975. He was considered six weeks premature (Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 10; DS9419), which placed his birth at the 34th week of gestation. The 40th week of gestation is typically regarded as the "due date." Zane Floyd weighed 4.875 pounds at birth (4 pounds, 14 ounces or 2.2 kg) and was 16.75 inches long (42.5 cm). (Birth Certificate, 9/20/75) His weight was just below the 50th percentile and below the 10th percentile for height (Fenton, 2003). The length measurement meets criteria for FASD growth deficiency.

21. Facial Dysmorphology: Facial dysmorphology is partially confirmed with photographic evidence. Photographs of Zane Floyd when he was an infant and small child display some of the typical facial anomalies associated with FASD. Characteristic features evident in these photos are: small palpebral fissures, ptosis, slight epicanthal folds, elongated upper lip, thin vermilion on upper lip, sunken nasal bridge, short upturned nose, and clown eyebrows.

22. Neurodevelopmental Disorders: Multiple neurodevelopmental disorders are confirmed in Zane Floyd's history by multiple sources of evidence. The data in this assessment not only indicate neurodevelopmental disorders consistent with the type of primary disabilities typically seen in individuals diagnosed with FASD but also pervasive adverse life outcomes because his primary disabilities were not diagnosed and treated. According to research in the 1990s, disabilities stemming from FASD are categorized as either "primary" or "secondary" depending upon whether they are a direct manifestation of central nervous system malfunction (i.e., primary disabilities) or whether they are mediated by environmental influences (i.e., secondary disabilities). "Primary disabilities" are defined as functional deficits that stem directly from the structural brain damage and CNS dysfunction caused by prenatal ethanol exposure (e.g., Streissguth et al., 1996). Individuals with FASD are typically born with some or many of these primary disabilities, which may include deficits in general intelligence (in approximately one-third of affected individuals), learning, attention and activity level (e.g., hyperactivity), communication, socialization, planning and problem solving, and difficulties with adaptive functioning. "Secondary disabilities" are functional deficits that an individual acquires over time that presumably could have been ameliorated if there had been early diagnosis and intervention. Environmental factors exert positive or negative influence on the expression of secondary disabilities but have nothing to do with primary disabilities. However, with effective treatment of primary disabilities, secondary disabilities can be prevented or at least reduced (Streissguth, 1997). Without accurate diagnosis and treatment, secondary disabilities manifest in adolescence and adulthood as extreme problems in psychosocial functioning that lead to adverse life outcomes. Secondary disabilities include mental health problems, disrupted school experience, trouble with the law, confinement, inappropriate sexual behavior, alcohol and drug problems, dependent living, and problems with employment. It was surprising to researchers in the 1990s that a large number of individuals with fetal alcohol impairment displayed secondary disabilities (Streissguth et al., 1996; Streissguth & O'Malley, 2000). For example, 60% had been arrested, charged, and/or convicted of a crime; 50% had been in a confinement setting (i.e., psychiatric hospital, jail, prison, residential substance abuse treatment); and 30% had alcohol or drug abuse problems.

23. Early childhood evidence of neurodevelopmental disorders in Zane Floyd was described by his mother during her testimony at trial. For example, she testified that her son Zane developed slowly as an infant and could not draw circles in school (i.e., motor skill deficits). (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 159-60) When Mr. Floyd was 13, a psychological evaluation dated April 30, 1989, reported neurological disturbance (i.e., "a slight motor tremor") and noted that he was significantly delayed in achieving all of his early childhood developmental milestones. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 1) The evaluation also noted a report by both parents of multiple problems: short attention span, easily frustrated, immature, defensive, noncompliant, overly sensitive, physical aggression with other children, and lying. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 1) Social worker Abreu testified that Mr. Floyd did not begin talking until he was three or four years old (i.e., speech delay), that he shook a lot and his body trembled (i.e., neurological problems), and that he had difficulties with fine motor movement. (Trial 7/17/00pm, p. 50) Mr. Abreu testified that Mr. Floyd was clumsy and would fall often (i.e., gross motor skill deficits). Birth father Michael Floyd testified that his son had problems with hand dominance after beginning school. (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 114) Michael Floyd also testified that his son had difficulties with coordination and motor skills as his hands would shake. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 114) Mr. Floyd's Kindergarten teacher from Princess Anne Elementary School noted he had problems with motor skill coordination in her class. (Princess Ann records) While in kindergarten in Boulder Bluff, his teachers were concerned about his physical coordination and development and noted that he needed to work on fine muscle control in his hands. (Boulder Bluff records)

24. Evidence of neurodevelopmental disorders observed when Mr. Floyd was in elementary school came from several sources as well. His mother reported that he had difficulty focusing and completing tasks. (Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 6; DS9967) Kindergarten reports from Boulder Bluff Elementary School indicated multiple deficits in fine motor skills. (Boulder Bluff records) Mr.

Floyd's teacher noted: "We have been very concerned about Zane's physical coordination and development. It is not what it should be by this time." (Boulder Bluff records) A Kindergarten progress report from the Virginia Beach Public School District noted: "Zane is capable of much more self-control than he demonstrates in class." (Virginia Beach records) A 1st grade progress report from Marrington Elementary School in Charleston, South Carolina, noted: "Zane needs to pay attention and follow directions. He can do much better." (Marrington records) The attached report card noted that he had problems controlling his talking, listening attentively, and following directions. (Marrington records) A 2nd grade progress report from Ellicott Elementary School in Calhan, Colorado, noted a deficiency in expressing ideas clearly. (Ellicott records) School reports from 2nd grade confirm a "very poor" attention span, "poor" fine motor skills, and social/emotional delays ("immaturity, very easily upset and frustrated"). (Ellicott records) In 3rd grade, achievement testing found he was below average in language mechanics. (California Achievement Tests, McClelland Center for Child Study) An Academic Progress review for grades 1-5 indicated self-control problems with respect to classroom behavior. (McClelland Center for Child Study records) A note within this progress report pertaining to 4th grade indicated he had a "short attention span" and needed "regular reminding" about his behavior. (McClelland Center for Child Study records) Throughout his school experience, Mr. Floyd was criticized by his teachers for having poor self-control and being inattentive in class despite being diagnosed with Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) on several occasions during his school experience. (Paul 5/7/00, p. 8) Mr. Floyd was medicated with Ritalin in the 2nd grade in an attempt to address his ADHD, but the medication was discontinued in 5th grade and then started again in 7th grade "due to exacerbation in problem behaviors." (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 1)

25. Dr. Roitman, a child psychiatrist who saw Mr. Floyd when he was 13, testified that neurologist Dr. Kehne was treating him for ADHD at the time. (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 6) Dr. Roitman noted that besides ADHD, there were additional issues that required more extensive analysis (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 7), such as an "information processing learning disability" and the potential for a "permanent emotional problem." (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 11)

26. Recent test results of Mr. Floyd as an adult are consistent with neurodevelopmental problems observed during childhood by parents, teachers, and Drs. Roitman and Cardle. For example, Dr. Dougherty testified that his psychological testing of Mr. Floyd at age 24 "confirmed the prior diagnosis of Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder." (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 13) It should be noted that attention and hyperactivity disorders as well as learning disorders are frequently encountered comorbid diagnoses in individuals diagnosed with FASD (e.g., Streissguth & Kanter, 1997; DSM-IV-TR). Dr. Mack recently observed behaviors during his neuropsychological testing that were consistent with neurodevelopmental dysfunction, such as a mild resting tremor, poor emotional regulation, poor pencil grasp (which he described as a "soft sign" of neurodevelopmental dysfunction), and a tendency to cover test pages with his hand to reduce stimulus complexity (likely a coping behavior for attention deficits). Particularly relevant with respect to Mr. Floyd's uncontrolled aggression during his crimes, Dr. Mack observed "flashes of severe anger" and extreme impulsivity that Mr. Floyd had difficulty controlling even in the highly structured testing environment. (Mack 10/13/06, Behavioral Observation section).

27. Cognitive deficits and learning problems are other primary disabilities associated with FASD. While FASD is a leading cause of mental retardation in the United States, only 25 percent of individuals affected by prenatal alcohol exposure are mentally retarded. In fact, some individuals diagnosed with FASD have IQs in the above average range. Moreover, individuals with FASD may perform in the average range on IQ tests but show significant discrepancies between Verbal and Performance skills, reflecting learning disorders and underlying brain damage. They also may achieve good school performance in the lower grades but show increasing problems or inconsistent performance as subjects become more complex in higher grades. Mathematics seems to be a particular problem because it requires good working memory skills (i.e., the ability to hold complex information in mind and manipulate it) and increasing abstraction skills as math subjects become more complex. Zane Floyd repeated the second grade (Dougherty 7/13/00, p. 9; DS1086) and began failing subjects in 3rd grade, receiving "Fs" in Arithmetic, Reading, Language, and Social Studies. (Goose Creek records) In 4th grade, his teacher noted that he did not use his time wisely or practice self-control. (Pueblo School District records; ZFloyd006-MISC0310) Adoptive father Michael Floyd testified that he recalled trying to help his son with a math formula during the 3rd or 4th grades that his son simply could not learn. (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 114) There also were occasions when Zane Floyd would see and read instructional material but could not make sense out of them. (Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 16; DS9427) He was expelled during the 5th grade for being "out of control" and had to receive home schooling. (Dougherty 7/13/00, p. 9) He was placed back on Ritalin and within a year, he turned himself around in school and was Captain of the Academic Team. (Dougherty 7/13/00, p. 9) When he was 12, he was diagnosed by child psychiatrist Dr. Roitman with ADHD and prescribed Ritalin, which he took until age 15. (Dougherty 7/13/00, p. 10)

28. A comprehensive psychological evaluation when Mr. Floyd was 13 determined he met criteria for Attention Deficit Disorder, or ADD, along with an adjustment reaction with mixed emotional and behavioral symptoms, developmental coordination disorder, and organization deficits. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 4) The report indicated that although he had an average IQ as measured on the WISC-R (Full Scale IQ = 101), there was a significant discrepancy between his high average verbal skills and low average performance skills. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 2) I should note that Dr. Dougherty found convergent evidence for this discrepancy in his evaluation in 2000 when he determined by means of a different IQ test (i.e., Kaufman Adolescent/Adult Intelligence Test) that there was a significant difference between Mr. Floyd's crystallized IQ of 104 and fluid IQ of 84. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 17) Dr. Mack recently found additional convergent evidence of this discrepancy in his recent IQ testing with the WAIS-III. (Mack 10/13/06, Intellectual Functions section) Discrepancies of this nature are associated with learning disorders and brain damage. Dr. Cardle's report noted that visual-motor skills were Mr. Floyd's poorest area of functioning. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 2) Deficits in reasoning abilities were also evident, where it was noted he functioned three years below age-peers. According to Dr. Cardle: "When information needs to be organized by him, or there is a great deal of information he must integrate, Zane seems to have more difficulty utilizing his general reasoning skills." (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 2) It should be noted that organizational ability is an executive skill.

Consistent with Dr. Cardle's analysis, Mr. Floyd recently told Dr. Mack that he had difficulty absorbing what he read because he was distracted. (Mack 10/13/06, Medical/Psychiatric History section) Testing in Dr. Mack's evaluation also revealed perceptual difficulties as well as attention and processing difficulties (i.e., all executive functions). A short-term working memory deficit was noted, both in recalling series of digits, which is a fairly straightforward short-term memory task, and in recalling and encoding more complex information. Consistent with Dr. Cardle's analysis, Mr. Floyd told Dr. Mack in his recent neuropsychological evaluation that his short-term memory was "real bad," that he was unable to remember which card he was playing during card games on his Unit, and that he would constantly forget what he had just said to someone or follow through with a recently stated intention. (Mack 10/13/06, Medical/Psychiatric History section) Dr. Cardle's neuropsychological test results indicated a slightly elevated impairment score, suggesting deficits. The psychologist noted that organizational deficits might affect Mr. Floyd's "overall behavior" and thereby impact his ability to behave appropriately. She also noted "significant emotional difficulties" and "unusual perceptual responsiveness," which she felt might be related to his exaggerated responding and socialization deficits. It is noteworthy that she provided an example of a specific behavior seen frequently in the histories of FASD youth: confabulation. She noted: "It was observed in a group setting that Zane tends to exaggerate or make up stories to 'outdo' other members who may be talking about something that is important to them. This seems to be a habitual response for Zane..." (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 4) It also is noteworthy that the psychologist concluded Mr. Floyd's difficulties "may be related to some subtle frontal lobe dysfunction and/or emotional dysfunction." (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 5) As a result of this extensive psychological evaluation, it was recommended that Mr. Floyd and his family participate in family counseling, that he receive remedial support for his visual-motor skill deficits, and that his parents and teachers provide him with more structure and organization. Records do not indicate that the psychologist's advice was followed. Dr. Cardle concluded her report prophetically: "While Zane may not qualify or have significant cognitive deficits to enable him to receive assistance in academic areas in the school system, he is a child who is extremely at risk for significant continued behavioral and emotional difficulties." (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 5)

29. Mr. Floyd displayed increasing evidence of cognitive disabilities as he entered middle school. In 7th grade, he received "Ds" in math and social science. (Clark County School District records) In 8th grade, he received Fs in several classes, including Study Skills. (Hyde Park records) His academic problems continued as he entered high school. When he was 16, he scored between the 6th and 42nd percentiles on three different aspects of his math skills in the Survey of Basic Skills exam. (Clark County School District records) An 11th grade achievement test indicated significant deficits in math and language skills. (Faith Lutheran High School records) A mid-year transfer dated February 16, 1993, noted that he was on "behavioral probation" and tended to have "little outbursts." (DS8247) A high school grade composite noted decreasing grades in math (i.e., from a B and C in pre-algebra in 10th grade to Ds and Fs in 11th and 12th grades) as the courses became more complex. (Faith Lutheran High School records) While there were a few occasions where Mr. Floyd did well in math, the majority of his school records indicated poor performance in mathematics in particular and overall poor academic performance in general. Because of his academic problems and poor judgment about priorities, he eventually dropped out of traditional high school and obtained his diploma through night classes so that he could enter into the Marines. (Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 17)

30. Zane Floyd also had social skills deficits, another common neurodevelopmental or primary disability associated with FASD. Children with this diagnosis have significant difficulty making friends. Their social perception deficits interfere with their ability to detect social cues and interact easily with others. They often fabricate stories or exaggerate events in an effort to hold the interest of their peers and fit in. Because they lack awareness of social boundaries, they sometimes stand too close to others or touch them inappropriately. As a result of these skill deficits, their childhood histories typically reflect loneliness and isolation from peers. According to Dr. Cardle, Mr. Floyd recognized at age 13 that he had deficient social skills. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 4) She observed during her evaluation of him that in a group setting, he would exaggerate or make up stories to "outdo" other group members who were talking about topics of interest to them. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 4) Dr. Dougherty reported that Mr. Floyd would do anything to avoid rejection from peers (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 59) and noted that a score at the 99th percentile on the Manson Evaluation indicated Mr. Floyd felt isolated from others and had significant difficulty establishing personal relationships. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 26) He also scored in the 99th percentile on a scale reflecting excessive fears, worries, feelings of insecurity, and inadequacy. Dr. Dougherty testified that based in part on results from the Basic Personality Test, Mr. Floyd appeared to be a social introvert with a very weak self-ego. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 29-30) Robert Jay Hall, Mr. Floyd's best friend, testified that he met Mr. Floyd when they attended Hyde Park Junior High School, thought of him as the "class clown," and decided to befriend him primarily because he felt sorry for Mr. Floyd's lack of popularity. (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 75)

31. In addition to the neurodevelopmental disorders addressed above, impulse control and judgment deficits are two other primary disabilities typically seen in individuals affected by prenatal alcohol exposure that have important implications in the current matter. Being able to control one's urges and emotional reactions and make appropriate choices are skills essential for pro-social behavior. Zane Floyd had significant deficits in both these areas. For example, Dr. Dougherty testified that a subscale score at the 99th percentile on the Basic Personality Test indicated Mr. Floyd likely was impulsive and prone to engage in risky and reckless behavior. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 29) Dr. Dougherty further noted in his testimony that in elementary school, it was difficult for teachers to get Mr. Floyd to control his behavior. Instead of attending to instruction, he acted out. Mr. Floyd's teacher at Princess Anne Elementary school noted he had problems with self-control. (Princess Ann records) During his middle school years, he was expelled for fighting and failing to go to class. (Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 16) Around this same time period, he was referred for psychiatric evaluation due to attention deficits and emotional problems. (Trial 7/18/00pm, p. 51; see also Dr. Cardle 4/30/89)

32. Zane Floyd also displayed deficits in his ability to express his sexuality in appropriate ways, a problem that is observed in about half of all individuals diagnosed with FASD (Streissguth et al., 1996). When he was ten, he was accused of anally penetrating the neighbor's three-year-old son.

(Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 8; DS9969) Although formal charges were never brought, his father and the boy's father were placed on probation for engaging in a fist fight over the incident. During his psychological evaluation with Dr. Cardle, she observed him make several inappropriate sexual comments to peers during group counseling sessions that made the other children uncomfortable. (Cardle 4/30/89, p. 3) In a letter written to a potential girlfriend, Mr. Floyd informed her that he was concerned about dating her because he was recently accused by a female classmate's father of statutorily raping the girl. (Jessica Letters DS10901)

33. Taken as a whole, Zane Floyd displayed almost every major neurodevelopmental disorder that has been associated with the primary disabilities typically seen in individuals with FASD. Beginning in adolescence, he also began displaying a number of adverse life outcomes because his primary disabilities were not accurately diagnosed and treated.

34. Review of data in this case leads to a strong conclusion that Zane Floyd displayed secondary as well as primary disabilities as a result of his brain damage and FASD. According to records, except for intermittent Ritalin to treat two of his problematic neurodevelopmental symptoms (i.e., inattention and hyperactivity), he never received accurate diagnosis or treatment for the wide-ranging primary disabilities inherent in his underlying condition. The lack of accurate diagnosis and treatment in early childhood is an issue that has profound effects on the later life histories of many individuals with FASD. In the case of Zane Floyd, the lack of an accurate diagnosis and treatment was a significant factor in his later mental health problems, substance abuse, disrupted school experience, inappropriate sexual behavior, dependent living, sporadic employment, criminal behavior, and, in particular, his unrestrained brutal aggression in the 1999 sexual assault and murders. Had he received appropriate treatment for his primary disabilities in childhood, it is highly likely that his secondary disabilities would have been more manageable and less extreme, if they had developed at all. This conclusion is based upon multiple studies of secondary disabilities in the 1990s (Streissguth et al., 1996; Streissguth et al., 1999; Yates et al., 1998), including research that I participated in during my postgraduate training.

35. As previously noted, deficits in impulse control and emotion self-regulation are hallmark behavioral symptoms in individuals with FASD. These deficits often lead to compulsive use of alcohol and drugs as well as other uncontrolled behaviors such as rage reactions, physical aggression, stealing, and other high risk behaviors. In some FASD-impaired individuals, there is very little self-control even when they are not under the influence of disinhibitory substances such as alcohol. In others, while they may generally function in a pro-social manner under the best of circumstances, when their central nervous system is affected by something that erodes inhibitory control, there can be a significant and abrupt decrease in volitional control. Alcohol and illegal street drugs are powerful disinhibitors because of their impact on the neurochemistry of the brain. In FASD-affected individuals with deficits in self-control caused by brain damage, the disinhibitory effects of alcohol and drugs tend to be greatly magnified. As a result, when faced with events that trigger negative emotions, individuals with FASD often overreact and behave impulsively without the moderating (i.e., socializing) steps involved in healthy executive functioning. Volitional control is not a dichotomous issue in individuals with FASD or anyone else, for that matter. In some individuals with FASD, executive functions are severely affected, and there is constant difficulty in functioning in a pro-social manner. In other affected individuals, executive function impairment may appear more noticeable only at certain times, such as when the individual is severely stressed or is under the influence of a substance that compromises executive functioning (e.g., alcohol and/or illegal drugs). This analysis is relevant to Mr. Floyd's behavior on the day of the rape and murders, which apparently occurred shortly after he drank an excessive amount of alcohol, used methamphetamine, and experienced several stressful events: job problems, the death of his cousin, the "loss" of his best friend to homosexuality, the loss of his girlfriend, his unsuccessful return home to live with his parents, the loss of his entire paycheck to gambling, and $10,000 debts that he was behind in paying (Paul 5/7/00, p. 29-30).

36. Mr. Floyd clearly appears to suffer from an elevated sensitivity to alcohol due to his FASD condition that affected his volitional capacity. For example, since his mid-teens, there is no evidence of physical aggression except when under the influence of intoxicating substances. However, when he was drinking in the military, he recalled provoking fights just to pick a fight and not really knowing why. (Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 4) He even reported an incident where he thought it was a good idea to "get into a fight with his locker" while intoxicated, which resulted in severe bruises on his hands. (Counsel Interview with Zane Floyd on October 10, 2005) He eventually received low marks in his competency scores for his excessive drinking and for his fighting and other disruptive behavior. (Alfonso 7/12/00, p. 20) His inability to see the effect of alcohol and drugs on his functioning and see the potential consequences of his continued use were beyond his functional capacity due to his FASD.

37. The fragility of Zane Floyd's executive functioning is a critically important issue in terms of his volitional control capacity. According to the Text Edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual, Fourth Edition (DSM-IV-TR), the essential feature of Substance Intoxication is the development of a reversible substance-specific syndrome caused by recent ingestion of a substance. In Mr. Floyd's case, the "substances" involved methamphetamine and marijuana as well as excessive amounts of alcohol. The loss of volitional control caused by his alcohol and drug abuse combined with the judgment and emotion control impairments he already possessed due to his FASD and caused an exaggerated behavioral response beyond what is typically observed in people not impaired by prenatal alcohol exposure. According to the DSM-IV-TR, in unimpaired individuals, Substance Intoxication can cause "clinically significant maladaptive behavioral or psychological changes" associated with the intoxication, such as belligerence, mood lability, cognitive impairment, impaired judgment, and impaired social functioning – all of which are due to the direct physiological effects of the substance on executive functions within the central nervous system. The Manual further notes that the specific clinical picture in Substance Intoxication "varies dramatically" among individuals and also depends on "the person's tolerance for the substance." In Mr. Floyd's case, these symptoms were significantly magnified at the time he committed his 1999 crimes and may have triggered the Dissociative Disorder noted in Dr. Mack's report. This exaggerated response stems from an interaction between the temporary changes that alcohol and drugs cause in the frontal cortex of the brain where impulses are controlled and the permanent deficit in frontal cortex functioning that Mr. Floyd suffered as a result of his prenatal alcohol exposure.

38. By the time of Zane Floyd's trial in 2000, FASD had been recognized for over 25 years as a major known cause of neurodevelopmental disabilities, and the life-long implications of these disabilities had been recognized for 5 years. Follow-up studies in four countries had demonstrated the continuing adverse effects of prenatal alcohol exposure into adolescence and adulthood (Streissguth & Kanter, Eds., 1997). However, when Zane Floyd was a child and teenager, no one knew about the damage and long-term effects that prenatal alcohol exposure could cause. Thus, while he might have been identified as a child at risk and referred for evaluation had he been born in the 1990s, unfortunately he was born too early to be detected in routine screening by medical or school personnel and referred for medical evaluation. Thus, it was the timing of his birth that prevented him from being diagnosed and treated as a child for FASD.

39. Regular and unbridled abuse of alcohol by Mr. Floyd's caregivers undoubtedly interfered with adult recognition that Zane Floyd even had a learning disability, much less a pervasive birth defect that caused significant problems across all major domains of functioning. Although he was diagnosed as a child with ADHD and medicated intermittently until age 15, his parents were in denial regarding the fact that he had a learning disability and unaware that the source of the learning disability and his ADHD was brain damage. Instead of seeking appropriate treatment for problems he couldn't control, they severely disciplined him for poor academic performance. For example, Michael Floyd reported that when school officials told him his son should be placed in special education classes, he told them he wouldn't allow him to be a class with "retards." (Michael Floyd Declaration)

40. Not only were Mr. Floyd's primary disabilities not effectively treated, they were significantly increased by environmental influences (i.e., his parents' alcoholism and abusive parenting). Mr. Floyd reported examples of his father throwing him across the room and into a wall and pummeling him with fists as a method to discipline him for ADHD-related transgressions. (Dougherty 7/13/00, p. 9) He also reported an example of his mother becoming so intoxicated that she mistook the living room coffee table for a bathroom in front of her horrified and embarrassed teenaged son. (Counsel Interview with Zane Floyd, 10/10/05) Robert Jay Hall reported incidents where Valerie Floyd would give the boys beer during their teens, and the three of them would stay up late at night talking. (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 85) Mr. Hall also testified that Michael Floyd threw a 16th birthday party for his son and encouraged the teenagers present to play drinking games, during which several of the teenagers became inebriated. (Trial 7/18/00am, p. 85)

41. Secondary disabilities associated with fetal alcohol impairment are not just modifiable but preventable if an individual is diagnosed early and receives appropriate intervention. According to a four-year study at the University of Washington funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (1996), specific "risk factors" increase the probability that a fetal alcohol impaired individual will go on to develop secondary disabilities, and specific "protective factors" reduce that probability. These risk and protective factors apply to an individual's childhood up to 18 years of age and are mutually exclusive. These mediating factors include the following: living in a nurturing and stable home for at least 72% of childhood, receiving a diagnosis of fetal alcohol impairment prior to age six (which permits positive interventions to be applied early in life), never having experienced violence, living for at least 2.8 years in each household, experiencing a good quality home ("good quality" was operationally defined by 12 specific factors), being FAS rather than FAE (because the facial characteristics make the condition more noticeable to others and therefore more prone to positive intervention), and having basic needs met at least 13% of the time during childhood. Follow-up research (Streissguth et al., 2004) also found that having been sexually or physically victimized in childhood was an additional mediating factor that affected the later expression of inappropriate sexual behavior. Data reviewed in this case revealed that Zane Floyd experienced most of these mediating factors as risk factors rather than protective factors: he never lived in a "good quality" home (i.e., his early childhood and adolescence were spent in a non-nurturing, unstable home that involved frequent moves, caregiver alcohol abuse, domestic violence, child physical abuse, emotional neglect, and lack of structure), he was not diagnosed with FASD in childhood, and he was frequently the target of his father's violence during his childhood and adolescence. With respect to having his basic childhood needs met, data indicate that this was a secondary disabilities risk factor for Mr. Floyd during his entire childhood.

42. Behavior problems in children are often blamed on poor parenting, and by the time children reach adolescence, any antisocial behavior they display is usually interpreted as willful misconduct. Adolescents and adults are expected to have the developmental capacity to behave in pro-social ways, even if they are exposed to poor parenting and multiple traumas in their childhoods. However, for individuals with fetal alcohol impairment and associated deficits in executive functioning, maintaining good behavior without adequate support is beyond their capability. Defective executive functioning causes them to be highly suggestible and prone to direct influence from others in their lives. If that influence is aggressive or antisocial, they are not neurologically equipped to consider alternative choices and behaviors.

43. When Zane Floyd was born in 1975, little was known about the long-term effects of FAS/FAE on adult functioning. The term "Fetal Alcohol Syndrome" had just been identified publicly (Jones & Smith, 1973). It was not until Zane Floyd was nine that researchers began to publicize information about Fetal Alcohol Effects (Abel, 1984), and he was 14 (i.e., 1989) when Congress finally passed legislation to mandate labels on all alcohol beverage containers sold in the United States that warned against drinking alcohol during pregnancy. Although the term "secondary disabilities" was not widely recognized before the mid-1990s, by the late 1980s there was growing awareness that fetal alcohol impairment caused structural brain damage (West, 1986) and that this damage in turn caused long-term behavioral and developmental disturbances (Spohr & Steinhausen, 1987; Streissguth & Randels, 1988; Streissguth, 1990). By the mid-1990s, knowledge about secondary disabilities was widespread (e.g., Meyer et al., 1990; Phillips, 1992; Streissguth, 1992). For example, in 1992 the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) funded a major research project at the University of Washington to study secondary disabilities, and in early 1994, Alcohol

Health and Research World (now titled Alcohol Research and Health) devoted a full issue to the topic of FAS and other alcohol-related birth defects (see Volume 18, Number 1, 1994) that provided a comprehensive overview of the existing knowledge on the effects of prenatal alcohol exposure. (This issue was later awarded first prize in the technical publications category by the National Association of Government Communicators.) Thus, by the time of Zane Floyd's trial in 2000, any expert in neurodevelopmental disorders could have testified in general about the primary disabilities associated with FASD, and any expert armed with the data provided to me by post-conviction counsel could have testified about the specific impact of this condition on Mr. Floyd's childhood functioning.

44. With respect to long-term outcomes from untreated FASD, prior to the 2000 trial knowledge about the secondary disabilities associated with fetal alcohol exposure had become a primary focus in research studies. In the mid 1990s, the United States Congress directed the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) to prepare a comprehensive report on the subject. In response, NIAAA commissioned the Institute of Medicine (IOM) of the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study. The resulting seminal report was titled, Fetal Alcohol Syndrome: Diagnosis, Epidemiology, Prevention, and Treatment (Stratton et al., 1996). This report critically reviewed the major scientific issues in fetal alcohol research and made a number of recommendations, including the new diagnostic terminology referred to earlier in this declaration (i.e., FAS Types 1-5). By 1996, research at the University of Washington had revealed that secondary disabilities became observable in people with FASD by their young adults years (Streissguth et al., 1996) and specifically identified the risk and protective factors associated with these secondary disabilities. A year later, Streissguth (1997) published a book for the lay public regarding these secondary disabilities. Thus, by 2000, the year of Mr. Floyd's trial, and certainly by his appeal, any expert with knowledge about FASD could have testified about the long-term social and behavioral ramifications of prenatal alcohol exposure in general, and any expert armed with the information provided to me could have testified about the long-term ramifications of FASD in Mr. Zane's life.

45. The awareness that FASD is a birth defect with pervasive and long-range neurodevelopmental effects has led to increasing awareness in the legal profession that a different level of attribution is warranted for individuals with this condition (Fast, Conry, & Loock, 1999; Baumbach, 2002). Rather than assuming they become unmotivated, manipulative, antisocial, and/or self-defeating solely because of poor parenting experiences and free will, research over the last 15 years has shown consistently that untreated primary disabilities are the basis for maladaptive behaviors. Notwithstanding the fact that environmental influences can play a significant role in the expression of secondary disabilities, it also has been established in the scientific research that individuals with FASD have structural brain damage that makes it highly unlikely that they will be able to withstand the negative influence of environmental risk factors without appropriate support and treatment. As Streissguth and colleagues noted recently (Streissguth et al., 2004), one of the strongest correlates of adverse outcomes in individuals with FASD is lack of an early diagnosis: "The longer the delay in receiving diagnostic information, the greater the odds of adverse outcomes." Thus, the research indicates that for Zane Floyd's debilitating substance abuse and subsequent brutal aggression to have been prevented, he needed appropriate intervention in childhood to eliminate or reduce the risk factors he was exposed to and substitute protective factors. Through no fault of his own, this intervention did not happen. Thus, while environmental risk factors were clearly important in his outcome, unlike individuals without brain damage who have the capacity to withstand negative environmental influences and emerge from childhood as pro-social adults, those like Mr. Floyd who are affected by prenatal alcohol exposure but untreated do not have that ability.

46. Zane Floyd is sentenced to death for the crimes he committed while under the influence of alcohol and drugs. Given data in this case that support a diagnosis of FASD, it is clear that substance abuse (a secondary disability) and lack of impulse control and judgment (untreated primary disabilities) rendered him a very dangerous man and were significant factors in his violence. It is equally clear that given his birth defect and the pervasive short-term and long-term ramifications of that condition on his functioning, he had virtually no ability on his own to change the negative course of his life.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct and that this declaration was executed in Seattle, Washington, on October 17, 2006.

Appendix A
IOM Criteria

In 1996, the Institute of Medicine (IOM) developed five diagnostic categories related to fetal alcohol exposure:

Type 1.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) with Confirmed Maternal Alcohol Exposure

Requires:

- a. confirmed maternal alcohol exposure
- b. facial dysmorphism, including short palpebral fissures and abnormalities of the premaxillary zone (e.g., flat upper lip, flat philtrum, flat midface)
- c. growth retardation, such as low birth weight, lack of weight gain over time, disproportional low weight to height
- d. neurodevelopmental abnormalities of the Central Nervous System (CNS), such as small head size at birth and structural brain abnormalities with neurological hard or soft signs (e.g., impaired fine motor skills, neurosensory hearing loss, poor tandem gait, poor eye-hand coordination)

Type 2.

FAS Without Confirmed Maternal Alcohol Exposure

Requires:

- b. through d. above

Type 3.

Partial FAS With Confirmed Maternal Alcohol Exposure

Requires:

- a. confirmed maternal alcohol exposure
- b. some components of the FAS facial pattern
- c. growth retardation as in Category 1
- d. CNS neurodevelopmental abnormalities as in Category 1
- e. Complex pattern of behavioral or cognitive abnormalities inconsistent with developmental level and unexplained by genetic background or environmental conditions (e.g., learning difficulties, deficits in school performance, poor impulse control, problems in social perception, language deficits, poor capacity for abstraction, specific deficits in mathematical skills, and problems in memory, attention, or judgment)

Type 4.Alcohol-Related Birth Defects (ARBD)Requires:*

- a. confirmed maternal alcohol exposure
- b. one or more congenital defects including malformations and dysplasias of the heart, bone, kidney, vision, or hearing systems

Type 5.Alcohol-Related Neurodevelopmental Disorder (ARND)Requires:*

- a. confirmed maternal alcohol exposure
- b. CNS neurodevelopmental abnormalities as in Category 1 and/or
- c. complex pattern of behavioral or cognitive deficits as in Category 3

Declaration of Natalie Novick Brown, Ph.D.

I, Natalie Novick Brown, declare under penalty of perjury that the following is true and correct:

A. BACKGROUND AND QUALIFICATIONS

1. I have been a licensed psychologist in the State of Washington for approximately 25 years. I also am a licensed psychologist in Florida and Alaska.
2. I completed a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Sociology and Psychology from the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA). In 1994, I obtained a Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology from the University of Washington in Seattle, which included an internship in forensic psychology. I then completed a postdoctoral fellowship in fetal alcohol spectrum disorders (FASD) at the University of Washington, which involved participation in research on the adverse developmental outcomes in FASD (called "secondary disabilities"). My fellowship advisor Ann Streissguth, Ph.D., was a pioneer researcher in the FASD field. Along with Dr. Kenneth Jones and others, Dr. Streissguth was part of the original medical team that first identified fetal alcohol syndrome (FAS) in the United States and published that discovery in The Lancet in 1973. Dr. Streissguth subsequently became the first psychologist in the nation to study the long-range developmental and adaptive behavior of children with FASD in large-scale longitudinal studies that spanned more than 30 years.
3. Since my formal training in the early 1990s, my private practice in psychology has involved a specialization in FASD. I have treated and evaluated several hundred people with FASD in clinical and forensic settings. In the forensic context alone, I have conducted over 450 FASD evaluations involving defendants charged with a range of offenses, including capital murder. I have conducted over 60 post-conviction FASD evaluations at the state and federal levels. I have conducted FASD assessments at the request of both defense and government attorneys. The latter included evaluations referred by the court and by Developmental Disabilities Administration in Washington State, and evaluations of crime victims with FASD referred by state attorneys general.
4. I am a Clinical Assistant Professor (courtesy staff) in the University of Washington's School of Medicine, Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Medicine. In this capacity, I consult with staff at the University of Washington's Fetal Alcohol and Drug Unit regarding criminal behavior in persons with FASD, train judicial staff on FASD in King County, Washington, and conduct pro bono FASD evaluations of crime victims for the Seattle Police Department.
5. I have published over 30 peer-reviewed articles and book chapters on FASD and presented on FASD at many state, national, and international conferences. I helped author the American Bar Association's 2012 Resolution on FASD. Currently, I am editing a book for Springer on evaluating FASD in the forensic setting, which will be published in 2021. I have been recognized as an FASD expert in approximately 20 state and federal jurisdictions and have testified in numerous capital murder trials and habeas hearings wherein an FASD diagnosis was found to matter to the court. For example, in Williams v. Stirling, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled FASD was a “cause-and-effect” diagnosis that had direct bearing on offense conduct.

6. A CV that more fully describes my qualifications is attached as Appendix A to this declaration.

B. REFERRAL

7. I evaluated Zane Floyd in 2006 at the request of habeas counsel at the time and diagnosed him with a fetal alcohol spectrum disorder, hereinafter referred to as “FASD” (see Declaration dated 10/17/06).
8. I have been asked by Zane Floyd’s current counsel, Office of the Federal Public Defender, District of Nevada, to evaluate Mr. Floyd’s adaptive functioning and address the following consultative questions:
 - a. Is Zane Floyd’s adaptive and functional history consistent or inconsistent with the mental defect associated with FASD, which in DSM-5 is diagnosed generally as Other Specified Neurodevelopmental Disorder (Code 315.8) and specifically as Neurodevelopmental Disorder Associated with Prenatal Alcohol Exposure (ND-PAE)?
 - b. How does Mr. Floyd’s ND-PAE/FASD compare to intellectual disability (ID) and attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD)?
 - c. Did ND-PAE/FASD make it likely Mr. Floyd had an “immature brain” at the time of the offense given he was 23 years old, and if so, how would that have affected his functioning?

C. SUMMARY OF OPINION

9. Based upon my psychological evaluation of Mr. Floyd, I hold the following opinions to a reasonable level of psychological certainty:
 - a. Zane Floyd’s adaptive/functional history is consistent with the mental defect associated with FASD, which in DSM-5 is diagnosed generally as Other Specified Neurodevelopmental Disorder (Code 315.8) and specifically as Neurodevelopmental Disorder Associated with Prenatal Alcohol Exposure (ND-PAE).

- b. Mr. Floyd's ND-PAE/FASD is a brain-based, congenital, lifelong, impactful disorder deserving of the rubric "ID Equivalence." Regardless of how severity is measured, Mr. Floyd's FASD is similar in severity to ID but substantially more severe than ADHD, with broad ramifications that have affected all important functional domains in his life. Unlike ADHD, Mr. Floyd's ND-PAE/FASD is a cause-and-effect condition that not only explains his attention deficits, impulsivity, and hyperactive behavior during childhood but explains all of his behavior – across his entire lifespan.
- c. Given that the normally-developing "adolescent brain" does not have mature executive control capacity until at least age 25 and brain development in young adults with FASD lags many years behind rates seen in neurotypical age peers, it is likely Mr. Floyd's brain was not fully developed at the time of the offense due to his ND-PAE/FASD, which would have had an additive and cumulative effect on the brain damage he was born with.

D. PROCEDURES

- 10. Collateral interviews were conducted by telephone with Carolyn Smith (family friend and social worker), Jay Hall (friend), and Mike Hall (father of Jay Hall), each of whom was asked to rate Mr. Floyd's behavior on three standardized measures:
 - Behavior Rating Inventory of Executive Function (BRIEF),
 - Vineland Adaptive Behavior Scales – Third Edition (Vineland-3), and
 - Fetal Alcohol Behavior Scale (FABS).
- 11. Record review consisted of prior mental health evaluation reports/declarations (Drs. Maria Cardle, 1989; David Schmidt, 2000; Thomas Kinsora, 2000; Jakob Camp, 2000; Frank Paul, 2000; Edward Dougherty, 2000; Norton Roitman, 2000; Natalie Novick Brown, 2006; Jonathan Mack, 2006; Jonathan Lipman, 2006); expert penalty phase testimony (Drs. Dougherty and Roitman); penalty phase testimony and declaration of Robert J. Hall; declaration of Robert "Jay" Hall; 9th Circuit Opinion; and NOFAS Amicus.
- 12. I consulted with Neuropsychologist Paul Connor, PhD (formally trained in FASD at the University of Washington Fetal Alcohol and Drug Unit) regarding test result patterns. At my request, Dr. Connor produced two graphs of Mr. Floyd's neuropsychological test results (see later in this declaration).
- 13. I also consulted with Stephen Greenspan, PhD, regarding the comparison of FASD with ID and ADHD.

E. BRIEF SUMMARY OF FASD

14. Human behavior is a direct reflection of the anatomy and physiology of the central nervous system (CNS).¹ Consequently, behavior is disrupted to the extent anatomy and physiology of the CNS are disrupted.

A fetus is susceptible to damage from alcohol exposure throughout pregnancy. The first few weeks of pregnancy when brain cells are developing and forming brain structures are especially vulnerable.² Within minutes after a pregnant woman consumes alcohol, the substance crosses the placenta and blood-brain barrier, and the blood alcohol level in the fetus equals that of the mother.³ Prenatal alcohol exposure typically causes widespread structural damage throughout the brain.^{4, 5, 6} Even mild structural brain damage that is difficult to see in standard brain scans significantly impairs brain function.⁷ Research has found there is no “safe” time, amount, or type of alcohol consumption during pregnancy.^{8, 9}

Beyond brain damage, prenatal alcohol exposure also may cause defects in cardiac, skeletal, renal, visual, auditory, immune, and other systems.¹⁰

“Fetal alcohol spectrum disorder(s) (FASD)” is a non-diagnostic umbrella term that encompasses all of the medical conditions caused by prenatal alcohol exposure that were described in diagnostic guidelines published in 1996 by the Institute of Medicine (IOM).¹² Four medical diagnoses under the FASD umbrella were listed: (a) fetal alcohol syndrome (FAS), (b) partial FAS (pFAS), (c) alcohol related neurodevelopmental disorder (ARND), and (d) alcohol related birth defects (ARBD).¹³ Together, these four medical diagnoses involve a broad continuum of physical, mental, behavioral, and learning deficits that can result from prenatal alcohol exposure. Prior to the IOM publication in 1996, ARND had been referred to as 'fetal alcohol effect' (FAE). In 2004, a consensus of governmental, research, and advocacy organizations accepted "FASD" as a collective term that included the more specific medical diagnoses described in the 1996 IOM report on FAS.¹⁴ Over the years, the term 'FASD' also has come to include diagnostic terms in the clinical setting, such as static encephalopathy-alcohol exposed (SE-AE), which is equivalent to ARND.¹⁵ Since 2013, the term 'FASD' also includes the specific DSM-5 diagnosis for the CNS dysfunction due to prenatal alcohol exposure, neurodevelopmental disorder associated with prenatal alcohol exposure (ND-PAE).

FAS involves three diagnostic criteria: characteristic facial abnormalities, growth deficiency, and CNS abnormality but does not require evidence of prenatal alcohol exposure because the full spectrum of facial abnormalities in FAS is pathognomonic for prenatal alcohol exposure. Partial FAS requires one or two facial abnormalities, CNS abnormality, and evidence of prenatal alcohol exposure. ARND and SE-AE simply require CNS abnormality and evidence of prenatal alcohol exposure. The CNS abnormality common to all of these medical conditions typically is measured functionally but also can be measured neurologically and structurally.

Importantly, research has found that regardless of diagnosis under the FASD umbrella, brain damage is the same.¹⁶ That is, brain damage in ARND tends to be just as severe as in FAS.

Not every individual exposed to alcohol prenatally will have FASD. The primary determinants of clinically relevant fetal damage include quantity (amount of alcohol per occasion), frequency (how often a pregnant mother drinks), and timing (stage of pregnancy and whether there is drinking just as the fetus is developing a particular feature). Binge drinking and regular heavy drinking carry the greatest risk of severe problems,^{17, 18} but even lesser amounts can cause FASD.^{19, 20, 21, 22} Maternal characteristics interact with and affect outcomes, such as the mother's age, genetic make-up, number of previous pregnancies (i.e., younger siblings tend to be more affected than older siblings), overall health, diet and nutritional status, lack of prenatal care, adverse living conditions, and things such as stress, co-occurring diseases, mental health conditions, and concomitant use of tobacco and illicit drugs.^{23, 24, 25, 26} Also important is the genetic composition of the fetus, which convey varying degrees of vulnerability or resilience.

FASD tends to be a hidden condition that is seldom diagnosed in childhood because most people in this population have ARND rather than FAS and consequently, no obvious physical abnormalities.²⁷ Such children look normal to casual observers but have varying degrees of neurocognitive damage that significantly impairs cognitive and adaptive functioning.²⁸

The toxic effects of prenatal alcohol exposure appear to be widespread throughout the entire brain,²⁹ causing subtle but potent irregularities in brain structure that compromise brain function and directly impact cognition and behavior.^{30, 31} Deficits in cognitive functioning often become evident in elementary school and ultimately impair adaptive behavior across the lifespan.³²

self-regulation, conscious decision-making, and everyday adaptive behavior.^{33, 34, 35} Like the term “FASD,” “executive functioning” also is an umbrella term that includes a range of higher-order cognitive skills that integrate and coordinate numerous underlying processes in the brain, including sensory input, memory retrieval, considering options, foreseeing consequences and linking cause and effect, overriding and suppressing socially unacceptable responses, modifying emotions and urges to fit socially acceptable norms, and forming intentions and selecting actions.³⁶ Executive functioning is largely controlled in the prefrontal cortex and neural circuitry linking the prefrontal cortex to the limbic system, both of which have been found in the research to be particularly sensitive to the damaging effects of prenatal alcohol exposure.³⁷ Compounding this problem, prenatal alcohol exposure also creates hypersensitivity to stress via faulty neurological “hard-wiring” of the hypothalamic-pituitary-adrenal system (HPA axis), which causes chronic overreaction to stressful events.³⁸ However, because of executive function deficits, this population lacks the “top-down” moderating influence of a fully functioning prefrontal cortex. As a result, those with FASD are prone to act out their emotions, particularly in high stress situations that trigger overreaction in the limbic system. Because of executive dysfunction, those with FASD have considerable difficulty handling everyday stressors.

Review of the FASD literature has identified a typical cognitive profile in FASD,^{39, 40, 41, 42} which involves (a) variable neuropsychological profiles (i.e., a mixture of relative strengths and weaknesses), often with significant discrepancies between IQ index scores,^{43, 44, 45} and (b) a generalized deficit in the processing and integration of complex information.^{46, 47} That is, the more complex a task or situation, the more impaired the processing and integration of neurological information will be, particularly if there is time pressure, which adds an additional element of complexity.⁴⁸ Consequently, in novel social situations where behavior is not guided or structured by some external means, behavior in this population typically reflects marked impairment. In contrast, in routine situations that are well-practiced, automatic “motor memory” precludes the need for executive functioning. Importantly, because procedural motor memory developed through repetition governs actions rather than executive functioning,⁴⁹ this population tends to do best with familiar tasks where behavior has become routinized due to practice or in structured contexts with predictable rules and consequences and external guidance, both of which reduce the need for independent thinking and decision-making. This is why people with FASD learn best with “hands-on” practice.

Since the everyday world is a very complex place full of surprises, which increases the need for executive functioning, it is not surprising that a deficient adaptive profile is a universal finding in the FASD literature, regardless of IQ or particular diagnosis under the FASD umbrella.⁵⁰ Rather than IQ, it is higher-level executive functioning that most determines how information is processed and integrated in the brain and ultimately manifests as adaptive behavior. In fact, executive functioning in FASD directly predicts adaptive behavior.^{51, 52} DSM-5 defines adaptive functioning as everyday behavior that meets developmental and sociocultural standards for personal independence and social responsibility.⁵³ More simply put, adaptive behavior is everyday behavior.

F. COLLATERAL INTERVIEWS

[First names are used in this section to facilitate identification.]

15. Robert J. Hall (“Jay”) was interviewed telephonically for 2.0 hours on October 29, 2020. Jay said he and Zane met in early adolescence and were best friends throughout their teens and into their early 20s. They also lived together for three months in 1999: “I was always at Zane’s house in my teens. I’m about a year younger than he is. I was really his only friend. He had a girlfriend at the end of high school. She was two years younger than me. Zane really didn’t have any friends his age; they were all younger. My first memories of Zane around the time we started hanging out together were that he was a class clown, always making self-deprecating jokes to get the class to laugh. He would blurt out things in class, look at me and laugh. I think I felt sorry for him at first because when we first met, he was being jumped in the parking lot at school, and I stepped in. From that point on, we were best friends.” Jay said one of the things he noticed about Zane was how he always seemed to function better in structured environments: “I was the same way, so I noticed that about him.” Jay said Zane didn’t play organized sports, although he tried out for the basketball team: “He would only get a few inches off the ground to do shots. He was so uncoordinated.” Jay reported that he frequently observed Zane’s parents drinking alcohol, noting that Valerie drank more often than Mike. Jay said he sometimes observed Mike assaulting Valerie and Zane and occasionally observed Valerie saying “cruel” and “hurtful” things to Zane.

16. Mike Hall was interviewed telephonically for 2.0 hours on November 12, 2020. Mike reported that he and his wife befriended Valerie and Mike Floyd when Zane became friends with his son Jay in early adolescence. Mike said his family and the Floyds remained close during both boys’ teen years, noting, “A few times over those years, my ex-wife and I would get a call from Valerie, asking for us to come get her and Zane because Mike was drinking and getting out of control. Valerie drank as well, occasionally too much. I remember seeing her intoxicated.” Mike recalled his impressions of Zane in adolescence: “He was annoyingly polite. I loved that kid. He seemed kind, gentle, sweet, sad...fragile. He was socially awkward and had a soft, timid voice. He was hard to understand sometimes when he was younger. He also was very uncoordinated and impulsive. These things gave me the impression he was developmentally slow. His sweetness continued into high school. He took my daughter to the prom.”
17. Carolyn Smith was interviewed telephonically for 2.0 hours on November 25, 2020. According to her report, Carolyn is a retired social worker who lived near the Floyd family and was a “godmother” to Zane Floyd during his childhood: “Zane grew up with alcoholic parents who were always fighting, so our house was like a refuge for him. My husband and I were like his parents.” Carolyn was a “very close friend” of Zane’s mother Valerie Floyd and first met Zane when he was around 11 years old: “I had a close relationship with Zane and saw him four or five times a week when our two families lived for a year in the same apartment complex. My daughter Brittany was two years old at the time, and Zane played with her almost every day. About a year after our two families met, the Floyds moved into a house around the same time we did, but I regularly saw Zane and his mother several times a month after we moved.” Noting the thing she remembered most about Zane in his teens was his hyperactivity, she added. “Zane’s mother Val drank a lot. Before her pregnancy with Zane, Val had another baby boy who died. I suspect the death was due to her drinking. Val and Mike liked to party, have people over, barbeque, and drink. They seemed to drink all the time when Zane was young. I often saw them both intoxicated. Val told me back then that she drank alcohol throughout her pregnancy with Zane. This didn’t surprise me because her drinking habits weren’t normal. My husband and I talked to Val and Mike about how out of control their drinking was, which was how Val and I became close friends. Val had problems with Mike when they drank and had to call the police on him when he hit her.” Carolyn noted that when Valerie first met Mike, she was a “mule” for her first husband, concealing drugs on her body as she traveled.

G. STANDARDIZED BEHAVIOR ASSESSMENT

18. Three standardized behavior assessments were administered telephonically to the three collateral individuals interviewed above, each of whom interacted regularly with Mr. Floyd from the time he was an adolescent until his early adult years.

a. Fetal Alcohol Behavior Scale (FABS)⁵⁴:

The FABS was developed by researchers at the University of Washington in Seattle to describe the “behavioral essence” of the adaptive behavior deficits associated with FASD. To reduce transparency of the FABS items, which constitute 36 behaviors that differentiate FAS from non-FAS persons, relevant items are imbedded within a lengthier measure (i.e., Personal Behaviors Checklist), which contains 71 items. The behaviors addressed by the FABS are organized into seven categories (Communication and Speech, Personal Manner, Emotions, Motor Skills and Activities, Academic/Work Performance, Social Skills/Interactions, and Bodily/Physiologic Functions). Using a reference sample of 472 patients aged 2 to 51 diagnosed with Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) or Fetal Alcohol Effects (FAE), the FABS demonstrated high item-to-scale reliability and good test-retest reliability over an average interval of five years, identifying subjects with known or presumed prenatal alcohol exposure in multiple detection studies. A score of 15 or higher on the FABS reliably distinguishes persons with FASD (sample mean/median = 20) from those without FASD (sample mean/median = 5).

The three individuals interviewed in this evaluation (Carolyn Smith (family friend and social worker), Jay Hall (friend), and Mike Hall (father of Jay Hall)) rated Mr. Floyd’s behavior on the FABS, producing the following results:

Fetal Alcohol Behavior Scale (FABS)

Rater	Relationship	Target Age	Raw Score
Carolyn Smith	Family Friend/Social Worker	12	25
Mike Hall	Father of Jay Hall	16	22
Jay Hall	Childhood Friend	20	22

b. Vineland Adaptive Behavior Scales – Third Edition (Vineland-3):

The Vineland-3 is a widely-used measure in mental health that assesses an evaluatee's adaptive behavior via ratings from individuals who know him/her well. Behavior items in Vineland-3 involve specific tasks typically performed at different stages of development, which are divided into three broad categories of adaptive behavior: Communication, Daily Living, and Socialization skills. Rather than asking whether the person is capable of performing a task, the Vineland-3 assesses whether the person regularly performs the task without prompting or assistance. The Vineland-3 manual recommends that family members or those who know the evaluatee very well function as respondents (i.e., 'raters'). For retrospective assessment, at least two raters are recommended in order to ensure reliability.

The Vineland-3 was administered to Carolyn Smith (family friend and social worker), Jay Hall (friend), and Mike Hall (father of Jay Hall), each of whom rated Mr. Floyd's behavior around the time he/she had regular contact with him: age 12 in the case of Carolyn Smith, age 16 in the case of Mike Hall, and age 20 in the case of Jay Hall.

Adaptive behavior ratings, scored by computer from an algorithm created by the test developer (Pearson), are shown in the table below. In the table, results are converted to standard scores for major domains (Mean = 100, Standard Deviation/SD = 15) and v-scale scores for subdomains (Mean = 15, Standard Deviation/SD = 3) and compared to age-norms.

Vineland-3

Domain / Subdomain	Carolyn Smith [Family Friend/Soc Worker]		Mike Hall [Jay Hall's Father]		Jay Hall [Childhood Friend]
	Target Age: 12		Target Age: 16		Target Age: 20
	v-Scale/ Std Score	Percentile	v-Scale/ Std Score	Percentile	v-Scale/ Std Score	Percentile
Receptive	1		1		1
Expressive	1		1		1
Written	9		7		7
COMMUNICATION	36	<1	28	<1	20	<1
Personal	8		8		5
Domestic	9		9		5
Community	7		6		4
DAILY LIVING	66	1	51	<1	32	<1
Interpersonal Relationships	5		9		3
Play/Leisure Time	2		6		4
Coping Skills	4		8		5
SOCIALIZATION	38	<1	60	<1	20	<1
ADAPTIVE COMPOSITE	48	<1	48	<1	25	<1

The Vineland results shown above provide reliable and convergent data that quantify the nature and severity of Mr. Floyd's adaptive behavior in childhood and adulthood. Results show that compared to other 12- and 16-year-olds, Mr. Floyd's adaptive functioning was severely impaired (Adaptive Composite scores = 48, or approximately 3.5 standard deviations below the mean of 100). Such ratings are consistent with Dr. Maria Cardle's psychological evaluation in 1989 when Mr. Floyd was 13. According to Mr. Floyd's childhood friend Jay Hall, Mr. Floyd's functioning was profoundly impaired in his early adult years (Adaptive Composite score = 25, or 5.0 standard deviations below the mean).

Vineland-3 scores also show Mr. Floyd's adaptive functioning decreased significantly over time, showing that as adaptive responsibilities and expectations became more complex with advancing age, his adaptive capacity diminished considerably in relation to age peers.

The level of Mr. Floyd's adaptive deficiency reported by all three raters is consistent with the FASD research,⁵⁵ as is the pattern of decreasing age-related adaptive ability over the course of the developmental years.^{56, 57}

c. Behavior Rating Inventory of Executive Function (BRIEF):

The BRIEF is a standardized respondent-based measure⁵⁸ that assesses an individual's executive functioning or self-regulation in his/her everyday environment. Items on the BRIEF are rated in the same manner as items on the Vineland-3 (see below), but unlike the Vineland-3 and other adaptive measures, the BRIEF contains validity scales that address response bias.

In order to assess the possibility of biased Vineland-3 behavior ratings in the current evaluation (see above), the BRIEF also was administered to Carolyn Smith (family friend and social worker), Jay Hall (friend), and Mike Hall (father of Jay Hall).

Assessment results on the BRIEF, scored via a computer algorithm supplied by the test developer (Pearson Assessments) are shown in the table below.

⁵⁸ Internal consistency was high for the Informant Report normative sample (alpha range = .80-.93 for clinical scales; .95-.98 for indexes and GEC). Using a mixed sample of clinical or healthy adults who were seen for clinical evaluation or research study participation, internal consistency was high for the Informant Report Form (alpha range = .85-.95 for clinical scales; .96-.98 for indexes and GEC). Test-retest correlations across the clinical scales ranged from .91-.94 over an average interval of 4.21 weeks for the Informant Report Form (n = .44). In terms of convergent validity, the Informant Report Form of the BRIEF-A scales, indexes, and GEC demonstrated significant correlations in the expected direction with self- and informant reports on the Frontal Systems Behavior Scale (FrSBe), Dysexecutive Questionnaire (DEX), and Cognitive Failures Questionnaire (CFQ).

BRIEF Reliability Scales

Results on BRIEF validity scales show that all three individuals approached the task of rating Mr. Floyd's behavior in a straightforward, unbiased manner:

H. PRIMARY DISABILITIES

19. Organic brain damage in FASD directly impairs the cognitive skills needed to think adequately and self-regulate. In turn, the cognitive dysfunction in FASD directly impairs adaptive functioning (i.e., real-world behavior) in an empirically demonstrated predictive manner.^{59, 60} Regardless of IQ, comprehensive neuropsychological testing in FASD typically finds variable “patchy” cognitive profiles characterized by relative strengths and weaknesses that on average fall below full-scale IQ (i.e., between-test variability), which reflects intermittent exposure to alcohol during gestation even when exposure is heavy and regular.

At my request, Dr. Paul Connor graphically portrayed Mr. Floyd's cognitive test results documented in previous evaluation reports (see Exhibit 1 below): Dr. Cardle's testing in 1989 when Mr. Floyd was 13; test results from Drs. Dougherty, Paul, and Schmidt in 2000; and Dr. Mack's testing in 2006. Current adaptive assessment results from the Vineland-3 also are included (see last column on the right side of Exhibit 1). In Exhibit 1, direction of deficit is made constant to facilitate ‘apples-to-apples’ comparison. The horizontal green line in Exhibit 1 depicts z-score mean or average score (i.e., “0”) for each test; the horizontal red line depicts the cut-point for a “deficit” finding according to measurement guidelines for FAS published by the Centers for Disease Control⁶¹ (i.e., -1 SD except for IQ, which requires -2 SD).

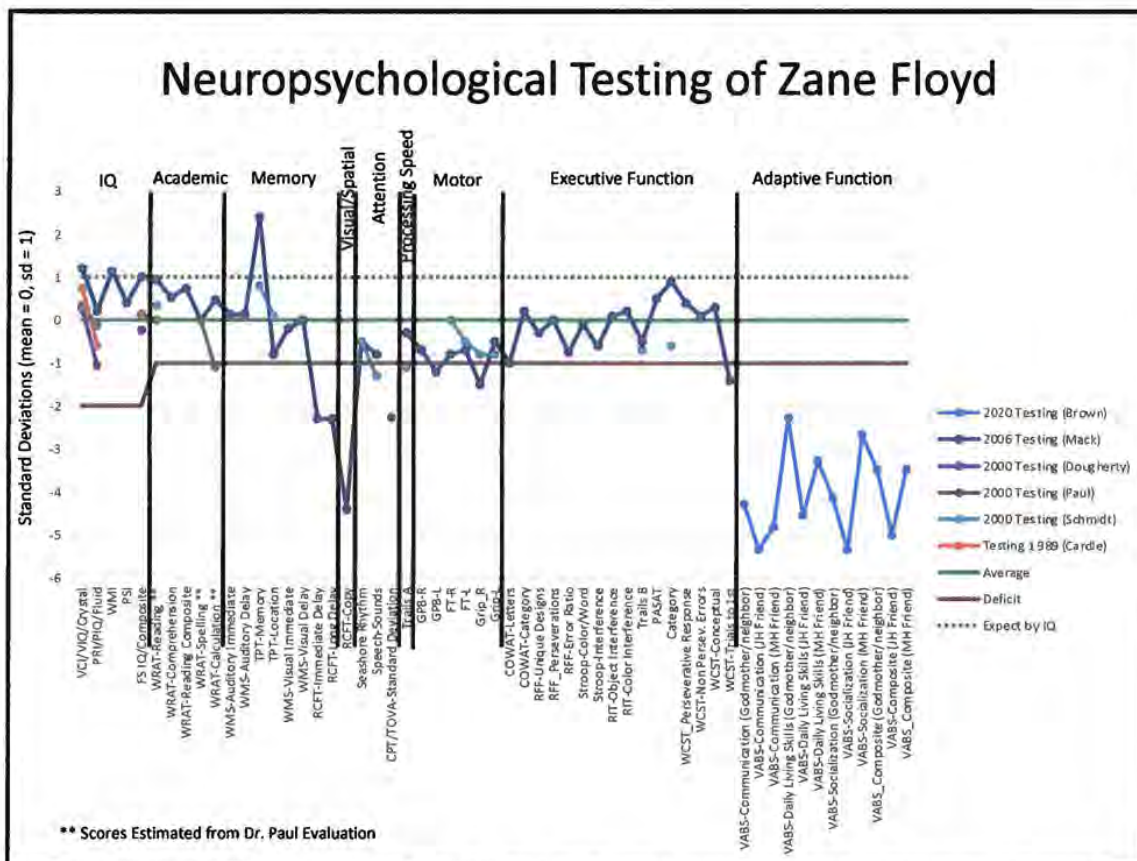

Exhibit 1. Zane Floyd's neuropsychological and adaptive assessment results from age 13 to the present

As can be seen in Exhibit 1, Mr. Floyd's cognitive test results (excluding adaptive functioning) reflect extreme variability, ranging from a high score of 2.4 SDs above the mean on a memory subtest (i.e., ability to remember rather simple geometric shapes he had held and examined with his hands while blindfolded) to a low score of 4.4 SDs below the mean on a visuospatial construction task (i.e., ability to copy a complex figure with significant details and interactions between components). Overall, testing and adaptive assessment found deficiency in the following 10 domains:

Cognitive Domains

- IQ (significant discrepancies among quotient/index scores)
- Attention
- Academic Achievement (math calculation)
- Memory/Learning (increasingly deficient performance with increasing task complexity on visual tasks)
- Visuospatial Construction
- Motor Coordination

- Executive functioning (initial development of problem-solving strategies)

Adaptive Domains

- Communication (Vineland-3 – all 3 raters)
- Daily Living Skills (Vineland-3 – all 3 raters)
- Socialization (Vineland-3 – all 3 raters)

It is notable and consistent with FASD that Mr. Floyd's full-scale IQ varied widely (i.e., 101 when tested by Dr. Cardle, 94 when tested by Dr. Dougherty, 102 when tested by Dr. Paul, and 115 when tested by Dr. Mack). The latter score, which reflects significant improvement in verbal skills, likely was due in part to long-term abstinence from alcohol and drugs while incarcerated. Because of the significant discrepancies in sub-test scores, Mr. Floyd's full-scale IQ scores are not reliable representations of his intellectual functioning. As noted in Paragraph 13, IQ scores in FASD range widely in FASD from the profoundly deficient range to the superior range⁶² (e.g., IQs in this population have been recorded as high as 142⁶³). When IQs fall in the average range, which generally was the case for Mr. Floyd, significant discrepancies within IQ subtests are diagnostically meaningful.⁶⁴

20. The cognitive deficits in FASD directly impair adaptive functioning. Adaptive functioning reflects everyday real-world capacity to deal with tasks and challenges in contexts that range from semi-structured school environments to completely unstructured community settings. When children exhibit chronic learning, social, and self-regulation problems in the relatively-structured school years, such a pattern essentially predicts that later in life, they will have even greater difficulties in the unstructured real world. While it may be possible for a person to compensate for one or two mild impairments in a single cognitive domain, when there are multiple mild impairments in several areas of the brain, compensation is virtually impossible without external structure and supports.⁶⁵ That is, the impact on behavior from a pervasive pattern of mild cognitive impairment is devastating. Deficient adaptive functioning appears to be universal in FASD, regardless of stage of development, instrument used to measure behavior, or IQ.^{66, 67, 68, 69, 70}

21. In Mr. Floyd's case, not only does he have many mild deficits in cognitive functioning, some of his cognitive skills are moderately or severely impaired. As can be seen visually in the Vineland-3 scores depicted in Exhibit 1, the widespread deficits seen in Mr. Floyd's cognitive profile have a profound effect on his adaptive behavior. According to Dr. Connor, Mr. Floyd's Vineland-3 results average -4.8 SDs for Communication, -3.4 SDs for Daily Living Skills, -4.0 SDs for Socialization, and -4.0 for overall adaptive functioning.

I. SECONDARY DISABILITIES

22. Nearly 25 years ago, a massive research study sponsored by the CDC⁷¹ identified an adverse developmental trajectory in FASD, characterized by multiple negative life course outcomes or "secondary disabilities." The figure below, taken from this secondary disabilities study and reprinted with permission from the University of Washington's Fetal Alcohol and Drug Unit, shows study results for children, adolescents, and adults with FAS and those with FAE (the outdated diagnostic term for ARND).

Negative developmental outcomes in FASD ("Secondary Disabilities")

⁷¹ Streissguth, Barr, Kogan, & Bookstein, op. cit.

As can be seen above, compared to normally-developing children, those with FASD (i.e., both FAS and FAE/ARND) are at very high risk of several negative developmental outcomes, particularly if they are exposed in childhood to risk factors such as abuse, domestic violence, or neglect.⁷² In Mr. Floyd's case, records indicate he was exposed to all three risk factors.

The table below, which assesses Mr. Floyd's life history in the context of the secondary disabilities research, reflects many of the secondary disabilities typically seen in FASD:

J. DIAGNOSTIC IMPRESSIONS

23. CNS dysfunction in FASD was diagnosed generally in DSM-IV-TR (2000) as cognitive disorder not otherwise specified (i.e., Cognitive Disorder NOS) and now is specifically diagnosed in DSM-5 (2013) as neurodevelopmental disorder associated with prenatal alcohol exposure (i.e., ND-PAE). Both DSM diagnoses constitute a “mental defect” in the forensic setting. ND-PAE is the diagnostic category used by DSM-5 to describe the sequelae of developmental, behavioral, intellectual, and functional problems seen in people exposed prenatally to alcohol.
24. DSM-5 diagnostic criteria for ND-PAE generally require evidence of prenatal alcohol exposure, at least one impairment in neurocognitive functioning (i.e., standard score of 70/75 or below on an individually administered IQ test or impairments in executive functioning, learning, memory, or visual-spatial reasoning/organization), at least one impairment in self-regulation (i.e., mood or behavioral regulation, attention, or impulse control), and at least two domains of adaptive impairment (i.e., communication, social communication and interaction, daily living skills, or motor skills), with onset in the developmental period.

Records reviewed in my previous evaluation (10/17/06) reflect consistency between Mr. Floyd’s documented cognitive and adaptive functioning, developmental trajectory, and ND-PAE, as summarized in the analysis below (prepared in consultation with Neuropsychologist Paul Connor).

DSM-5 Criteria for ND-PAE

Criterion	Documented Impairments in Zane Floyd	Source [Testimony or Reports]
Prenatal alcohol exposure	Birth mother Valerie Floyd testified she drank alcohol heavily throughout her pregnancy with Mr. Floyd.	Trial testimony
	Social worker Jorge Abreu, who had conducted a psychosocial evaluation of Mr. Floyd, testified that Valerie Floyd told him her substance use began as a teenager and “continued through both pregnancies” and that she drank alcohol and used drugs, including LSD and cocaine, “throughout the pregnancy” with Mr. Floyd	Trial testimony
Neurocognitive impairments (at least 1)	Intellectual (sub-test discrepancies)	Cardle (1989), Dougherty (2000), Mack (2013)
	Memory (complex visuospatial)	Mack (2013)
	Academic Learning (math calculation)	Paul (2000)
	Visuospatial Construction	Mack (2006)

Self-Regulation impairments (at least 1)	Attention	Paul (2000), Schmidt (2000)

	Motor Coordination	Mack (2006)
Childhood onset	Documented evidence of impairments in childhood	Record review
Disturbance causes clinically significant distress or impairment in social, occupational, or other important areas of functioning.	8/8 secondary disabilities	Current analysis
Disorder is not better explained by the direct physiological effects of postnatal use of a substance, a general medical condition other than FASD, a genetic condition, or environmental neglect.	Impairments precede substance use in the teen years No evidence of traumatic brain injury in childhood No evidence of a general medical condition other than prenatal alcohol exposure Environmental neglect may have had an additive and cumulative effect on underlying brain damage but does not explain life history	Current analysis

As can be seen above, Mr. Floyd's functioning and life history well exceed DSM-5 diagnostic criteria for ND-PAE, the current diagnosis under DSM-5 for the CNS impairment (or "mental defect") in FASD.

25. In summary, Zane Floyd's adaptive/functional history is consistent with the mental defect associated with FASD, which in DSM-5 is diagnosed generally as Other Specified Neurodevelopmental Disorder (Code 315.8) and specifically as Neurodevelopmental Disorder Associated with Prenatal Alcohol Exposure (ND-PAE).

K. COMPARING FASD TO ADHD AND ID

26. FASD, ADHD, and ID are all classified by DSM-5 as neurodevelopmental disorders, meaning all three disorders typically (a) manifest early in development, often before a child enters grade school; (b) are "characterized by developmental deficits that produce impairments of personal, social, academic, or occupational functioning"; and (c) involve a range of developmental deficits that vary "from very specific limitations of learning or control of executive functions to global impairments of social skills or intelligence” (DSM-5, p. 31).

27. Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD): In DSM-5, ADHD is described (p. 59) as “a persistent pattern of inattention and/or hyperactivity-impulsivity that interferes with functioning or development...” Three sub-types are identified as: (a) inattention, (b) hyperactivity – impulsivity, and (c) mixed. Most individuals fall in the third, mixed, sub-category. For the first two sub-types, six or more symptoms from a list of behaviors must have persisted “for at least six months (five months for older adolescents and adults) to a degree that is inconsistent with developmental level and that negatively impacts directly on social and academic/ occupational activities” and that are “not solely a manifestation of oppositional behavior, defiance, hostility, or failure to understand tasks or instructions” (for type 1) and “do not occur exclusively during the course of schizophrenia or another psychotic disorder” (for type 2). These symptoms must be evident before age 12. Although ADHD can be diagnosed in adults, most individuals diagnosed with the disorder in childhood cease to manifest the disorder as they enter adulthood.⁷³ Although people with ADHD often do poorly in school because of inattention and interpersonal insensitivity due to impulsivity, there is no cognitive or adaptive functioning criterion for the diagnosis.
28. Intellectual Disability (ID): ID has three definitional criteria: significant deficits in intellectual functioning, impaired adaptive functioning, and onset within the developmental period (typically interpreted to mean before age 18). Prong One (intellectual impairment) is measured by a full-scale IQ score of 70-75 or below, although other measures such as Executive Functions can be cited. Adaptive functioning, typically measured through a rating instrument such as the Adaptive Behavior Assessment System (ABAS) or Vineland, has three components: Conceptual, Practical, and Social, summarized into a Composite Adaptive Index. Qualitative evidence such as gullibility and poor risk awareness also are important. Significant deficiency (< 2 standard deviations) has to be shown on standardized instruments for only one of these four indices. As a rule, ID is a lifelong status, although with practice individuals can improve adaptive skills during adulthood.
29. Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD): CNS abnormality in ND-PAE typically is established by multiple cognitive impairments (executive dysfunction and other cognitive impairments) and impairments in adaptive functioning. For the latter, impairments are required in at least two of the three domains usually included in standardized instruments (communication, daily living or practical skills, and socialization), which actually is a more stringent requirement than in ID (where only one impaired adaptive domain is required). In Mr. Floyd’s case, Vineland-3 scores fall well below the -2 SD level in communication, daily living skills, and socialization.

Mr. Floyd was diagnosed in 2006 with partial FAS,⁷⁴ a diagnosis that falls under the FASD umbrella. According to IOM criteria,⁷⁵ the core diagnostic element in partial FAS (which requires only some of the physical indicia in (a) and (b)) is CNS dysfunction. CNS dysfunction stems directly from structural brain damage that directly impairs thinking and behavior throughout the lifespan.⁷⁶

As noted previously, ND-PAE currently represents the CNS dysfunction for all of the medical disorders under the FASD umbrella under DSM-5 (i.e., FAS, partial FAS, and ARND) and is “intended to encompass the full range of developmental disabilities associated with exposure to alcohol in utero” (DSM-5, p. 799).

DSM-5 also notes that evidence of CNS dysfunction in ND-PAE varies by developmental stage. Although about half of young children prenatally exposed to alcohol show marked developmental delay in the first three years of life, others may not exhibit signs of CNS dysfunction until they are preschool- or school-age. When children with ND-PAE reach school age, learning difficulties, impairments in executive function, and problems with integrative language functions usually emerge more clearly, and both social skills deficits and challenging behavior may become more evident. As school and other requirements become more complex over the course of development, greater deficits are noted. The CNS dysfunction seen in those with ND-PAE “often leads to decrements in adaptive behavior and to maladaptive behavior with lifelong consequences,” as this population has “a higher prevalence of disrupted school experiences, poor employment records, trouble with the law, confinement (legal or psychiatric), and dependent living conditions” (DSM-5, p. 800). As shown in the secondary disabilities table above (Paragraph 22), Mr. Floyd’s functional history reflects this developmental course.

30. FASD ≠ ADHD: FASD is a medical disorder that occasionally is misunderstood as the functional equivalent of ADHD. This view may reflect the fact that FASD often is not diagnosed in childhood because very high rates of co-occurring attention and/or hyperactivity problems distract providers and tend to get diagnosed as ADHD, thereby masking the underlying medical condition.⁷⁷ It is understandable that because both disorders often share attention and self-regulation problems like hyperactivity, FASD would come to be seen incorrectly as the functional equivalent of ADHD. However, the problem with this assumption is that disability severity varies substantially in individuals with neurodevelopmental disorders.

Researchers in the FASD field⁷⁸ have noted the following significant differences between FASD and ADHD, differences that refute the concept of FASD’s equivalency with ADHD: (a) etiology and course of the two conditions are very different, in that FASD has a single etiology that is known while ADHD is etiologically multifactorial and typically unknown; (b) FASD has greatly increased mortality risk when compared to ADHD; (c) FASD is far more complex and severe and requires much higher levels of care than ADHD; (d) annual cost of care is over 10 times higher for FASD compared to ADHD; (e) expression of the two conditions is dissimilar in that FASD has a similar male to female ratio while ADHD is three times more prevalent in males; (f) while FASD is a causal factor for ADHD, there is no evidence ADHD is a causal factor for FASD; (g) ADHD gradually decreases in severity across childhood and adolescence while FASD becomes more complex, resulting in more severe adaptive deficiency and greater adversity across the lifespan; and (h) FASD is equivalent to ID in terms of everyday adaptive behavior, which is not the case for ADHD.

Whether measured in terms of depth of impairment for a single defining ability or breadth of impaired abilities and their effects on overall adaptive functioning, FASD is a very severe disorder comparable to ID, and ADHD is a much less severe disorder, as the analysis that follows makes clear.

- a. Definitional Complexity: One way to measure disability severity is by definitional complexity (i.e., number of domains that must be impaired in DSM-5 to meet diagnostic criteria). Table 1 below compares the three disorders in terms of DSM-5 definitional complexity:

Disorder	Neurocognitive Deficits		Self-Regulatory Deficiency ⁷⁹	Adaptive Function Deficits	Significantly Interferes with Functioning	Lifelong	Number of Elements
	Deficient IQ	Executive Function
FASD	NO	YES	YES	YES	YES	YES	5
ADHD	NO	NO	YES	NO	YES	NO	2
ID	YES	YES	NO	YES	YES	YES	5

Table 1. Extent of definitional complexity in the three disorders

With respect to definitional complexity, FASD and ID are similar in that both require 5 diagnostic elements. In contrast, ADHD is the outlier with only 2 required diagnostic criteria. The only diagnostic element in ID that is not required in FASD is deficient IQ although in FASD, 27% of people with FAS and 9% of those with FAE/ARND have an IQ of 70 or below. Generally in FASD, adaptive functioning tends to fall approximately 2 standard deviations below IQ, regardless of specific diagnosis.⁸⁰ Both ID and FASD require adaptive dysfunction: FASD requires at least 2 deficient adaptive domains; ID requires at least 1. As noted previously, no adaptive dysfunction is required in ADHD. FASD (as defined in ND-PAE) and ADHD both require self-regulatory dysfunction. In fact, at its core, ADHD is defined solely by two aspects of deficient self-regulation: attention and impulse control. In contrast to ADHD with respect to the self-regulatory criterion, FASD is defined by a broader range of self-regulation deficiency: attention, impulse control, and/or mood or behavioral regulation. Overall, considering the range of definitional elements in DSM-5, FASD and ID are tied with respect to diagnostic complexity, and both are substantially more complex and severe than ADHD.

- b. Functional Capacity: Disability severity also can be compared in terms of how extensively a disorder typically impairs functional capacity (i.e., both cognitive and adaptive functioning). Ratings below in Table 2, arrived at in consultation with Dr. Stephen Greenspan (a national expert on ID), are based on the following scale: 0 = Mild (equal to or less than 10% of the disability's population), 1 = Moderate (11-49% of the disability's population), and 2 = Severe (50% or more of the disability's population).

Based on the analysis in Table 2 above, FASD and ID are quite similar in terms of widespread functional deficiency in both cognition and adaptive functioning. In contrast, ADHD is mildly affected.

- c. Risk of Negative Outcomes: Another way of looking at disability severity is risk of adverse developmental outcomes, including secondary disabilities. Table 3 below ranks the three disorders in terms of secondary disabilities and other outcome risks on a 3-point ordinal scale that compares outcome risk: 3 = highest risk, 2 = next highest risk, and 0 = lowest risk.

Table 3. Adverse outcome risk in the three disorders

Based on ratings of adverse outcome risk in Table 3, it is clear people with FASD are at much greater risk of a negative developmental trajectory than those with ADHD or ID. Much of this risk stems from lack of early diagnosis and appropriate interventions.¹¹⁶ In contrast, ID and ADHD tend to get diagnosed early in life, which significantly improves the odds of intervention (and protection in the case of ID). Overall, both ADHD and ID are mild severity disabilities compared to FASD in terms of negative life course outcomes. Notably, most people with FASD as well as ID cannot live independently in society as adults.¹¹⁷

31. ID Equivalence: Whether measured by definitional complexity, functional capacity, outcome risk, or any other logical metric, FASD is a much more severe disorder than ADHD and, in some cases, ID and therefore is well-deserving of being viewed under the rubric of “ID Equivalence.” The bases for FASD-ID similarity and FASD/ADHD dissimilarity are multifaceted and compelling, as described below:
- a. Etiology: Both ID and FASD stem from permanent structural brain damage. ADHD is etiologically multifactorial (and typically unknown). While FASD is a causal factor for both ID and ADHD, there is no evidence ADHD or ID are causal factors for FASD.
 - b. Diagnostic Protocol: Typically, ID and ADHD are diagnosed by a single provider (e.g., mental health professional or pediatrician) in the context of relatively minimal testing (in DSM-5, ID requires IQ testing and adaptive assessment; ADHD does not require any testing). In contrast, FASD is diagnosed by a multidisciplinary team comprised of a neuropsychologist to conduct comprehensive cognitive testing to address the multiple domains that must be deficient per diagnostic criteria, an adaptive functioning specialist (usually a psychologist) to conduct standardized adaptive behavior assessment and assess documented life history for consistency with FASD, and a medical doctor to assess physical indicia of FASD (e.g., facial and growth abnormalities, brain damage). Thus, of the three conditions, FASD requires more resources to diagnose.
 - c. Cognitive Dysfunction: While IQ distinguishes between ID and FASD in the majority of individuals with FASD, executive and everyday adaptive functioning in both conditions tends to be identical.¹¹⁸ As noted previously, significant discrepancies in IQ domains are seen frequently in persons with FASD,¹¹⁹ which makes full-scale IQ an inaccurate way to classify functional deficiency in FASD.¹²⁰ Full-scale IQ also has become less important in ID according to DSM-5 as “intellectual” deficiency now is defined as a broad array of mixed impairments that mostly involve executive dysfunction (i.e., reasoning, problem solving, planning, abstract thinking, judgment, learning from instruction and experience, practical understanding). Meta-analyses have found that persons with ADHD have full-scale IQs (FSIQs) that are only 9 points lower than neurotypical controls^{121, 122}; in contrast to ADHD, average IQ in FAS is 79 (21 points lower than neurotypical controls).¹²³ A meta-analysis that directly compared IQ in FASD and ADHD found full-scale IQ was 16 points lower in FASD compared to ADHD.¹²⁴ Executive functioning also is similar in FASD and ID but different from both in ADHD. Executive functioning tends to be universally impaired in FASD as well as ID,¹²⁵ but not all children with ADHD have executive functioning impairments.^{126, 127} In fact, a 15-study meta-analysis that compared executive functioning in FASD and ADHD found persons with FASD performed significantly worse on cognitive measures of executive functioning than those with ADHD.¹²⁸ In addition, a 51-study meta-analysis found more extensive executive dysfunction in FASD compared to ADHD, particularly in executive skills requiring complex mental effort.¹²⁹

There also is a fundamental difference in the qualitative nature of the attention deficit seen in FASD versus ADHD. Children with FASD have greater difficulty with encoding (i.e., capacity to hold information temporarily in working memory while performing mental operations on it) and set-shifting (i.e., ability to flexibly shift attention from one stimulus facet to another when appropriate), while children with ADHD have greater difficulty with focusing (i.e., concentrating attention on a particular task) and sustaining attention (i.e., staying on task).^{130, 131}

- d. Adaptive Dysfunction: Both ID and FASD require adaptive impairment in DSM-5 (at least one deficient adaptive domain in ID, and at least two deficient adaptive domains in FASD), typically making people with ID and FASD indistinguishable from each other in terms of everyday behavior.¹³² Moreover, adaptive deficits in FASD tend to worsen with age, with adolescents showing arrested development that persists well into the adult years.^{133, 134, 135} In stark contrast to both FASD and ID, ADHD involves a very narrow band of dysfunction, affecting only one (attention) and sometimes two (attention plus executive functioning) cognitive domains, with no adaptive behavior deficiency. Most people with ADHD are able to support themselves and live independently in their adults years, while only a very small percentage of adults with ND-PAE can do both.¹³⁶

- e. Comorbidity: Unlike ADHD, FASD has extremely high rates of comorbidity. For example, a systematic review of prevalence studies that compared rates of comorbid mental disorders and neurodevelopmental disorders in FASD versus normally-constituted age-peers found that those with FASD were 45 times more likely to be diagnosed with ADHD, 22 times more likely to be diagnosed with ID, 13 times more likely to be diagnosed with oppositional defiant disorder, nearly 12 times more likely to be diagnosed with a psychotic disorder, 10.6 times more likely to be diagnosed with depression, and 10 times more likely to be diagnosed with a learning disorder.¹³⁷
- f. Likelihood of Misdiagnosis: In the United States, 99.9% of people with FASD are undiagnosed or misdiagnosed.¹³⁸ In cases where attention and/or hyperactivity symptoms are prominent, such symptoms tend to get diagnosed as ADHD; in cases involving deficient IQ, ID typically is diagnosed, concealing underlying FASD. Notably, FASD is the leading cause of both ID and ADHD.¹³⁹ In children with FASD, average or low-average IQs in the context of learning disabilities, self-regulation problems, social deficits, and interpersonal difficulties often lead teachers and providers to attribute the difficulties to parenting deficiency. Moreover, when such symptoms occur in the context of attention problems and hyperactivity, providers misdiagnose ADHD, which is far more familiar than FASD to medical and mental health professionals. Under DSM-IV-TR, nearly all mental health professionals were inexperienced in FASD because there was no diagnosis specific to the condition until DSM-5 was published in 2013. As recently as 2015, a study found that 80% of pediatricians could not accurately diagnose FAS in children presenting with developmental and behavioral problems.¹⁴⁰ Consequently, prior to 2013, if a child had attention and/or hyperactivity problems, such symptoms were diagnosed as ADHD, with cognitive symptoms beyond attention and hyperactivity (e.g., learning disabilities, self-regulation problems, social deficits and interpersonal difficulties) attributed to a “severe” type of ADHD. Thus, unlike ADHD and ID, FASD is very much a hidden disability. Unfortunately, once children with FASD are misdiagnosed with ADHD, treatment tends to be limited to stimulant medication, with no developmental disabilities interventions during childhood for the pervasive brain-based cognitive dysfunction in FASD.
- g. Course: Symptom manifestation in ID and FASD is lifelong and quite different from ADHD. Symptoms of ADHD often are eliminated or significantly reduced with medication; symptoms are permanent in FASD and ID.^{141, 142} Symptom manifestation in ADHD gradually decreases in severity across childhood and adolescence (i.e., research finds ADHD prevalence in adolescence is about half the childhood rate, and prevalence estimates continue to decrease by 50 percent more in adulthood¹⁴³). In contrast, symptom course in ID remains relatively stable over the developmental years into adulthood, but FASD becomes more complex and debilitating,¹⁴⁴ leading to greater adaptive severity in adulthood.¹⁴⁵

- h. Cost of Care: Estimated annual cost of care is high in both ID ($32,000¹⁴⁶) and FASD ($23,000¹⁴⁷). In contrast, estimated annual cost of care in ADHD is $5,000.¹⁴⁸ Beyond the personal costs of medical and mental health needs, FASD also is an important public health and social problem that imparts a large financial burden on such sectors as the healthcare system, mental health and substance abuse treatment services, foster care, criminal justice system, and long-term care.¹⁴⁹ In research directly comparing the cost of care in FASD versus ADHD, the annual cost of care in FASD was found to be over 10 times higher than in ADHD.¹⁵⁰
- i. Mortality: Life expectancy for males in the general population is 76 years.¹⁵¹ In contrast, life expectancy is 74 years in ID,¹⁵² 61 years in ADHD,¹⁵³ and only 34 years in FASD.¹⁵⁴ Thus, FASD has a greatly increased risk of mortality compared to ADHD and ID.

32. In summary, Zane Floyd's ND-PAE/FASD is a brain-based, congenital, lifelong, impactful disorder deserving of the rubric "ID Equivalence." Regardless of how severity is measured (e.g., definitional complexity, diagnostic protocol, functional capacity, risk of negative outcomes, cognitive dysfunction adaptive dysfunction, comorbidity, likelihood of misdiagnosis, course, annual cost of care, mortality), Mr. Floyd's FASD is similar in severity to ID but substantially more severe than ADHD, with broad ramifications that have affected all important functional domains in his life. Unlike ADHD, Mr. Floyd's ND-PAE/FASD is a cause-and-effect condition with clear etiology informed by five decades of science: prenatal alcohol exposure causes brain damage, which causes cognitive and adaptive dysfunction that leads to catastrophic consequences in some situations. Unlike ADHD, which only explains attention deficits, impulsivity, and hyperactive behavior during childhood, ND-PAE/FASD explains all of Mr. Floyd's behavior – across his entire lifespan.

Normal Brain Development

33. The mature brain is composed of more than 100 billion neurons,¹⁵⁵ the information processing cells in the brain. Neurons make connections with other neurons to form information processing networks that are responsible for our thoughts, sensations, feelings, and actions. The adult brain is estimated to have more than 60 trillion neuronal connections.¹⁵⁶ The largest and most important brain information processing networks are the neocortex (e.g., frontal, occipital, parietal, and temporal lobes) and subcortical nuclei that relay information to and from the neocortex. The subcortical nuclei are clusters of neurons located deep in the brain that serve as signal relay centers for communication within the neocortex and with the rest of the body. Because both the neocortex and subcortical nuclei contain the cell bodies of neurons, they are gray in appearance and thus are called “gray matter.” Populations of neurons connect to one another via fibers that extend to and from the cell bodies of individual neurons. There are two kinds of connecting fibers: axons that send electrochemical signals from neurons and dendrites that receive such input. Because axons are wrapped in a white fatty substance called myelin that, like insulation on a telephone wire, makes transmission of electrochemical signals more efficient, these fiber pathways of brain are referred to as “white matter.”
34. Brain development continues for an extended period postnatally. Generally, phylogenetically older cortical areas (e.g., brain regions associated with more basic functions) mature earlier than newer cortical regions (i.e., brain regions involved in executive functioning, attention, and motor coordination).¹⁵⁷ Frontal lobe maturation progresses in a back-to-front direction, beginning in the primary motor and sensory cortices and ending with the prefrontal cortex developing last.
35. Imaging studies show increases in gray matter density in childhood followed by losses in density during adolescence and early adulthood, which correlates with synaptic pruning.¹⁵⁸ Myelination, which speeds neuronal transmission, occurs throughout childhood and increases

36. Functionally, self-regulation – a central diagnostic criterion in ND-PAE – is the byproduct of interactions between neural processes that support controlled, reasoned, and deliberative thought (“executive processing”) and those that drive reactive, emotional, and reward-sensitive responding (“affective processing”).¹⁸¹ The affective processing system is the first to mature in normally developing adolescent brains. In fact, one of the most important structural and functional brain changes during adolescence is maturation of limbic and paralimbic areas associated with reward processing (e.g., amygdala, ventral striatum, orbitofrontal cortex, ventromedial prefrontal cortex, and superior temporal sulcus).^{182, 183, 184, 185} The affective system also includes neural circuits that mediate reward-sensitivity,¹⁸⁶ which is thought to influence “sensation-seeking”¹⁸⁷ as well as valuation and prediction of reward and punishment.^{188, 189, 190} The executive processing system is the last brain area to fully develop. During the course of normal brain development, connections between the prefrontal cortex and other self-regulatory brain regions become stronger and more efficient through pruning of unused neuronal connections, which decreases gray matter, and myelination (sheathing/insulating) of neurons, which increases white matter. In healthy brains, both processes support improved executive control and multitasking (i.e., planning, motivation, evaluating future consequences, weighing risk and reward, judgment, and decision making while simultaneously moderating strong unconscious neural impulses from the amygdala).^{191, 192, 193, 194} Development of these neural connections in late adolescence and early adulthood is thought to result in relatively late maturation of “top-down” control systems that gradually strengthen their influence over early emerging and largely subcortical “bottom-up” systems that are highly responsive to rewarding and emotional stimuli.¹⁹⁵

Behavioral evidence for delayed maturation in self-regulatory frontal regions is especially evident on tasks requiring inhibitory self-control.^{196, 197}

37. Although the still-maturing self-regulatory system in adolescents and young adults generally is adequate to support reasoned decision making in minimally arousing situations,^{198, 199, 200} in situations involving stress or other strong impulses from the amygdala, asynchronous maturation leaves the brain's affective processing system in a state of hypersensitivity during a period of time when the deliberative processing system is not yet mature enough to compensate for such heightened arousal, thereby increasing vulnerability to risky and reckless behavior.^{201, 202, 203, 204}

Brain Development in FASD

38. Born with widespread brain damage, people with FASD also exhibit abnormal and delayed brain maturation across the developmental years. Using magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) and diffusion tensor imaging (DTI) to study structural integrity and functional connectivity, studies consistently find significant maturational alterations and delays in the prefrontal cortex^{205, 206} and its microstructure^{207, 208, 209} in children, adolescents, and adults with prenatal alcohol exposure (PAE) compared to normally-developing age-peers. In stark contrast to normal changes in brain architecture during adolescence that improve speed and efficiency of neurochemical communication, convergent longitudinal research finds that individuals with PAE show: (a) blunted volume changes in grey matter in adolescence, indicating compromised pruning and diminished plasticity in the cerebral cortex, as well as (b) delayed white matter myelination. Together, these brain development anomalies in PAE significantly impair global network efficiency, speed of information processing, and executive self-regulation.

39. Longitudinal MRI studies focused on brain development in PAE versus brain development in unexposed individuals consistently find structural abnormalities in the former. For example, in a longitudinal study²¹⁰ using MRI to measure cortical volume changes over time, normal processes of brain maturation were significantly delayed or disrupted in children and adolescents with PAE. While unexposed controls showed a plastic cortex with a prolonged pattern of cortical volume increases in childhood followed by equally vigorous volume decreases in adolescence (i.e., an inverted “U” shaped pattern), individuals with PAE showed only volume loss in most cortical areas across the developing years. Another longitudinal MRI study^{211, 212} similarly found significantly less cortical thinning over time in self-regulatory brain regions (i.e., frontal, parietal, and limbic) in adolescents with PAE. In another longitudinal study that used a large sample size to follow brain development from age 7-18, researchers²¹³ found subjects with PAE consistently had smaller volumes than control subjects in structures throughout the brain, with significantly different trajectories of brain activation in visuospatial attention and working memory tasks compared to controls (i.e., in contrast to unexposed subjects who exhibited increasing brain activation during development, those with PAE exhibited decreasing brain activation). In a review of 64 MRI studies that compared PAE groups to unexposed control groups,²¹⁴ results indicated smaller total brain volume as well as smaller volume of both white and grey matter in specific cortical regions. The most consistently reported structural MRI findings were alterations in the shape and volume of the corpus callosum, as well as smaller volume in the basal ganglia and hippocampi. Resting-state functional MRI studies reported reduced functional connectivity between cortical and deep grey matter structures.
40. DTI, a process that measures water diffusion in brain tissue, provides exquisitely sensitive measures of white matter microstructure in vivo. A review of 23 DTI studies conducted on children, adolescents, and adults with PAE²¹⁵ found nearly universal diffusion abnormalities, with no brain regions spared. Such findings indicate delayed maturation of axonal tracts over the course of brain development, mostly through disruptions in the myelination process. Specifically, there was convergent evidence of impaired integrity in communication networks throughout the brain: (a) association fibers (axons connecting cortical areas within the same cerebral hemisphere), (b) projection fibers (white matter tracts connecting the cortex with deeper brain regions), and (c) callosal tracts (fibers connecting the right and left cerebral hemispheres). In other words, there was impaired white matter integrity in communication tracts throughout the brain throughout development. Moreover, in studies that also investigated brain-behavior links, abnormalities in white matter pathways important in self-regulation (e.g., corpus callosum, cerebellar peduncles, cingulum, and longitudinal fasciculi connecting frontal and temporoparietal regions) were consistently associated with extent of alcohol exposure and severity of cognitive/behavioral symptoms.

41. In summary, given that the normally-developing “adolescent brain” does not have mature executive control capacity until at least age 25 and brain development in young adults with FASD lags many years behind rates seen in neurotypical age peers, it is likely Mr. Floyd’s brain was not fully developed at the time of the offense due to his ND-PAE/FASD, which would have had an additive and cumulative effect on the brain damage he was born with.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF HERBERT DUZANT

I, Herbert Duzant, hereby declare as follows:

1. I am employed with the Federal Public Defender for the District of Nevada (FPD) as a Capital Habeas Investigator. I am assigned to Zane Floyd's case and have conducted both fact and mitigation investigations into his case and background.

2. The United States is currently in the midst of the worst global public health crisis in over 100 years. The United States Secretary of Health and Human Services declared COVID-19 a public health emergency on January 31, 2020. On March 12, 2020, a Declaration of Emergency was issued in the state of Nevada, which was followed by the first in a series of shelter in place directives and measures on March 17, 2020. On March 13, 2020, the President of the United States declared a National Emergency. The pandemic has forced the unprecedented closure of much of the country for the past year and as will be discussed, COVID-19 travel restrictions have hindered the ability to conduct a thorough and effective investigation for clemency on Mr. Floyd's behalf.

3. In order to properly represent Mr. Floyd in his clemency application, the defense team determined that it was important to: (1) explain how Mr. Floyd's life experiences affected his involvement in the crime, including his Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder, his lifetime of trauma, and his time in service to our nation as a Marine stationed at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; (2) show that Mr. Floyd is deeply remorseful for the offenses for which he has been convicted; (3) demonstrate that Mr. Floyd poses no threat of future criminal violence in prison and can live out his life constructively there; and (4) paint a detailed portrait of who Mr. Floyd was before the incident in question which will make clear Mr. Floyd is deserving of commutation of his death sentence to a sentence of life without the possibility of parole. These goals can only be meaningfully pursued through a factual case review and investigation conducted according to prevailing standards of practice for capital defense. That, in turn, requires travel and in-person contact with relevant sources of information. See Supplementary Guidelines for the Mitigation Function of Defense Teams in Death Penalty Cases, 36 Hofstra L. Rev. 677, 689 (2008) (noting the need for “face-to-face, one-on-one interviews” in capital cases).

4. The global pandemic however has limited the ability to travel due to the risk of serious illness or death for myself, members of the defense team and our families, expert witnesses, witnesses we wish to interview, and Mr. Floyd.

5. The defense team began to plan and prioritize the work that was required for Mr. Floyd’s clemency investigation well before last year’s shutdowns in March 2020 and the filing of the petition for writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court in June 2020. The team identified over twenty-five witnesses who needed to be interviewed on Mr. Floyd’s behalf, and a number of experts who needed to be retained. It was decided in February 2020 that in-person witness interviews would begin in earnest during the first two weeks of April 2020, but those plans were derailed by COVID-19 related shelter-in-place directives, travel restrictions, and closures here in Nevada as well as the other states where witnesses were located. We were also restricted from traveling during the earlier months of the pandemic because of delays in receiving ordered personal protective equipment (PPE). The lack of masks, hand sanitizer, sanitizing wipes, and other protective materials prevented the team from conducting any fieldwork within the state or around the country. We created travel plans for the Spring and Summer of 2020 because we believed, as many in the nation did at that time, that warmer weather would bring a great reduction in the infection rate of the virus. However, contrary to the understanding at the time, the nation experienced large surges in infection following the Memorial Day, Fourth of July, and Labor Day holidays.

6. Two witnesses who were in the Las Vegas area were willing to be interviewed with proper safety measures in place during the Summer of 2020, and the interviews took place thereafter.

7. The other witnesses, however, live in Arizona, California, Colorado, Michigan, Missouri, Texas, and Washington, where the rates of infection were high during and following the summer months. Further, the pandemic rendered domestic air travel a serious health risk not only to employees of this office but also to the witnesses we wished to interview.

8. When the number of COVID-19 cases began to trend downward at the end of September and beginning of October, I and another member of the defense team were able to fly to Texas and Arizona to interview a handful of witnesses. However, the planning and efforts to secure everyone's safety in making these trips took significant time to plan and execute.

9. The other scheduled out-of-state witness interviews however had to be cancelled in the late Fall and Winter due to the tremendous spike in COVID-19 related illness and death and the inability to travel safely.

10. Further, during this entire time period, members of the FPD were at times required to telework and conduct their duties remotely. Work on Mr. Floyd's case then was affected by technological issues and lack of access to case records, and the inability to order and review records in-person at different government agencies. All of this unfortunately slowed the work on Mr. Floyd's clemency petition.

11. Realizing the ability to travel would be severely curtailed for several months, some interviews of out-of-state witnesses were conducted by video conference and telephone calls. These interviews were only introductory in nature, however, because video and telephone interviews are not a satisfactory substitute for an in-person meeting.

12. A clemency case review and investigation seek to place in perspective the biological, psychological, and social history of the defendant. This is done by conducting several face-to-face in-person interviews with the family members, caretakers, teachers, classmates, physicians, coworkers, friends, and other members of the defendant's community who have knowledge of the defendant and his family. Maximizing the accuracy of information provided in an interview requires rapport building with witnesses to establish trust. While some information can be easy to share, many topics that must be explored are highly sensitive. A competent interview will sometimes delve into shameful family secrets which can re-traumatize those interviewed. This rapport occurs through person-to-person interviews, where one can make eye contact and invite warm and welcoming body language that gives the witness the space and support to speak truthfully and expansively about sensitive topics. In-person communication also provides witnesses with the ability to trust that not one else is listening, and that they are not being electronically recorded against their will or permission. Physical face-to-face communications foster an environment of confidentiality and trust.

13. At the present time, we have determined the need to interview and memorialize statements from over fifteen witnesses, located in five states. These witnesses include family members, friends, former coaches, and military personnel who served with Mr. Floyd in the Marines. And while it is still recommended that travel only take place when completely necessary, we are willing to complete this travel as efficiently and safely as we can. With that said though, interviewing that many witnesses in various geographical areas of the United States during a pandemic will be a herculean task, particularly with the rate of COVID-19 infections again on the rise in almost two dozen states across the country.

14. In addition to interviewing witnesses, the team needs to have in-person contact with Mr. Floyd, not only to include his input in our presentation materials, but also to prepare him for his clemency hearing and to obtain mental health evaluations. However, the defense team has not had in-person access to Mr. Floyd at Ely State Prison since March 2020 when the Nevada Department of Corrections ceased all legal and personal visits. And at this point it is still unknown when Ely State Prison will reopen. It is our understanding that Mr. Floyd has received one COVID-19 vaccine but is over a month away from receiving his second dose and being fully protected by the vaccine.

15. Additionally, at least one expert witness will need to visit with Mr. Floyd for an interview and evaluation. But until Ely State Prison reopens for visits, this is impossible.

16. The efforts to complete the investigation for Mr. Floyd's clemency petition are ongoing. However, the difficulties created by the COVID-19 pandemic continue to impair the investigation and development of material facts as stated above.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct, and that this declaration was executed on April 9, 2021, in Clark County, Nevada.

1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Whereas the federal constitution merely implies separation of powers by 3 delineating each branch’s responsibilities, the Nevada Constitution is explicit on 4 this constitutional protection:

5 The powers of the Government of the State of Nevada
6 shall be divided into three separate departments, — the 7 Legislative, — the Executive and the Judicial; and no persons charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any functions appertaining to either of others, except in the cases expressly directed or permitted in this constitution.

8 Nev. Const. Art. 3, § 1, ¶1; see also State v. Second Jud. Dist. Ct. (Hearn), 134 Nev.
9 783, 786, 432 P.3d 154, 158 (2018) (“Nevada’s Constitution goes one step further . . .
10 .”). The Clark County District Attorney’s Office is in violation of this proscription
11 because two deputy district attorneys currently serve in the Nevada Senate.
12 Because this concentration of executive department and legislative department
13 functions is unconstitutional, Floyd asks this Court to disqualify the Clark County 14 District Attorney’s Office from representing the State.

15 II. ARGUMENT

16 This Court is not only endowed with “broad discretion in determining 17 whether disqualification is required” but is affirmatively “responsible for controlling 18 the conduct of attorneys practicing before” it. See Brown v. Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct.
19 (Thalgott), 116 Nev. 1200, 1205, 14 P.3d 1266, 1269 (2000). In the context of a 20 public lawyer—like a district attorney—an appearance of impropriety requires 21 disqualification if it “is so extreme as to undermine public trust and confidence in 22 the judicial system.” Liapis v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct. (Liapis), 128 Nev. 414, 419,

1 282 P.3d 733, 737 (2012). As the Nevada Supreme Court has noted, these issues
2 present “delicate and sometimes difficult” “balancing and competing interests.”
3 Brown, 116 Nev. at 1205, 14 P.3d at 1269. Namely, motions to disqualify implicate 4 “each party’s right to be free from the risk of even inadvertent disclosure of 5 confidential information, and the public’s interest in the scrupulous administration
6 of justice.” Id. at 1205, 14 P.3d at 1270 (citing Hull v. Celanese Corp., 513 F.2d 568, 7 570 (2d Cir. 1975)).

8 This Court will grant a motion to disqualify if there is “at least a reasonable 9 possibility that some specifically identifiable impropriety did in fact occur” and “the 10 likelihood of public suspicion or obloquy outweighs the social interest which will be 11 served by a lawyer’s continued participation in a particular case.” Brown, 116 Nev.
12 at 1205, 14 P.3d at 1270.⁶ Because the Clark County District Attorney’s Office is in 13 violation of Article 3 of the Nevada Constitution, a specific and identifiable 14 impropriety has occurred. This constitutional violation creates not just the 15 likelihood but the reality of public suspicion and obloquy, and no social interest is 16 served by allowing the Clark County District Attorney to continue to represent the 17 State.

19 ⁶ This is not, as in State v. Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct. (Zogheib), 130 Nev. 158, 321
20 P.3d 882 (2014), a traditional conflict of interest. In Zogheib, the issue was whether 21 the Clark County District Attorney’s conflict of interest from his previous 22 employment required disqualifying the entire District Attorney’s Office. Id. at 159, 23 321 P.3d at 883. The Nevada Supreme Court noted that the appropriate standard for such a conflict is “whether the individual lawyer’s conflict would render it unlikely that the defendant would receive a fair trial unless the conflict is imputed to the prosecutor’s office.” Id. at 160, 321 P.3d at 883. Here, however, the issue is not Mr.
Wolfson’s prior employment, but the constitutional violation of mixing executive and legislative functions.

1 A. Violating Article 3 of the Nevada Constitution is a specific and 2 identifiable impropriety.

3 The basic facts are not subject to dispute. Two deputy district attorneys of the 4 Clark County District Attorney’s office are currently serving in the Nevada Senate.⁷
5 There is no question that these two senators are “charged with the exercise of 6 powers properly belonging to one of these departments.” Nev. Const. Art. 3, § 1, ¶1.
7 As senators, they are charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to the 8 Legislative Department. Nev. Const. Art. 4 § 1.

9 Nor can there be a question that the prosecution of offenses under Nevada
10 law is a “function” “appertaining” to the Executive Department. Time and time
11 again, the Nevada Supreme Court has treated prosecution as a quintessential
12 executive branch function. See, e.g., State v. Second Jud. Dist. Ct., 134 Nev. at 786, 13 432 P.3d at 158 (Nevada Supreme Court precedent “indicates that charging 14 decisions are within the executive realm and sentencing decisions are inherently 15 judicial functions”); Schoels v. State, 114 Nev. 981, 991, 966 P.3d 735, 741–42 (1998)
16 (Shearing, J., concurring) (“Charging decision are primarily a matter of discretion 17 for the prosecution, which represents the executive branch of government.”); Sandy 18 v. Fifth Jud. Dist. Ct., 113 Nev. 435, 440, 935 P.2d 1148, 1150–51 (1997) (noting 19 judicial power to reject plea bargains a necessary check on “the abuse of 20 prosecutorial (executive) prerogatives”); Righetti v. Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct., 133 Nev.

21
22 ⁷ See About Nicole, Nicole Cannizzaro for Senate District 6, available at 23 <https://www.nicolecannizzaro.com/about-nicole>; see also About Melanie, Melanie

1 42, 46, 388 P.3d 643, 647 (2017) (“And permitting a district court to accept such a
2 guilty plea would allow the judiciary to invade a realm where the executive branch
3 maintains almost exclusive control, in violation of separation-of-powers principles.”
4 (emphasis added)).

5 It follows that the Clark County District Attorney’s Office is “charged with 6 the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments,” namely, the 7 Executive Department. See Nev. Const. Art. 3, § 1, ¶1. As described above, 8 prosecution is a core Executive Department power, and Nevada law is explicit: “The 9 district attorney in each county shall be public prosecutor therein.” Nev. Rev. Stat. § 10 252.080. And the district attorney “may appoint deputies, who are authorized to 11 transact all official business related to those duties of the office” Nev. Rev.
12 Stat. § 252.070(1). Moreover, the Attorney General, a constitutionally listed 13 executive officer, has supervisory responsibility over all district attorneys. See Nev.
14 Const. art. 5, § 19 ¶1; see also Nev. Rev. Stat. § 228.120(2) (Attorney General may 15 “[e]xercise supervisory powers over all district attorneys of the State in all matters 16 pertaining to the duties of their offices”).⁸ The Attorney General must 17 “prosecute or defend” in front of the Nevada Supreme Court “[a]ll causes to which 18 the State may be a party.” Nev. Rev. Stat. § 228.140(1)(a).

19 Thus, whether construed as “powers properly belonging to one of these 20 departments” or as “any functions, appertaining to either of the others” the Clark

21
22 ⁸ Notably, the Attorney General’s office has unilateral authority to “[a]pppear
23 in, take exclusive charge of and conduct any prosecution in any court of this State for a violation of any law of this State, when in his or her opinion it is necessary, or when requested by the Governor.” Nev. Rev. Stat. § 228.120(3).

1 County District Attorney's Office is in violation of Article 3 of the Nevada
2 Constitution. The two senate-prosecutors have powers properly belonging to the 3 Legislative Department and exercise functions appertaining to the executive
4 department. But also, the Clark County District Attorney's office has powers
5 properly belonging to the Executive Department, and exercises—through its two 6 deputies who are senators—functions appertaining to the Legislative Department.

7 The Nevada Constitution is explicit: this mixing of powers and functions is 8 prohibited. Art. 3, § 1, ¶1. And there are good reasons for this prohibition. With 9 reference to the federal constitution, "The Founders recognized that the 10 combination of legislative and prosecutorial power is a much more explosive 11 mixture than the combination of judicial and prosecutorial power because the 12 former would likely lead to the abuse of power due to the highly political nature of 13 the legislature." Todd David Peterson, Federal Prosecutorial Independence, 15 14 Duke J. Const. L. & Pub. Pol'y 217, 237 (2020) (emphasis added). Separating the 15 powers of prosecution from the power of legislation is "designed to protect [the 16 process of prosecution] from political influence and unfairness to those who are 17 subject to criminal investigation and prosecution." Id. at 261.

18 This violation of the separation of powers principle, standing alone, is a 19 "specific and identifiable impropriety." Brown, 116 Nev. at 1205, 14 P.3d at 1270.
20 However, this Court should not ignore the politically helpful timing of the Clark 21 County District Attorney revealing to local press his intention to seek a warrant of 22 execution—a mere two days after a bill to abolish the death penalty was read and 23

1 then referred to the Assembly Judiciary Committee. Nor should this Court ignore
2 the politically helpful timing of the Clark County District Attorney filing its motion
3 the day after the Assembly voted on its bill. The separation of legislative and 4 prosecutorial power is specifically intended to prevent this kind of political 5 manipulation of criminal processes.

6 B. The Clark County District Attorney’s violation of Article 3 of the 7 Nevada Constitution creates a likelihood of public suspicion and no social interest is served by allowing the Clark County District Attorney’s Office to continue to represent the State.

8 The political implications of the Clark County District Attorney’s statements
9 to the Las Vegas Review-Journal were immediately apparent. The article itself
10 drew the connection, referencing the Assembly Bill and noting that “Floyd’s 11 execution could take place as lawmakers wrap up their 2021 session, barring any 12 further legal hurdles.”⁹ Indeed, the Clark County District Attorney seemed, himself, 13 to appreciate the political implications by instructing “legislative leaders” to 14 “recognize that there are some people who commit such heinous acts”¹⁰ Other 15 quoted individuals remarked on the politics of the Clark County District Attorney’s

17 ⁹ Ferrara, supra n.3.

18 ¹⁰ Id. Notably, both the senator-prosecutors have important leadership roles
19 in the Nevada Senate: one is the Majority Leader and Vice-Chair of the Senate 20 Judiciary Committee, the other is the Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee. The 21 Majority Leader has discretion over many matters related to all bills, including 22 Assembly Bill 395. See, e.g., Nev. S. Standing R. 40(1) (81st Session 2021)
23 (authority to appoint all standing and select committees). The chair of any Senate committee has unilateral authority to “determine the agenda of each meeting of the committee,” subject only to the qualification that other committee members may request an item or that a majority of the committee may add an item. See Nev. S.
Standing R. 53(10) (81st Session 2021). Thus, the Chair of Senate Judiciary Committee—one of the employees of the Clark County District Attorney’s Office—has great discretion in determining whether Assembly Bill 395 will receive a hearing or a vote.

1 decision.¹¹ Social media reactions expressed suspicion and concern about the Clark
2 County District Attorney's motivations.¹² Subsequent reporting also noted the 3 connection.¹³

4 These political implications raise serious questions regarding the Clark
5 County District Attorney's separation of powers violation. How closely is the Clark
6 County District Attorney working with his senate-prosecutors? Are they exchanging 7 information related to the execution warrant of Zane Floyd and the abolition bill? Is 8 the timing of the execution warrant of Zane Floyd to politically aid the senate-
9 prosecutors? The answers to these questions, or others, matter less than that 11 ¹¹ Id. (quoting Scott Coffee: "These things are always politicized to some 12 extent," and Franny Forsman: "Moving forward on it now just seems like this is the 13 wrong time . . . Let people think about this. Let the legislators think about this.

(Prosecutors) are trying to put this case front and center with the Legislature.

1 reasonable members of the public might ask them. The disqualification standard
2 asks not whether public suspicion is confirmed, but whether there is a reasonable 3 likelihood of it.

4 And there can be no question that such a reasonable likelihood exists. Media
5 coverage of the abolition bills in Nevada have consistently noted that the Senate
6 Majority Leader and the Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee are prosecutors 7 for the Clark County District Attorney's office.¹⁴ This reasonable likelihood would 8 exist, though, notwithstanding media coverage. The Clark County District Attorney 9 has a supervisory role over the two senate-prosecutors; he has made his policy
10 preference known, and used the powers of his office to highlight a case and tell 11 "legislative leaders" to consider that case in their vote on pending legislation. This Ferrara, supra n.3 ("Two prosecutors, including Senate Majority Leader Nicole

1 use of power creates a conflict of interest for the senate-prosecutors: they may vote
2 in line with their boss or vote against him and risk their stature within the office.
3 Placing the senate-prosecutors in this position violates the public trust.

4 There is no social interest in allowing the Clark County District Attorney to 5 continue the prosecution in this case. First, the constitutional violation, and the 6 corresponding public suspicion, cannot be outweighed by any social interest in 7 allowing the Clark County District Attorney to continue to represent the State. But,
8 in the specific instance of Mr. Floyd's case, no social interest outweighs the 9 constitutional violation. Mr. Floyd's case has not been litigated in state court for the 10 last ten years. The last deputy district attorney listed on this case has since 11 retired.¹⁵ The trial attorneys on this case have also retired.¹⁶ Thus, it is likely that 12 attorneys working on this case will need to become familiar with the facts and 13 procedural history of the case: whether it is deputies within the Clark County
14 District Attorney or prosecutors outside of the office makes little practical 15 difference.

16 Additionally, there is a strong social interest in disqualifying the Clark 17 County District Attorney's office. End-stage litigation in a death penalty case is 18 always of high media and political interest. The citizens of the State of Nevada
19 deserve the assurance that the lawyers representing the State and seeking Mr.
