about a conspiracy -- what about a coaching would account for the fact that Megan described her parents as having shocked looks on their faces; that it looked like ghosts were in the house?

I submit to you, nothing other than what actually took place is this child was touched by this man on Saturday night and disclosed to her mother, her grandmother, and then to her aunt the very first opportunity she had to talk to someone that she felt comfortable talking to. Now, Defense argues well how come she didn't tell Fred? How come she didn't tell Uncle Mikey? How come she didn't tell the people at church? Who know? But a little four year old, who's been touched and had her privates dug in and her butt dug in by her uncle, someone she trusts, someone she's familiar with, why would she tell someone -- anyone other than her mother? Her mother's her safe place. Her mother's the same gender as she is. The first opportunity she had to get her mother alone, she told.

And how come Megan would have to be part of the coaching? Well, what did Megan know that other people didn't? Megan knew where Levi was sleeping. Megan knew where Josh was sleeping. Megan knew that Dustin had gotten up and gone in to that room. Now, we're all focusing on one night because one night is when it happened. But there were two nights that Jocelyn was at their house. There was Sunday night -- and if you'll recall the testimony from Megan: Everybody was sleeping in different places that night. So, the first night Jocelyn's in the room with Josh, the crib, on the futon. Dustin comes in, he digs in her privates.

And then there's Sunday night. She's sleeping with Levi and Katelyn in a different room. And don't forget that on Saturday night when Jocelyn has her privates dug in, Levi and Katelyn are on the floor in Megan and Dustin's room. You heard form Megan that Levi wanted his dad to lay down with him. So he did. Dustin comes home, lays down on the floor with Levi. So Dustin knows Le -- where Levi is. He knows where Katelyn is. Obviously he knows where his wife is. He also knows Jocelyn's somewhere in the house. He has to. He knew the girls were over there. He knew Nicole was in the hospital. He knew to expect them to stay the night. So, where's his son Josh? In his room.

If you remember form Megan's testimony, they'd just moved him from the bassinet in their room to the crib. This was new for everybody with Josh being in that crib; in that room. So where else could Jocelyn be? Either Josh's room or Levi's room. But don't forget Megan testified he actually had gone in the room more than one time that night; more than one time. So more than one time he'd been in that room but only the second time or the third was when he forgets she was in there? If you're going to go check on your child, aren't you going to make sure you can see where he is in the room?

Megan testifies to the lighting issues in the room. In order to see

Josh -- Josh's face in the crib, the light from the bathroom would have to be on to shine some light in to that room. So if he can see where his son was, he could obviously see that Jocelyn was sleeping or trying to sleep anyway on the futon in that room. So, Megan would have to be in on the coaching and she would have to be in on this conspiracy to get Dustin. It still doesn't make any sense. And why doesn't it make any sense other than what we've already talked about? Look at the ramifications to everybody's life because of what this man did to Jocelyn Coleman.

Megan lost everything. There is no doubt. She lost everything. She doesn't talk to her sister anymore. She didn't talk to her parents for a really, really, really long time. And even now, she says her sons don't have a relationship with their grandparents. Megan says she had no relationship with her sister. She can't even talk about her nieces to her children because then they'll ask what happened.

And she'd have to explain to them she doesn't have contact between her sons and her nieces because of what that man did to Jocelyn Coleman. Her ex-husband.

She had everything to lose.

You also heard from Megan, she's supposedly in on this coaching and conspiracy. She told Dustin to get out that night. She said you need to be out of the house before I come back to the house with the boys. And he was gone. And he never moved back in the house. So if this is coaching or some conspiracy, why would she be in on it? And it couldn't have happened without her.

And let's fast-forward. It's been almost three years since July of 2010. If that little girl is going to come in to court and they did such a great job coaching her before she talks to Detective Hatchett, don't you think they would've reminded her at least what Josh's name is? I submit to that they were truly coaching her, this was truly a conspiracy to get at Dustin Barral, she would've been able to spit-out verbatim in court everything she said to Detective Hatchett.

And here's the other thing. How much information is a little four year old mind going to hold if someone's sitting there feeding them all this information? I submit to you there is no way a four year old could remember that vivid of details, that descriptive of language, if someone's feeding her the information. So, it's not a She had everything to lose.

She said you need to be out of the house before I come back to the house with the boys. And he was gone. And he never moved back in the house. I submit to you there is no way a four year old could remember that vivid of details, that descriptive of language, if someone's feeding her the information. So, it's not a CSI issue. It's not a coaching issue. So what else do we have? We have motive.

Well, I submit to you we don't actually have any motive and that's the entire point. What motive does this family have to go after that man and get him out of the family? The time to jump on the opportunity, the time to seize was in 2006 before they got married. But now it's 2010. Megan and Dustin had two children. In fact, Josh was a newborn. He was just born in January of that year. Why would you try to cause such a rift in the family and use a four year old to accomplish that goal? It just makes no sense. There is no motive to make him the evil guy to kick him out of the family.

Now, I'll submit no one's going to give him son-in-law of the year. No one up here testified he was the best thing that ever happened in the Hammonds family. But who cares? There's a huge difference between someone not being your favorite person in the whole entire world or not exactly fitting in to the family just fine and levying allegations of sexually assaulting a four year old. That is a giant chasm that you have to leap in logic from we really don't like him, wish he didn't come to some of the barbeques, wish he didn't come to some of the family events to jump all the way to accusing him of sexual assault to get him out of the family. It just makes no sense.

And that is why we have the common sense instruction which is Instruction Number 18 I believe. You're only to consider the evidence in the case in reaching a verdict. You must bringing in to the consideration of -- you must bring to the consideration of the evidence your everyday common sense and judgment as reasonable men and women. Thus you are not limited solely to what you see and hear as the witnesses testify. You may draw reasonable inferences from the evidence which you feel are justified in the light of common experience. Keeping in mind that such inferences should not be based on speculation; speculation or guess.

So, let's talk about what evidence we actually have. There's a lot of corroboration in this case that Ms. Fleck went over like I said. But let's play it out -- I'll do it in a short version in day by day. Friday, Nicole goes to the hospital. Friday night the girls stay the night with David and Joanna. Did we give you a bunch of testimony about what they did with them Friday night after she went to he hospital? Where they slept? What they ate for dinner? No. Why waste your time?

Saturday evening they go over to Megan and Dustin's. Saturday evening -- we didn't even talk about everything they did at the house Saturday evening or Saturday during the day. Jocelyn goes to sleep Saturday evening in the room with Josh-Josh or Josh. Joshua's in the crib. Jocelyn's on the futon. And then there's this monitor.

MS. EDWARDS: Can I have the exhibit? The monitor.

THE COURT: Leave your exhibits right up there please.

MS. EDWARDS: Thanks.

THE COURT: But you have to --

BY MS. EDWARDS:

There's this monitor in the room that the Defense has made much about. There's the monitor. Now there was -- he offered many, many things you could think about the monitor. Well, let's go to what the actual testimony was. The testimony was if he unplugged the monitor, there's going to be a beeping showing up in Megan's ear. Fine, there was no beeping. She didn't hear a beeping. Then there was much argument about how -- well Megan should've heard Jocelyn say stop and Megan should've heard the Defendant say he wants to do it again and again. But she didn't testify that she heard that. So?

What she testified to was you could manipulate the monitor in Josh's room to turn down the volume. That's not turning it off. Not going to cause a beeping sound. But she said you could turn it down --

MR. BECKER: I'm going to object that it misstates the testimony.

MS. EDWARDS: Absolutely does not.

THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, just remember what the attorneys tell you is not evidence. Jury Instruction 15 and 22. Go ahead.

BY MS. EDWARDS:

She said you could turn it down -- and you can review it. Maybe I'm mistaken as far as exact words she used but she testified you could turn down the volume so you wouldn't hear anything. So what if he turns down the volume -- he manipulates the monitor in Josh's room to turn down the volume. She's not going to hear Jocelyn say stop. She's not going to hear him say he wants to do it again and again. And I submit to you, why would a four year old make up some adult man who's just dug in her privates and her butt, say that -- he's going -- he stands up and says he wants to do it again and again and then he goes bye-bye.

It just doesn't make any sense. So the monitor in the room doesn't provide any evidence that this didn't happen. In fact, you can put all of the testimony about the monitor -- all the testimony from the case together to find out that Dustin placed himself in that room with that child on Saturday which the -- which was the 10th. He says he's in the room. He supposedly forgets that she's there though this is not the first time he's been in the room that night; that he accidentally sits on her and that he sits on the futon next to her.

Okay. Maybe he did. Maybe he completely forgets she was in the room sleeping on the futon. Maybe he just didn't tell the whole story. Maybe he forgot she was in there. He sat down on the futon and was like oh, opportunity. I'm in the room, child's right next to me. There's your opportunity to stick his hand down her pants, up in to her vagina, to dig and did. And then he moves to her bottom where he digs and digs again.

Now, the Defense has suggested based on Dr. Cetl's testimony that you -- that pressure on the vagina or the anus of child can feel like pressure inside. Maybe it can but let's look at the entire facts that we have about what happened. She describes in not as pressure. Not as simply pain. She describes it as digging. That he dug in her privates. She describes it as sinking; that his fingers were sinking in to her privates. And she describes pain; lasting pain. Not just pain that night. In fact, the Defense asked her well, she's sitting right here. They asked her well how come you weren't asleep. Because it was hurting. Her privates were hurting from what that man had done to her. So she couldn't sleep.

I submit to you pressure on the outside of her vagina or privates as she calls it -- pressure on the outside of her butt may have been momentary pain but there was lasting pain that night and in to the next day in her privates and in her butt because of the digging. And if it was just pressure, why would she describe it as digging? Why wouldn't she just say he touched her? Why wouldn't she just say that he put his on her privates or put his hands on her butt? She says digging. She says sinking.

Now, during the course of the Defense's argument they also referred you to some of her statements. One specifically was they say that her statement to Detective Hatchett -- that it should be interpreted as he was hurting her as opposed to recording her. Yes, the child does not pronounce her "R's" perfectly. I will give you that. But if you listen to the interview -- if you review the interview, there is a clear distinction between hurting and how she says recording. Hurting versus recording are two very different things. And she says she believed he was recording me, which is consistent with the monitor, which is consistent with the light, and which is consistent with the Defendant manipulating the monitor to turn the sound down so Megan can't hear what's going on.

And I'll -- another thing as far as that monitor goes. Maybe he turned the sound down. You heard no evidence that he ever got up with Josh again for the rest of the night. You heard no evidence that they heard Josh fuss again for the rest of the night. So maybe he turned the monitor down. Maybe the reason he never got up with Josh is because you couldn't hear anything anymore because he forgot to turn it back up as he was walking out the door. Because remember what that child says he did when he left the room. She didn't say anything about the recording anymore. She says he went and washed his hands. And if you watch the interview with Detective Hatchett the reason he -- she knows he went to wash his hands, because she saw him; because she was awake. And as Megan testified you could see the bathroom across the hallway from Josh's room.

There was one other thing as far as her statement goes that was mentioned in the Defense's argument. Has to do with the privates and moving to the butt. They emphasize that he was trying -- supposedly only trying to dig in her butt. She makes other statements -- not that he tried but that he did in fact dig in her butt. She also make statements -- she says -- she talks about him trying to dig in my butt. Who was trying to dig in my butt? That it happened at Mae-Mae's house on the same day.

And on the -- she says -- Detective Hatchett asks: Oh and how did her try to dig in your butt? She responds: He was trying to -- um, his try to -- he was -- he was like -- he was digging in my privates and like he moved to my -- he moved to my bottom. Two separate things. Detective Hatchett doesn't ask a question, he just says: Mm-hmm. And she says: And he -- and I feeled him but I didn't -- How did that fell? Feeled like it was hurting too. Okay. And did that go inside, outside, or something else? Goes inside.

Clearly she's describing more than trying to dig his fingers in his -- her butt. And clearly she was specific about what he did and what he didn't do. In that interview Detective Hatchett also asks whether or not the Defendant showed him her privates; whether or not he asked her to touch his privates. She clearly says no. She knew exactly what he'd done and what he hadn't done.

So, pay attention to the testimony, pay attention to the exhibits, pay attention to what has been presented to you. And look at the whole entire picture. Sure go in and look at pieces of evidence that you have questions about.

Absolutely. But when you're done looking at those pieces of evidence, come back up and look at the global picture as a whole. Dustin places himself in that room with that child on the night in question when -- the only night she's sleeping in that room with Josh, he places himself on the futon next to her. He digs in her privates, he digs in her butt, he washes his hand, and then he goes back and he wakes up his wife to tell her that he'd just accidentally sat on Jocelyn. Why would you wake your wife up to tell her something so benign as he accidentally sat on the child? He didn't hurt Jocelyn or he didn't say he hurt Jocelyn while she sat of the futon -- when he accidentally sat on her. He didn't say anything. He said: I accidentally sat on her. She was asleep. She was exhausted. She testified that she'd had the kids the weekend before and this current weekend where all these things happened. She was tired. Why would you disturb and wake her up to tell her you sat on this child? And then it was repeated more than one time. Megan repeated it the next morning. And remember what Megan said about Jocelyn's reaction. Jocelyn looked confused like she didn't know what I was talking about. It's repeated again at church to Joanna Hammonds about how funny it was that Uncle Dustin sat on Jocelyn. And this time the Defendant reported back to Megan that Jocelyn still looked like she didn't understand what he was saying. So look at the entire scope of the evidence. Look at the big picture. And answer the ultimate question. Where would the four year old come up with this? Who would think to tell a four year old, use the words dug and sink? Where would a four year old come up with this? And I submit to you the only place a four year old would come up to this is if she had done it. And the Defense hasn't answered that question for you in their arguments. They address all these peripheral things but never answered the question in their argument, where would a four year old come up with this? So when you go back to the jury room, when you go back and deliberate, come back and tell the Defendant you know what happened. You know there's more to the story than that he accidentally sat on her in that room. He used his fingers and he dug in her privates and he dug in her butt. And find him guilty of both counts. Thank you for your time.

THE COURT: Swear the two officers in.

I can tell you now who the alternates are. Russell Hepler, you're an alternate. And Larry Karp, you're an alternate. If you'll go with Susanne as soon she's sworn in. Swear these two officers in please.

[The Clerk swore in the officers to take charge of jury during deliberations]

THE COURT: And be within twenty or thirty minutes. I don't know where your homes are but be available in case something happens; someone gets deathly on the other -- on the regular jury panel. You may have to be called in. Thank you.

And the rest of the jury will go with Joe. He's the substitute Marshal.

Jill will bring you the evidence back. Tom had to go do some class.

[The jury retired to deliberate at 12:00 p.m.]

[Outside the presence of the jury]

THE COURT: All right. Make sure we have all of your cell numbers so we can get in touch with you. If I have to -- if there's a question from the jury, we'll do a three-way call --

MS. FLECK: We probably --

THE COURT: I plan on keeping them here until 4:30, send them home for the weekend. They can come back Monday morning at 9:00.

MS. FLECK: Has lunch been delivered yet?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. FLECK: Okay. They might need a computer if they want to watch it.

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. FLECK: 1 --

THE COURT: You'll have to provide one. The D.A. has one that's clean.

MS. FLECK: Yeah. I'll have to call down and get one that is --

THE COURT: All right.

MS. FLECK: Because this one doesn't really even work.

THE COURT: Just bring it up and leave it with Tom.

MS. FLECK: Okay.

MR. BECKER: Your Honor, if I may ask. Our office is in the U.S. Bank building across from Palace Station. We could absolutely get dropped off if we need to come back. The time is about probably 15 or 16 minutes --

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. BECKER: -- to get here.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. BECKER: Okay.

MR. CASTILLO: And for the record, Your Honor, I believe your clerk was provided with both of our business cards with cell numbers. If not, I can read you that right now.

THE COURT: Just make sure that we have --

[Colloquy between the Court and the Law Clerk]

THE COURT: All right. The jury instruction actually says 13. I didn't catch it.

MS. EDWARDS: Which one?

THE COURT: The jury instructions.

MS. FLECK: What does it say?

THE COURT: 13. Department 13.

MS. EDWARDS: Oh. The X instead of the V.

1	MS. FLECK: Oh.
2	THE COURT: Yeah.
3	MR. BECKER: We we can we have no objection to it.
4	THE COURT: Do you have an objection ma
5	MR. BECKER: No.
6	MS. FLECK: No. No.
7	THE COURT: Okay. She can change that and then it's not dated. There

THE COURT: All right. When we do that it's just 1 through 12 because there's only 12. 11 and 14 -- or 11 and 13 are gone.

THE CLERK: All right.

THE COURT: Ladies and gentlemen, as you know the right to a jury trial is one of our basic fundamental constitutional guarantees. I firmly believe in this right. I -- and it's the right of every person accused of a crime to be judged by a fair and impartial jury. But to have a fair and impartial jury, you have to have jurors and unfortunately jury service is something that many people shirk. They don't wish to become involved. I'm please that twelve men and women have been willing to give of the value -- valuable time and you've been most attentive and most conscientious.

On behalf of Counsel, the Parties, the Eighth Judicial District Court, I wish to thank you for your careful deliberation this -- in this case. Question now may arise as to whether you may now talk to other persons regarding this case. I advise you that you may if you wish -- speak to someone if they want to talk to you they'll come down to the third floor. The verdict of the jury shall now be recorded in the minutes of the court.

You're not required to talk to anyone however. And if any person persists in discussing the case with you after you have indicated that you don't wish to talk to them or raises an objection as to your result or how you deliberated, you'll

1	report that fact directly to me and you'll do that through the marshal. And I can
2	guarantee I'll take care of it.
3	The jury is excused to the jury room with Tom and he'll collect.
4	[Outside the presence of the jury]
5	THE COURT: All right. The Defendant is remanded to the Department of
6	Parole and Probation to set a sentencing date and in custody he'll be held without
7	bail and his sentencing date is?
8	THE CLERK: July 31, 8 a.m.
9	MR. BECKER: Your Honor, if I may.
10	THE COURT: Sure.
11	MR. BECKER: I'm gone the last two weeks of the month of July. Could we
12	get a date in the first week of August
13	THE COURT: Sure.
14	MR. BECKER: perhaps?
15	THE CLERK: August 8, 9 a.m.
16	MR. BECKER: Thank you.
7	THE COURT: Thank you.
18	THE CLERK: 8 a.m., sorry.
19	MR. CASTILLO: 8 a.m., ma'am?
20	THE COURT: 8 a.m.
21	MR. CASTILLO: Thank you.
22	THE CLERK: 8 a.m.
23	THE COURT: Thanks. Good job everyone.
24	•••

MR. CASTILLO: Thank you, Your Honor.

MS. FLECK: Thank you, Your Honor. Thank you, everyone.

MONDAY, JULY 8, 2013 AT 7:56 A.M.

THE COURT: C269095, Dustin Barral, page 1a.

It's Defendant's motion for acquittal or in the alternative a new trial.

Go ahead.

MR. CASTILLO: Good morning, Your Honor, Mike Castillo and Michael Becker on behalf of the defense.

MS. EDWARDS: Michelle Edwards, deputy district attorney for the State.

MR. CASTILLO: For the most part, Your Honor, everything's sufficiently set forth in our moving papers and in our reply. Just very brief, there's three primary grounds. And I'll address Grounds 1 and 2, Mr. Becker will address Ground Number 3.

Ground Number 1 is that the State failed to present sufficient legal evidence to support the Defendant's convictions. And the main point here is that by statute, they're required to prove that there was penetration, however, slight. And our argument essentially is that the entire case hinged on Jocelyn's testimony and also statements that Jocelyn purportedly made using the words dig or dug and that alone is not sufficient to establish that there was penetration. That's our grounds as to Count 1.

As to Count 2, we're asking -- Ground Number 2, rather, Your Honor. We're asking for a new trial based upon conflicting evidence. And essentially this Court should grant a new trial because totality of the evidence failed to prove him guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. And specifically for the Court's attention, there was conflicting evidence presented between Megan Barral in terms of the baby monitor and Jocelyn's testimony. And in order for the jury to have found the Defendant guilty, they essentially would have had to found that Jocelyn's testimony was believable over Megan's testimony. Specifically, was anything heard over that baby monitor? And the Court, pursuant to statute, has the ability to judge the evidence differently and grant a new trial.

And everything else is sufficiently set forth. And I'll turn to Mr. Becker as to Count Number 3.

MR. BECKER: With regard to Issue Number 3, Your Honor, NRS 16.030(5) is unambiguous. It says that the jury venire shall be administered the oath. That is something that was not done. The defense did bring it to the attention of the Court. We do believe that it adequately preserved the issue as an objection. And I think that the law is clear that under those circumstances that the Court shall order a new trial.

THE COURT: Thanks.

MS. EDWARDS: If I may be heard, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MS. EDWARDS: Just for the record. Your Honor, as to Counts -- Count 1, as far as the evidence of digital penetration to sustain the sexual assault against a minor under 14, as Your Honor heard, and even defense acknowledges the 51.385 testimony of Jocelyn Coleman that she described him digging in her privates, that she testified that he used his hands to dig in her privates.

But during the course of reviewing the video of her interview by Detective Hatchett which also came in pursuant to 15.385, she describes Dustin's hands sinking into her privates. She describes in detail words that a four year old would use to describe digital penetration. The jury's the finder of fact. They heard all of that evidence and clearly made a decision that they thought that the words dig, dug, and sinking were sufficient to constitute digital penetration.

As far as the conflicting evidence, Counsel is clearly relying on one simple piece of testimony that they belabored quite a bit during closing arguments. But the fact of the matter is there was testimony that the monitor could have been turned down. There's no testimony that she didn't fall asleep or didn't otherwise, as far as the monitor is concerned.

As far as the oath issue which is the third point. There are two oaths in a jury trial. Obviously the oath to the jury venire and then the oath that the actual jury panel takes before the start of evidence. This all relies and centers upon whether or not the oath was given to the jury panel before voir dire started.

Obviously there was a bench bar about that. I note that the case law that Defendant cites in their initial motion, Fulminante and Diomampo, we addressed in our opposition as not being remotely on point.

The case law that they cited in their reply, the *Ex parte Deramus v*Alabama and People v Allen out of Michigan, I note that neither of those cases are on point, they both address whether or not the actual jury panel that sat for the entire trial had been administered the oath to listen to the evidence and follow the law. That's not the issue here. I'd also note that even in the case that Defendant cites, the People v Allen, that they applied the plain error standard which we addressed in our opposition.

And finally, in People v Carter, which we cited in our opposition, there's a detailed analysis of how you address failure to give the jury panel the actual oath. And in that, they look at whether there's prejudice, they look at whether or not there were sufficient indicia that the jury venire had to answer truthfully. And I note for the record, voir dire's replete with yourself, with Ms. Fleck, with Mr. Becker, admonishing the jury that they have to tell the truth, that the goal is to get truthful answers. At length that was gone into during the course of the voir dire, which is something that they looked at in People v Carter, not just the evidence or the notes that defense makes in its reply as far as People v Carter and the sworn paperwork that the jury filled out before they were impaneled in that case.

On that, Your Honor, I'd also note that defense in its reply tries to make it your fault that they didn't make a better record. But they only bring that up in their reply. And I just note for the record that during the course of the trial, they clearly had no problem trying to control the courtroom, make objections, tell Your Honor how and when we should take breaks and those kinds of things.

So for all those reasons, the State contends all their arguments should fall flat and that the motion should be denied.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you. I'll tell you the reason, and I think I put it on the record last time. I don't -- I don't swear a jury in until after they come back and evidence starts in case somebody doesn't show up, we can -- we do not then have to declare a mistrial but we can call other potential jurors up and finish the voir dire process.

I have analyzed the cases that you've presented. I don't see a reason to override the jury decision. Defendant got a fair trial, Defendant was represented zealously by two attorneys. Motion to dismiss or to acquit is denied. Motion for new trial, I guess, is denied. State will prepare a findings of facts, conclusion of law consistent with their opposition. Thank you. MR. CASTILLO: Thank you, Your Honor. [Proceeding concluded at 8:03 a.m.] ATTEST: I hereby certify that I have truly and correctly transcribed the audio/visual recording in the above-entitled case. Court Recorder place, a citizen of the United States, over 21 years of age, and not a party to, nor interested in, the within action; that on theday of March, 2014, declarant deposited in the United States mail, a copy of the Appellant's Appendix in the case of State of Nevada vs. Dustin Barral, Case No. 64135, enclosed in a sealed envelope upon which first class postage was fully prepaid, addressed to DUSTIN BARRAL, #11008615, High Desert State Prison, P.O. Box 650, Indian Springs, NV 89070, that there is a regular communication by mail between the place of mailing and the place so addressed.

Pursuant to NRS 53.045, I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

EXECUTED on the day of March, 2014.

An employee of Las Vegas Defense Group

THE COURT: Yes.

1	MR. CASTILLO: Understood, Your Honor.
2	THE COURT: And you're sat you've reviewed the verdict form?
3	MR. CASTILLO: Yes, Your Honor.
4	THE COURT: You're satisfied with the verdict form?
5	MR. CASTILLO: Yes, Your Honor.
6	THE COURT: Okay. Is the computer set up?
7	MS. EDWARDS: I believe so.
8	THE COURT: Okay. Here's what'll happen?
9	MS. FLECK: What is this?
10	THE COURT: That's a television.
11	MS. FLECK: Oh.
12	THE COURT: We
13	MS. FLECK: Thank you.
14	MR. CASTILLO: They're not flat anymore.
15	THE COURT: Now we'll call the jury in. State has not rested yet.
16	MS. FLECK: Correct.
17	THE COURT: You're going to rest.
18	MS. FLECK: Yes.
19	THE COURT: Defense is going to rest?
20	MR. CASTILLO: Yes, Your Honor.
21	THE COURT: Then I will read the jury instructions to the jury. Well, you
22	better go copy them. Put that on the blue thing. He'll make 19 copies. One for the
23	court reporter, one for each of you attorneys, and then 14 for the jurors.
24	I'll read the jury instructions and then I'll give the State their

25 opening -- how long's your opening -- about?

1	MS. FLECK: Really it's not going to be very long; probably half hour.
2	THE COURT: Okay. So you can't even say good morning in a half hour; so
3	45 minutes. And then do you know how long your
4	MR. BECKER: I would guess around 45 minutes
5	THE COURT: Okay.
6	MR. BECKER: to an hour.
7	THE COURT: And rebuttal couldn't be more than
8	MS. EDWARDS: I'm not a person of many words.
9	THE COURT: All right. So we'll be to the jury because I have to buy their
10	lunch.
11	[Colloquy between the Clerk and the Court]
12	[Pause in proceedings]
13	THE COURT: You guys ready?
14	MS. EDWARDS: Yes, Your Honor.
15	THE COURT: They've been out 40 minutes, so we better get them in.
16	Bring them in, Tom.
17	THE MARSHAL: All rise, please.
18	[In the presence of the jury]
19	THE MARSHAL: And be seated.
20	THE COURT: Stipulate to the presence of the jury.
21	MS. FLECK: The State stipulates. Thank you.
22	MR. BECKER: Yes, Your Honor.
23	THE COURT: Thanks.
24	Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. Again, sorry, we're running a State?

MS. FLECK: Yes, Your Honor?

THE COURT: You ready to call your next witness?

MS. FLECK: With the understanding that the evidence is admitted the State -- oh and the stipulation between the State and the Defense that there were no physical findings in that sexual assault examination, I believe we rest at this time.

THE COURT: All right. And Defense?

MS. FLECK: Oh. I'm sorry, Your Honor, one more thing. I know that we did this yesterday but is -- as long as the amended information also that's just had the Jocelyn's last name --

THE COURT: Typographical -- yeah.

MS. FLECK: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right. Defense?

MR. CASTILLO: Yes, Your Honor. And with the understanding that Defense Exhibit A has been admitted, which I believe --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. CASTILLO: -- it has, the Defense at this time rests on the state of the evidence.

THE COURT: Thank you.

All right. Ladies and gentlemen, I'll instruct you on the law and then they'll start the argument this morning.

And you can follow along. You can make notes on your instructions. This is relatively a new procedure for me too; is to make one for each. I usually don't give you one or haven't been but I like it.

[Jury instructions read, not transcribed]

THE COURT: State ready?

MS. FLECK: Yes. Thank you, Your Honor.

CLOSING ARGUMENT BY THE STATE

BY MS. FLECK:

On July 14th of 2010, Nicole Hammond faced every parent's worst nightmare when her four-year old daughter, Jocelyn pulled her to the side, asked her to sit down, and uttered six small words; that when strung together would change the course of their entire families' lives. Uncle Dustin dug in my privates.

Now before July of 2010 the family was cohesive; they were loving. There were bumps in the road but it was nothing that the family couldn't recover from. They would -- worked together to get through things and they would help each other out. At that point in time their lives became, before July of 2010 and after July of 2010. And after July of 2010 they were no longer able to work through things. They were no longer able to work together. After that day sister was pit against sister, parents against daughter, cousins were split up. And of this was because of the actions of but one man. And that's the defendant, Dustin Barral.

This didn't happen to this family because the father didn't want Megan and the Defendant marrying at such a young age. This didn't happen because at times various members of the family thought that Dustin was odd because he didn't speak. The split in this family occurred because this man made the choice to walk into a room in his home, to take his finger and insert it in his four-year old niece's vagina and her anus. And because of that ladies and gentlemen we've spent the week listening to testimony, listening to evidence, and ultimately it's been the State's job to prove to you two things. First, that crimes were committed and second, that the Defendant in this particular case, Dustin Barral, committed those crimes.

I'm going to start with the second of those first because it's kind of the easiest in this case; this isn't really a who-dun-it. No one's going to stand before you and tell you that Jocelyn said that somebody else was in the room that night; that somebody else besides Dustin came in. But what did we hear from her? Well, you heard form Jocelyn at seven-years old, when she testified before you and she specifically said that her Uncle Dustin dug in her privates when she lived with her grandma and grandpa. She also went on to identify the Defendant as her Uncle Dustin.

When she was four-years old in July of 2010, she told her mom Nicole: Uncle Dustin dug in my privates. She told her grandma: Uncle Dustin dug in my privates. And she told her Aunt Megan: Uncle Dustin touched me and he hurt me. She was also interviewed by Detective Hatchett and she told him: Levi's daddy, who did that to my privates. She repeatedly said Uncle Dustin; Uncle Dustin was the person who had touched and come into the room. She said that she saw him. She said that it was dark. She said it was time to go night-night but that she saw him. And she went on to describe that in fact, she heard him speak.

She was able to give those descriptors and she did spontaneously.

She said: He talked to me. When she said: Stop; he said: He wanted to do it again and again. There was no question in her mind anytime that she spoke about this case that but one person came into that room and put his finger in her vagina and in her anus and that's the Defendant; so, identity in this case, not an issue.

So let's talk about what crimes occurred and what crimes the State needs to prove beyond a reasonable doubt. Between July 10th and July 12th of 2010, count 1 is the sex assault on a minor under the age of 14. You know that Jocelyn was four-years old when this occurred. And count 1 is for digital penetration of her genital area. Count 2 is sex assault with a minor under the age of 14; digital penetration of her anus.

Now the law says that where a child has been the victim of a sex assault and doesn't remember the exact date, we're not required to prove the exact date that it happened and that's because of the mind of a child. Circumstances in their lives will tell them when something happened. Other people will be able to lend credibility to when the dates occurred and we know in this case that it was the weekend that Nicole was put into the hospital, which was that weekend of the 10th and 13th of July. So, there's no question as to when it took place but that specific date didn't need to come necessarily from Jocelyn herself.

So what is a sex assault? In the state of Nevada a sexual assault is a person who subjects another person to a sexual penetration against the person's will or under conditions in which the person knows or should know that that other person is entirely incapable physically or mentally of understanding what is going on; understanding the nature of the conduct. If those things occur, the person is guilty of a sexual assault.

What's a sexual penetration? Sexual penetration includes any intrusion, however slight, of any part of a person's body into the genital or anal openings of the body of another including digital penetration. As adults we think of penetration as maybe, you know, full penis into the vagina, all the way into the cavity penetration. Legally, penetration is an intrusion however slight; that's between the labial folds; that's in the plane of the vagina.

It doesn't have to be full penetration in the way that adults think and that's pretty obvious why. With a child, full penetration like that could severely damage a child. Just the tip of a finger, just the tip of a penis, for legal purpose, that's a sexual penetration. And digital penetration is just a fancy legal way of saying finger in the vagina. So it's placing one or more fingers of the perpetrator into the anal or into the genital opening of another. So an intrusion however slight of the finger is a sexual penetration for purposes of this particular case.

Physical force isn't necessary in the commission of a sex assault. A lot of times in TV shows or in movies or in books when people think of a sexual assault they think of a stereotypical kind of rape; that a woman or a child has to be held down; that it has to be violent. That's not required for a sexual assault. The crucial question isn't whether the person was physically forced to do something; rather was it against the person's will without their consent or again under conditions in which the Defendant knew or should have known that the person is in capable of understanding.

Consent is not even an issue. A four-year old child cannot consent under any circumstances to any kind of sexual intercourse; digital penetration, penile penetration, nothing. Was this under conditions in which the Defendant knew or should have known that she's incapable of understanding what she's doing? Clearly. She is four-years old. She would have no understanding of a man coming into the room, taking his hand, putting it in -- into her pants, into her panties, and penetrating her. Consent is absolutely not an issue and clearly it's under conditions in which the person knew or should have known. Four years old.

So the real question then in this case is, was there sexual penetration? Well let's look at her testimony. Jocelyn again testified during trial; she was seven years old. She said that Dustin dug in my privates. His finger went inside my privates. She stood up and pointed to her vagina as her privates so she indicated where it was that he was digging and where he went inside. The word dug. What a shockingly descriptive word for a child to use when talking about what somebody did with their fingers in her privates.

I'm not sure an adult could evoke such an image if they tried. He dug. He went inside. He penetrated her. Defense said to her well you don't remember that do you? You don't actually remember? It has been three years and there are details that she may not remember but she specifically said: Oh no, I remember. She's been in counseling for three years. She remembers. But additionally, you heard from her when she was four years old.

You didn't -- some of your instructions will say the testimony of a victim -- the testimony of the victim. But it's not just the testimony that you heard from the witness stand when she was seven, it's also the testimony that was admitted in the case that you saw on the video and that's when she was talking to Detective Hatchett; that's also her testimony for purposes of this trial. In there she said: He went under my pants and panties. His hand was digging in privates.

Now, of course the Defense will say, well, she was prompted to say that, she was led to say that. She wasn't led. It was a prompt by a detective who's highly skilled and trained. Watch the interview again. See if he tells her anything; if he lends anything to her. See how many different way he will suggest her speaking to him and opening up and that there were certain words that a four year old may not clue into as to you know, where he's going with this or that she might be embarrassed.

She's just met this person. She's never had any conversations with him. But when sh -- he says to her: Did you tell somebody that someone dug in you? She said it through the interview probably every sentence out of her mouth; digging, digging, digging. He digged all the way from there. The detective said:

Well, what is digging in your privates? He didn't want to just presume. He wanted to hear it from her. She said: That you hurting me. It hurt. That it hurts and waked up because I feeled him.

Well, what was he digging with? He was digging with his hands. And then she went on to show him her hands and what part of her hands being her fingers that the Defendant was using. What was he doing with those he asked her? Well, he was sinking. He was sinking inside my privates. Again, what a descriptive word out of the mouth of babes.

Where would somebody come up with this? Where would a child come up with the word sinking if his fingers weren't actually entering inside of her body? And her, at four years old, trying to find a word that she can use to describe what happened. Where did these fingers go? I mean, to her she doesn't know what's going on down there. She just knows that all of the sudden, something went inside of her body and it sunk into her. Absolutely penetration.

The detective asked: Can you show me on this picture where he was touching you at? And she actually went to her body to say he was inside of her; inside. She always said inside, always said dug and sinking. All words to prove that there was actual penetration in this case; absolutely an intrusion, however slight, of his fingers inside of her vagina. Was it outside of your skin or was it inside of your skin? She said: Inside. She did -- went on to say things like: When it was still nighttime he was in my privates. All his fingers are under and he like turned like right to my privates.

Additionally, what condition was she in? How did this feel for her? It was hurting her. It feeled like it was hurting. She said: He touched; he touched it all the way like that and it hurts because because it hurted. Because because it was getting red. It started to hurt all day and then it hurt all day and then I had to and then it hurt all day. There were certain sentences that she said or certain expressions where she would say hurt over and over and over again. Again, all indications of penetration because to a four year old, even a finger is going to really hurt her body. She said: That it was hurting in the morning and that then -- then that they went to the doctor.

Now, in the law when you have a case of a sexual incident and there's more than one act -- multiple sexual acts occur but it's same -- part of the same criminal encounter, the Defendant can be found guilty for each of those separate acts. So, in this case the Defendant first uses his fingers to penetrate her vagina and then after that he moves to her butt. He is found guilty then of two counts of sexual assault. He doesn't get a pass just because he did it all at once. It's not as if, you know, since it happened one time that night he can do as much as he wants; a free-for-all at that particular moment.

Separate penetrations. Separate events. I'm sorry separate counts. Two separate sexual assaults. So, the detective asks her: So has anybody else done anything that you didn't like, like that or was it just your uncle? Basically asking anybody else and her response: He was -- well he was trying to dig in my butt. Absolutely spontaneous.

Again, to a four year old processing these things; how questions are asked? When they're asked? What she has in her mind? One minute she's talking about her cousin's taking a bath and the next minute, well, he stuck his finger in my butt. Absolutely spontaneous. Second count of sexual assault. And then detective said, well, who was? Uncle Dustin. Consistent throughout. That was the same day she said -- she said it only happened once. She said: He was digging in my privates and he like moved to -- he moved to my bottom and -- and I feeled him but --

The detective said well, okay, and did that go inside, outside, or something else? Not suggesting. She said: It goes inside. He used his fingers. The detective said: Well, how did that feel? It feeled like it was hurting too. And what's kind of important about the two; indicative that first, he was in her privates and it hurt her. Then he moved to her butt and it hurt there too.

Now, we talked a little bit about this during jury selection. There's a law in the state of Nevada and around the country that says that there's no requirement that the testimony of a victim of a sexual assault be corroborated. And that the testimony standing alone if believed beyond a reasonable doubt is sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. Why is this? Why would the law account for the fact that if there's no one around to see a crime, the Defendant can still be guilty if the victim is believed beyond a reasonable doubt?

Because the Defendant doesn't get the benefit of going in to a room in the middle of the night when his wife is asleep, when the only other witness in the room is a newborn baby. When the little girl is four and being able to violate her; being able to perform sexual acts on her. And then get up and say well, no one saw it. No one was around so what are you going to do? You can't prove that. The law accounts for that. Defendants don't get the benefit of secluding somebody.

These kinds of crimes, ladies and gentlemen, don't happen in front of other people. They happen exactly the way they happened in this case. They don't happen with the carnie worker from the Carnival that everyone's scared of. They happen with the person who's in your own home, the person that you invite into your home, the person that you trust, the person that you leave your children around; that's who has access to children. It's the people that you would least expect. It's the Defendant. It's Uncle Dustin.

And that's why we have this law. So her testimony -- Jocelyn's testimony here at the witness stand and back in 2010, if you believe her statements beyond a reasonable doubt; that's enough. We have more here. But that's enough.

What's reasonable doubt? So, reasonable doubt -- in order for doubt to be reasonable, it has to be actual. It can't be based on speculation, can't be based on possibility. It's not probably doubt. It's not maybe. It's beyond a reasonable doubt. So why do we have the highest standard? Well that standard isn't -- or should I say it's the highest standard in the system; absolutely. But it doesn't mean beyond any doubt because if it was beyond any doubt in the world, we would never convict people. Right? It's beyond a reasonable doubt.

So when you're going through it and if you think something in your mind, well, you know, maybe this four year old just hated him so much that she made this up. Is that reasonable? It's not reasonable and it's not reasonable doubt. Well, maybe the family just hated him so much because he went against their wishes by marrying the daughter and they somehow then colluded to make this up. Not reasonable and it's not reasonable doubt. So for doubt to be reasonable it must be actual, not based on possibility, not based on speculation.

So when you judge credibility of Jocelyn and the other witnesses there are -- I'm sorry, when you go through their testimony, let's talk a little bit about credibility. The credibility or believability of a witness should be determined by a number of things: Their manner up on the stand, relationship to parties, fears, motives, interests, feelings, opportunity to have observed the matter to which he or she testified, and the reasonableness of his or her statements and the strength or weakness of his or her recollection; manner up on the stand.

Look at the witnesses that testified in this case. Jocelyn presented to you at seven years old. Look to your own experiences with seven year olds to see if she was reasonable in this case. She presented well, she was nervous, she brought her little stufty with her. All what you would expect of a seven year old who has to come in to a courtroom and testify in front of a room full of strangers about something like this.

There was an insinuation by the Defense that she had somehow been practicing. And she did use the word practice; I want to practice. What was interesting is that the Defense didn't first asked [sic] Nicole about that. Did you notice how they never asked her those questions? They never gave her the opportunity to explain what that meant. No, they didn't. They waited until the seven year old got on the stand. And then they said, well, isn't it true you practiced with your mom. And she said, well, yeah. I wanted to practice.

Well, what's practice in her mind? Is it saying, mommy, how is going to be when I get up there and testify? What am I going to have to do? Who's going to be there? Is it preparing her for the fact that the man that violated her is going to sitting right in front of her and she's going to have to talk about it front of him. But they never gave Nicole that opportunity. She wasn't coached. Why would she be coached in this case? Who is hurt in this case; but everyone?

Relationship to the parties. Again, the defense is throwing it out there -almost shoved it down the witnesses throats that they hated Dustin. What you need to remember? Questions from me, questions from Ms. Edwards, questions from the Defense, any bickering that we have going on between us during sidebars; that stuff is not evidence. What's evidence is what comes from that witness stand.

Just because the Defense asks a question, isn't it true you didn't like Dustin? It's what this person says [indicating the witness stand] that matters. And every single time this person, whoever it was, said that's not true -- yeah I didn't appreciate that he married my daughter without my husband's blessing but we got over it. We wanted them to seek counseling and wait. The Defense would ask again, isn't it true he wasn't in included in anything to Megan? Well, yeah, I've said that but -- they wouldn't let her finish. Then she went on to say what her whole statement was: He didn't really ingratiate himself either.

That's the evidence that you have to rely upon and that's the evidence that you took the oath that you would include in your deliberations; not questions by the State and not questions by the Defense. And think about that because sometimes you'll remember that you heard something but you're not quite sure where. Make it came from that witness stand because that's evidence.

So, relationship to the parties. Well, what was the relationship between these partiers? They were a cohesive, loving family. They went to church together, they went to barbeques together, they watched out for each other. Did they have issues? Of course but what family doesn't? There's lots of people in people's families where you think, ugh, you know, my sister's husband bugs me, or my sister's husband is annoying. I wish he wasn't around as much or my brother's wife is annoying. You know, she can be rude and whatever it is.

But to rise to the level of making something like this up, how much would you have to despise the person to accuse them of something like this? And who ultimately got hurt in this case? It's not just the Defendant or Jocelyn. It's Nicole, it's the parents, it's ther -- their brother. It's the -- all of the children; Levi and Joshua. It's everybody. Fears, motives, interests or feeling; no motive. There would never be a motive in the world for a child at four years old to come up with something like this. I mean, just silence in terms of motive.

Opportunity to obser -- to have observed the matter to which he or she testified. She had every opportunity to observe because she was there and then the reasonableness of his or her statements and the strengths or weaknesses of the recollections. At seven years old, there were things that she didn't remember as well. But I ask you if you have any questions to go back and watch the video and what her recollections were within days of this happening and the reasonableness of her statements.

Some things were very expected of a child and other things were very unexpected. Words like dug or sink. So let's go through Jocelyn's statement and see how it's corroborated with the other evidence. I've told you that her testimony standing alone is enough if you believe her beyond a reasonable doubt.

What does she know? She said that this happened while her mommy was in the hospital. And we know that her mom was in the hospital. That's not disputed; completely uncontroverted that she and Katelyn were spending the night at her Aunt Megan's and Dustin's house. And we know that. We know that while Nicole was in the hospital Aunt Megan said that she would take the girls and that she did. And she took them over to the house on that Saturday. We know that Dustin went to see his mom in the hospital and that he came home and the kids were there.

Now, when Megan first talked to the police a week after the incident, she told the police that she was getting the kids ready for bed. Three years later, she doesn't necessarily remember if they were actually in bed or if they were getting ready for bed. She did remember that the Defendant interacted with Levi in the room. But a mere week after or ten days after the incident, she specifically told the Defendant that he came that night and she was getting the kids ready for bed. That's what Jocelyn testified to; that she was there again more or less uncontroverted.

She said that Mimi was sleeping in her room with Levi and Katelyn; that's what Megan also testified to; that she was asleep in her room and that the -- Levi and Katelyn were on the floor in that room. Jocelyn said that she slept in Josh-Josh's room. Again, same thing that Megan testified too. And that josh-Josh was in the crib next to her. Megan described the layout of the home; that her bedroom was kind of a little bit diagonal to where Josh-Josh's room was and that there was a crib in there and a futon.

Corroboration of details that this four year old child had. She said she was on the futon and that's exactly what Megan said. She said that her uncle came in to her room to check on Josh-Josh. She actually, in her statement to the police in 2010, she said he came in the room and he forgot to check on Josh-Josh. But, we know that he came in to the room, either checked on him or didn't but for the purpose of supposedly checking on Josh-Josh. We know from Megan that at least two to three times throughout that night, he got up and he left her bed and he went in to Josh-Josh's room to check on the baby and to molest his niece.

She said that it was time to go night-night; that it was dark. It was nighttime. We know form Megan that it was also the middle of the night that this was happening. It was interesting she said in her statement to Detective Hatchett, he was recording me. Now, physical evidence doesn't always come in the form of a fingerprint or DNA, or something like that. He was recording me. Well, what do we know is in that room? The baby monitor. We've always known that. We didn't have a photograph of what the monitor may or may not have looked like but she's always said that in her statement; that he was recording me.

So think about that. There's a baby monitor in the room and it's by her futon. Well, what does a four year old think of a baby monitor? She doesn't know. She doesn't know what the purpose of it is. She sees what in her mind is a recorder and she specifically says, he's recording me. Well, number one it's corroboration that the evening happened exactly like she said because we know that the monitor was in there pursusant to even the Defense. So, it puts her in the room with this monitor. But also what does it indicate? That he's touching it? That he's manipulating it in some way because she's somehow has attributed this recorder to the Defendant. He's recording me.

She says that he went to the bathroom to wash his hands. Well, what do we know from Megan? That the bathroom is right across the hall. You walk out of the baby's room and walk right in to the bathroom. And it makes sense, right? I mean, if a man sticks his finger into a four year old vagina and then he sticks his finger into her anus, he would probably go to wash his hands before he got back into bed with his wife. It makes perfect sense. She said: Then he went bye-bye. Again, four years old, in the midst of describing this event that happened to her; saying things like it was night -- it was nighttime, it was time to go night-night, and then we went bye-bye.

She told you that she told her mommy and that she told Megan and that they were crying. And what do we know from everyone? That the incident at the house included her mom, included her grandma, grandfather was also there, and her uncle, and that Megan came and that they were crying. And with every reason. Corroboration. And she also told you -- and she -- she told you and the detective that she had to go to the doctor; that she had to go to the doctor because she was hurting. And we know that she did go to the doctor. And you heard from Dr. Cetl who is a consultant through Sunrise where she got this examination done at the emergency room.

So, her testimony and her statement doesn't [sic] stand alone. It's entirely corroborated by everyone else that was involved in this case. What does Megan say? Megan says that she called the Defendant after she talked to Jocelyn. And she says to him: Well, what happened? And he says: You know what happened. So, how does he know that she's talking about Saturday night? Well, maybe because he made that up clearly, in order to account for the fact that he's in that room. Why does he go into the room and immediately wake up his wife and tell her something as innocuous as oh I accidentally sat on Jocelyn and then continue to say it?

He says: I told you what happened. And then she says: Yeah I remember that you woke me up to tell me. So, where does a four year old get this from? And that ladies and gentlemen is the ultimate question. Where on earth would a four year old get this from? There is no motive; there is no basis of knowledge. She would have no idea that this kind of activity is even in the realm of possibility. She is four years old. So, where would she get this from unless that man went into her room and violated her and perpetrated these acts upon her?

There's one person who had the opportunity to do this. While everything that Jocelyn says is corroborated in one or another, there's one tiny, tiny minute, one tiny moment, that no one else can testify to but Jocelyn. But the Defendant places himself in that home, he places himself in that bedroom, and he places himself on the futon where this child was. So, she's right on every single thing except that; that isn't reasonable and it certainly isn't reasonable doubt. The Defendant told his wife, Megan, he said: You know what happened. I told you what happened.

Ladies and gentlemen after you've the evidence in this case and after you've heard the testimony in this, Ms. Edwards and I on behalf of the state of Nevada would ask that you go back and deliberate and that you come back out here and that you tell the Defendant that you know what happened too; that you know that on July 10th of 2010, he sexually assaulted his niece Jocelyn by sticking his fingers into her vagina and into her anus. And please do that by finding him guilty of both counts and -- counts 1 and 2. Thank you.

THE COURT: Defense.

MR. BECKER: I'm going to need the exhibits.

THE COURT: Okay. Just -- if you'll leave those right there on that.

MR. BECKER: I'll just use these ones.

THE COURT: All right. You need others?

MR. BECKER: No. Thank you.

THE COURT: All right.

[Colloquy between the Court and the Law Clerk]

CLOSING ARGUMENT BY THE DEFENSE

BY MR. BECKER:

Good morning ladies and gentlemen of the jury. At the beginning of this case my associate Mr. Castillo explained to you that this was not such a simple case and he asked you to listen closely and learn a little bit more about the family dynamic here; that it was very relevant. Now Ms. Fleck comes up and tells you from the very beginning that this is a cohesive, loving family. And -- but it's not so simple because what you could see is that there were a lot of indications that show that this family was not so cohesive and loving; at least as came to Dustin. And I think what's really clear if you look at all of the evidence that Dustin was never truly accepted into this family.

From the very beginning Dustin was not approved. People -- numerous members of the family did not go to the wedding to show how non-cohesive this family is once this is all done, what is the family doing? They're blaming Megan to the point that Megan still does not have a healthy relationship with her family. And regardless of anything else, anything that might be attributed to conduct of Dustin certainly would not be Meg -- would not be Megan's fault.

So, clearly there's some dysfunction going on in this family. It's not such a cohesive and loving family when it comes to the dynamic of Megan and Megan's relationship with her sister Nicole. Clearly, you see a lot of testimony so there's just no way an objective rendering of these facts could suggest that this is a cohesive family. There are problems with the family as manifested and seen in courtroom in relation to this case.

Now there are a number of instructions that you're going to consi -- that you're instructed to consider in rendering your verdict in this case. And one of the instructions that the State really wants to seize on is Instruction Number 7. And it's hard to read -- well, you have copies of it. It says: There is no requirement that the testimony of a victim of a sexual offense be corroborated and her testimony alone, standing alone, if believed beyond a reasonable doubt is sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. That's key language; if believed beyond a reasonable doubt.

But there are other instructions that give guidance on how to interpret that instruction because what the State wants you to do is they want you to seize on that instruction and they want you to believe that all they have to do is out Jocelyn on the stand and say believe her and that's their only obligation. But their obligation is much greater because their duty in prosecuting a Defendant is to prove their case beyond a reasonable doubt.

And you have an instruction on proof beyond a reasonable doubt but Instruction Number 2 also says starting on line 4: You are not to single out any certain sentence or any individual point or instruction and ignore the others but you are to consider all the instructions as a whole and regard each in light of the others. This is really important because the State wants you to just focus on that instruction. And they want you to believe that in order to satisfy their burden that they don't have to do anything more then have someone come up and testify. And I suggest that the -- the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt requires more.

Ultimately, you as jurors decided what meaning to give to that burden of proof in your rendering of a verdict. And I would suggest that we should demand more from the State in a case such as this and I'm going to go through a number of reasons why I think you should demand more and where I think the State fails to meet its burden.

Another important thing I should point is you know, it's -- Instruction

Number 18 and in line 8 it says a verdict may never be influenced by sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion. I'm going to hone in on the word sympathy and mind you Dustin Barral is sitting here; he's greatly affected by this verdict. There are other supporters on each side and the purpose of rendering a verdict is not to reward one side or the other or you know, hey, how -- you know, how can we look at one side or the other when we walk out of this courtroom and pass them and justify the verdict. You're not asked to do that and sympathy should not play a role. So you should not get consumed with who is observing and who you owe this, that, or the other to.

I'm asking you to render a verdict based on the facts of the case and to adhere to this instruction that says you should not let sympathy influence you. And of course when there's a child witness -- I mean -- you -- I could see the expressions on juror's faces as Jocelyn sat -- sits on the witness stand and she's a cute kid. But you can't just render a verdict for the cute because she's a cute and because you're sympathetic towards her. Your duty is to base your verdict on the evidence in this case and nothing else.

I'm going to go back to the instruction -- Instruction Number 7 about the testimony -- about Jocelyn's testimony. And I'm going to suggest to you reasons why, standing alone, it cannot be believed beyond a reasonable doubt. Even Ms. Fleck talked to you in her closing about why there's a time period from July 10th to July 12th how it's not isolated to one incident and she talks about the mind of a child. Because it involves the mind of a child we can't necessarily isolate this. And it is somewhat difficult to interpret what's going on in the mind of a child, especially a four year old as Jocelyn was at the time these allegations came to the surface. Okay. When she testified, she was seven years old.

But what do we know about Jocelyn in terms of assessing her credibility. We know that -- the testimony was contradicted. There was testimony from Nicole and Joanna that said for years she was complaining about pain in her vaginal area that felt like a nail; that it really hurt. Her Aunt Kay -- Katelyn -- I'm sorry her Aunt Kathy came in and said that this -- these complaints lasted for two or three months. But we know that she continued for a substantial period of time to complain that she had this pain in her vaginal area and they took her to the daughter and the doctor indicated that there was no medical explanation for it and in fact, it was a psychosomatic issue. Okay. Something that was purely in her imagination; this pain that she was feeling.

So in terms of assessing the credibility, when we have somebody who goes on to complain for years and years about this pain that has no medical explanation, that certainly suggests questions about the credibility of this witness. Okay. We don't know -- I mean, you see a small window. You have a small opportunity to observe a witness take the stand; to talk about things. You don't know the whole psychological dynamic and the extent to which this family dynamic, which I'm describing frankly as a dysfunctional family dynamic, we don't know how that could influence a child.

And there's certainly reason to believe that children absorb the tensions inside of the family home. And at the point in time where these allegations comes to surface, we have Nicole living with her parents David and Joanna in the house. We know that Dustin is not well-liked and it's reasonable and inferential, and the instructions say that you can make reasonable inferences, that -- that Jocelyn would've absorbed and understood the fact that Dustin was not well-liked.

Now, let's talk about Dustin. Let's talk about the night in question. Why did Dustin go into the room? We have very, very clear testimony. The State would probably like you to believe that Dustin had some agenda; that he was looking to do something to Jocelyn. But what does the testimony show you? The testimony shows you that Joshua was sick and that it was Dustin's turn to go into the room. The testimony shows you that Jocelyn had spent the night over at Uncle Dustin and Aunt Megan's many times; once or twice a month without incident.

So, again corroborates the notion that Dustin was not looking to have any kind of improper contact or involvement with Jocelyn because nothing like this 1 2 3 4 5 6 8 had ever happened before. And reason dictates that Dustin and Megan were trusted to care for Jocelyn because the kids would spend the night at their house very often. But why does Dustin go into the room? Does he go in for some sinister purpose? No, he does not. He goes into the room because lo and behold there's a baby monitor and this is Defense A for identification. And it's important to note as a footnote -- and I'm going to talk about Detective Hatchett a little bit more later but this is why we expect law enforcement to do an investigation; this is really important stuff

Detective Hatchett, what does do? He takes some statements in person a couple -- he calls Joanna on the phone, does a recorded statement. Never goes to either house. Never does any kind of thorough, comprehensive investigation. If he had gone to the Barral home, he would've seen that there was a baby monitor in the room and Megan testifies that she hears noises coming from Joshua's room and as would be expected that a mother with an infant would be very attentive to any sounds coming from a room. It's natural. It's a mother's instinct.

She wakes up Dustin and reminds him that it's his turn to go into the room, which he does. Again, not for some sinister purpose but to look after his son Josh-Josh, who was sick. That's the testimony in this case. Okay. And I'm going to touch on this because you know, it's relevant. We have some description of how these baby monitor's work. And Megan told you that the bottom portion here is the one that it's in the bedroom and it has a volume button but the one on the top is the one that's in Josh-Josh's room, actually on the futon. It does not have a volume switch and if it gets turned off or unplugged it makes a loud noise.

MS. FLECK: And I'm just going to -- and I don't mean to object but it -- that assumes facts not in evidence. She said that if it is unplugged in that room it puts a noise off in the other room; never said anything about a volume control. THE COURT: Okay.

MS. FLECK: In fact, she said it's in both --

MR. BECKER: Well --

MS. FLECK: -- rooms.

THE COURT: I guess we'll remind the jury, Jury Instruction 15 and Jury Instruction 22: What the attorneys say is not evidence.

MS. FLECK: Okay.

THE COURT: Because they weren't witnesses. They're just arguing for you. They're the mouth for each of their clients. So, go ahead.

BY MR. BECKER:

Well, Ms. Fleck acknowledges that Megan testified that this is -- if this is turned off or unplugged, it makes a loud noise in the bedroom. And my as -- my cocounsel, Mr. Castillo actually showed this picture to Megan on the witness stand and he asked her about it. He said you see here this one has a volume button and she -- I believe the testimony will reflect that she acknowledged that the one on the top does not have a volume button. And Ms. Fleck makes an interesting argument to try to address the issue of this monitoring device where she endeavors to cray -creatively interpret a statement made by Jocelyn about where she says he was recording me.

That's Ms. Fleck's interpretation of the evidence and she suggests to you that you know, what would Jocelyn think if she was saying that -- that Dustin Barral was recording her that he must have done something to touch or fidget with the monitor but ladies and gentlemen I'll suggest to you a few things. First of all, no reason to believe that a four year old would even know what this is. Okay. But more importantly -- and you're going have the disks if you want to hear it or play it.

The statement that Ms. Fleck makes where she interprets Megan as saying she was recording me, it's not an accurate interpretation of what Megan said. All right. I'm sorry, what Jocelyn said. The statement that she's interpreting is they were -- he was recording me. If you listen to it closely she says -- he says -- she says he was hoiting [sic], hording [sic], hurting me. She doesn't say the word recording. It could sound like it but if you listen closely to the word, the word is hurting, not recording. So, this whole theory of Ms. Fleck that Dustin was fidgeting with the monitor is pure fantasy.

And you know, let's talk more about his monitor because I think it's very important. Dustin Barral goes in the room to step on his -- to check on his son Josh-Josh. And he knows -- of course he knows that there's a monitoring device and that his wife is listening to everything that's going on in that room. So, this notion that he would walk into the room with a monitoring device that has no volume, that he can't unplug or turn off without making a buzz, and engage in this type of activity with Jocelyn is objectively absurd and unreasonable.

And you know, even with regard to Jocelyn's description of what goes on, interestingly she alternatively says at times that nothing was said and then she says that she told Uncle Dustin stop and Uncle Dustin said, I want to do it again and again; that was he statement attributed to Uncle Dustin. I want to do it again and again. Now does this seem reasonable? Does it seem fathomable that Dustin would go into a room with a baby monitor and would say I want to do it again and again? I mean, could you imagine Megan in her room listening to Uncle Dustin saying I want to do it again and again or if Jocelyn was saying stop. Okay.

And we heard that this device was very sensitive and we know that mommy is listening for sounds of baby and if Jocelyn had said stop, it's reasonable to infer that mommy would've heard it and mommy would've come in and said why is Jocelyn saying stop? And it's for this reason that we go back to this instruction about if you believe Jocelyn beyond a reasonable doubt. If you believe her beyond a reasonable doubt then that may be sufficient but you decide that.

But in light of these factors, can we believe Jocelyn's testimony beyond a reasonable doubt? And I would suggest that we cannot with reasonable certainty accept her testimony beyond a reasonable doubt; especially when we consider all of the other factors in the family dynamic that we've talked about.

But there's more. Okay. Doctor Sandra Cetl testifies about you know, about this issue of grooming and how it's common if somebody is looking to molest a child that they're going to groom them first by developing a unique relationship. And what do we hear? We hear that Dustin was not particularly attentive to Jocelyn. The testimony was well she was alright with Uncle Dustin but she liked her Uncle Michael better. And you know, she even says well sometimes I talk to Uncle Dustin and he wouldn't responds which apparently seems to be a part of his demeanor. Okay. That maybe he's quiet, maybe he's not responsive. But it certainly doesn't seem to suggest that he was grooming Jocelyn for anything.

There's a -- it's obvious from the -- you know, the testimony of a -- of the family members that they -- there's a lot of anger, there's a lot of animosity towards Dustin. And the State goes to great lengths to tell you how much harm Dustin has caused and in essence to blame Dustin for this whole family dynamic; it's all Dustin's fault. Okay. I would suggest to you that this dysfunctional family dynamic existed before Dustin came into the life of this family, that is continues to exist today, and that the reason why the State wants to kind of blame this all and put it all on Dustin is because they basically want you to look over here now and just see him as this awful, awful person when the charges here have to do with sexually assaulting a child.

But they want you -- you know, they want to blame him for anything and everything they can, to make you look at him in as negative and cynical a way so that it's easier to convict him of these charges. Again, I would suggest to you, in all fairness and objectivity that a reasonable interpretation of the evidence is that a negative family dynamic existed before Dustin came into their lives and still exists today.

Now when I -- when we spoke in voir dire we talked about this burden of proof and we talked about that fact that it was the State's burden to prove their case beyond a reasonable doubt. And so they -- in order to fulfill that burden, they have to prove each and every element of the charge against Dustin Barral. And there are a variety of ways I could get up here and argue this case but I told you during the voir dire selection that it's not -- and the Judge told you as well. He said, you know, the Defendant's not required to do anything. The Defense is not to prove any -- is not required to prove anything. It's only the State that's required to prove their case beyond a reasonable doubt.

And I talked to you about the fact that you know, there are two verdicts rendered: One is guilty and the other verdict is not guilty. And that in fact, a not-guilty does not require you to find that Dustin Barral is innocent. As a matter of fact you could go back into that jury room and you could say you know, I'm inclined to think something happened. I'm inclined to think maybe he did it. I'm inclined to think that probably he did it. But that's not the burden of proof in this case. The burden of proof in this case is proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

Now I could get up here and I could argue and will argue that Dustin at and near the time of this event provided a very reasonable explanation as to what occurred. And that there's nothing that's been brought forward that would tend to disprove or discredit Dustin Barral's explanation of what happened in the room that night. But I don't have to argue for Dustin Barral's innocence and I -- and to take on the challenge of standing up here and trying to argue for complete innocence is not my burden. Okay. My burden is to argue that the State did not prove the case beyond a reasonable doubt.

With regard to the innocence component of this and I'll use my chair a bit as if it's a sofa. But, -- or a futon, excuse me. Reasonable inferences could be drawn from the evidence. We went over the instruction on reasonable inferences and how you can draw reasonable inferences. Dustin has a sick infant, Josh who's in his crib. Josh is making a stir, he's -- his wife says will you go check on Josh? This may have happened more than once throughout the night; that Josh was stirring because he's sick. It would be reasonable for a father to go into the room to check on the child and perhaps at the moment that he gets into the room, the stirring isn't going on.

So, it's perfectly reasonable to infer from the evidence that in such a situation, knowing that there's a futon in the room, that he might go to sit down on the futon for a moment or two to see if the baby stirs. Okay. And the evidence that we have clearly is that Dustin came home and he did not know where Jocelyn was sleeping. Ms. Fleck takes a quote of Megan's where she says she -- when Dustin came home she was preparing the kids, plural, to go to bed. But it was very clear from the testimony that the kids that she was preparing to go to bed were at that time Levi and Katelyn who were in her room. And there was, absolutely, testimony that my colleague, Mr. Castillo, read in that Megan said that Jocelyn had already been in the -- placed in the bedroom and -- with Josh. And that there was no reason to know that Dustin knew which room Jocelyn was in because there was a third bedroom which was Levi's bedroom, who was two years old. And it's reasonable to infer that he assumed that Jocelyn was sleeping in Levi's room.

So let's look at the dynamic of somebody going up to a futon -- I'm sorry going up to a crib, checking on a kid, going back to sit on a futon in a dark room not knowing that a child is sleeping. A chair has -- you know, two handles. So when you sit back on a chair you might expect you put your hands back and you sit and you go for the rails. But if it's or sofa or something that doesn't have handles, likely you just sit back. But the natural position is for the hands to be back when you sit down. Okay.

Dustin talked about an incident where he accidentally sat on Jocelyn. Accidentally sat on Jocelyn. Ladies and gentleman, I would suggest to you that during the course of accidentally sitting on Jocelyn it's perfectly reasonable to infer that something happened with his hands in relation to accidentally to sitting on her; that she is now interpreting as having dug in her privates. It's a reasonable inference that this event relates to whatever description Jocelyn is giving as to what occurred. And it's an innocent explanation for what occurred here.

Now again, I -- it's not my duty to convince you that that's what happened. I -- I am suggesting to you that that's what the evidence shows and that -- you have that before you for your consideration as an explanation for why Jocelyn is lodging allegations. Again, it's the State that has the burden of proving this case beyond a reasonable doubt.

1 | 2 | t | 3 | I | 4 | 5 | b | 6 | fi

I'm now going to talk about issues relating to the State's burden of proof that may be -- that do not go directly to my assertion of Mr. Barral's innocence. And I think this was really important because Dr. Cetl said something very, very significant because in order to prove these allegations the State has to prove that -- beyond a reasonable doubt that there was insertion -- insertion or penetration of a finger into the vaginal or anal opening of Jocelyn. And they called Sandra Cetl, their expert, and I'm going to talk a little bit more about Dr. Cetl.

But Dr. Cetl said something very, very interesting during her examination. She said that pressure on the outside could feel like the inside. Okay. Pressure on the outside could feel like the inside. Okay. So if -- even if you believe that there was something that happened, okay, or that Uncle Dustin was digging his hands inappropriately, that's not -- the question before you isn't just did Uncle Dustin's hand inappropriately go down Jocelyn's pants? The question is did he insert his fingers inside of her vaginal opening or in her anal opening.

And in fact, there is a stipulation that there are no physical findings whatsoever to support this allegation. No physical whatsoever to support or corroborate. And the State's own doctor is now telling you that pressure on the outside could feel like the inside; that's their own expert witness. Again, the State has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that there was insertion into these areas and their own expert tells you that pressure on the outside could feel like the inside. To convict Dustin Barral, you have to have proof beyond a reasonable doubt that there was penetration of the vaginal and anal openings. I'd suggest to you that that does not exist especially in light of the testimony of the State's expert.

Now regarding expert testimony, you have at -- this instruction too.

P.782

Number 17: You are to consider such opinion and wait if any to be given. You are not bound however by such an opinion. Dr. Cetl testifies about a lot of things and I suggest to you, ladies and gentlemen, that Dr. Cetl has a bias towards the prosecution. Dr. Cetl is a witness who basically sat before and the State you know, proffers this theory -- you know, normal is normal. Either we find physical evidence -- and if we find physical evidence then something improper occurred but if we don't find physical evidence, not to worry you can still infer that something improper occurred. Okay.

Look, you're not to abandon your common sense and just because Dr. Cetl has a degree, presents herself as a doctor to you, you have the right to examine the quality of her testimony and of course you are not bound by her opinion. I would suggest to you that her assertion about seeing some evidence justifying a physical finding five percent of the time is something that your own common sense should dictate to you is not reasonable. You're talking about -- they have a camera that has -- it's a high-resolution density camera where there's a substantial magnification. I mean, why do you sexual assault examinations? Why would you do sexual assault examinations if you don't ever or rarely expect to find evidence of sexual assault?

I would suggest to you that the county wouldn't spend its money to go and do these examinations if the results were irrelevant. And I suggest common sense dictates that you know that that's not the case. You know that if somebody inserts their fingers and is digging inside of a vagina of a child and -- I talked about the nails on the fingers versus a penis and intuitively reasonable inference suggests that there would be physical evidence to substantiate such a finding and there was in this case. There was none in this case.

The State has the burden of proving their case beyond a reasonable doubt. They can't turn around and say well, there are no physical findings and that corroborates the charges. No it does not. The fact -- the lack of physical findings corroborates the fact that Dustin Barral did not dig his hand and/or fingers into Jocelyn's vagina or anal opening.

I want to talk a little bit about Detective Hatchett. Okay. And I had suggested to you --you know, that had Detective Hatchett done an investigation he would have learned about the monitor, he would've seen the monitor; he would've been able to photograph the layout of the room, the position of the crib, the position of the futon, the relationship between the bathroom and the futon. You know, that's not my job. It's not my job to do the State's work for them. Okay. It's the State's duty, in order to prove their case beyond a reasonable doubt, to do a thorough investigation.

And it stands to reason that a thorough investigation would be to visit the home of the alleged occurrence; to get a search warrant to go in so that you could photograph the relevant areas; so that you could actually do an investigation. So that you could obtain any sheets on the bed, any blankets, anything that could possibly be submitted for DNA, even -- Detective Hatchett says yeah well, in retrospect I prob -- maybe I should have or could've done that. I mean, this is a really serious case. This is a really, really serious case and maybe I should've done that doesn't cut it when you are prosecuting a man for serious charges such as this; that doesn't cut it. We have the right to expect and demand more from law enforcement.

Detective Hatchett, five, six years on the force. He was a patrol officer and lo and behold he gets this assignment. He makes detective; sexual assault detective. When asked well when did you become a sexual assault detective? He doesn't know. He doesn't know. I find it -- I was admitted to practice law on June 15, 1993 and that day is engrained in my mind like a birthday because I take my job as an attorney to be -- very seriously. And it's monumental day for me that I was admitted to practice law.

I suggest to you that it says something about Detective Hatchett and how he sees his responsibilities and duties; that he doesn't know when he became a detective and he doesn't know when he went from being a detective back to being on patrol. It shows the kind of aloof character that doesn't really care about the task that he's charged with. And obviously he went back from sexual assault to patrol it wasn't his forte.

I suggest he didn't like what he was doing but he certainly didn't do a very good job of it. Not only did he not go to the Barral home but he never goes to the Hammonds' home. He never makes any inquiry and you heard Jocelyn testifying about the clothes she was wearing when she spent the night over at Aunt Megan's and Uncle Dustin's. And again, you don't have to be a criminal justice major, you don't have to go to college, it stands to reason and your common sense would dictate, that it would be really, really important and probative to get a hold of these clothes. Okay.

And what do we know? We know that a bag was packed; that clothes were taken to Aunt Megan's and Uncle Dustin's. The clothes were allegedly worn at the time of this incident; that when Megan -- that when Jocelyn returned home she had her clothes in her bags; that on Tuesday night when these allegations are brought forward there's every indication the clothes are still in the bag. On Wednesday when -- or Tuesday night when the call is made to law enforcement, the clothes would still be in the bag. On Wednesday when Jocelyn and Nicole go to meet with Detective Hatchett, the clothes would've still been in the bag and somebody needed to ask the question: Where are these clothes? Okay.

It doesn't take -- it shouldn't take much convincing to accept that these clothes should've been recovered, they should've been submitted for DNA testing to see what was on the inside, to see if there was DNA, to see specifically if there was Dustin Barral's DNA on the inside of those clothes, to see if the State could prove these charges against Dustin Barral beyond a reasonable doubt. And mind you this case really is not a case of Jocelyn Hammonds or Jocelyn Coleman, excuse me, against Dustin Barral. This is a case of the State of Nevada versus Dustin Barral.

So you're really not here to reconcile the issues between Dustin Barral and Jocelyn Coleman or the Hammonds family. In fact, the very last instruction, Number 22 tells you that -- it ends, and you could read the entire instruction but I'm going to start on the third line up on the right where is says: With this sole-fixed and steadfast purpose of doing equal and exact justice between the Defendant and the State of Nevada. The Defendant and State of Nevada.

And Ladies and gentlemen without doing any disrespect to these fine prosecutors who argue zealously on behalf of their cause, I am suggesting to you that the State of Nevada has not done their job and what is necessary to prove a case like this beyond a reasonable doubt. Okay. Because this is not just about advocacy. This is not just about attorneys getting up and trying to persuade you to do something. This is about -- what has the State of Nevada done to prove this case? What facts did they pursue? What investigation did they do? Was it reasonable? Was it reasonable to expect more from the State of Nevada? I suggest to you that it is reasonable and that it's unreasonable to accept the evidence presented in this case as being sufficient to sustain a guilty verdict.

There is another significant, significant glaring weakness in the State's case. All right. They bring before you a litany of individuals to testify about events going from Saturday until -- you know, all the way through Wednesday. Okay. And -- but notably there is a -- there was a notable gap in testimony. All right. Because we hear that Michael picks up Jocelyn on Monday and she [sic] brings Jocelyn to the home of her father, Frederick -- Fred Coleman. Okay. And the next testimony we have is that twenty-four hours later that Nicole and Megan pick Jocelyn up from her father's house. Okay. But there's twenty-four hours -- a twenty-four hour gap here for which there is no testimony. Okay.

The State for whatever reasons fails to call Fred Goalman [sic] -- I'm sorry, Fred Coleman to the stand. And I would suggest to you that it is a gap; that you need to consider in evaluating the facts and evidence in this case. It's an open twenty-four hour window for which the State provides no explanation. And, you know, there were multiple opportunities for Jocelyn to disclose to individuals that something inappropriate had occurred. Okay. One of those periods of time where you might want or expect Jocelyn to have disclosed that something inappropriate had occurred would have been during the twenty-four hour period which she was -- where she was with her father Fred Coleman.

Any evidence that Jocelyn was behaving unusually; that her disposition or demeanor was unusual during that period of time, nothing whatsoever. Again, when you consider the State's burden of proof, I would suggest that failing to account for that time period creates a legitimate questioning concern that you should consider in your deliberations. Jocelyn could've disclosed at church on Sunday. She was there with her grandmother. She could've disclosed earlier in the day at the hospital. She could've disclosed to Megan on Sunday night. She could've disclosed to Michael in the car ride when Uncle Michael was bringing her to Frederick's house. She could've disclosed to Fred. She could've disclosed to Nicole or Megan on the way home from Fred's house. And none of this occurred. None of it occurred.

And what happens when we have this initial disclosure? We have this comment: Uncle Dustin dug -- dug into me. Okay. The six -- the six words. And then lo and behold everybody freaks out. Nobody asks Jocelyn for any additional detail of information. When did this occur? Where did this occur? What were you wearing? Give me some more detail. Apparently no additional investigation and what do they do? They immediately put her in the bathtub. Not something that you would expect from somebody -- and I don't think again that you have to have had some kind of training to understand that there -- if there's an allegation of sexual abuse you don't want to just put the kid in the bathtub.

I mean -- you know -- granted the State may get up here and say you know -- well, it'd been a couple of days. Who knows what Jocelyn had been up to; whether there was a -- something of evidentiary value. But ladies and gentlemen I would suggest that the reasonable response to something like that would not to -- not be to bathe the child immediately thereafter.

Coaching or practicing. Okay. There's evidence of that in this case.

We're not making it up. It's not something the Defense has done. It's not something that we created. We know that Dustin was not well-liked. We know that the family disapproved of the marriage and I think there was some degree of -- that there was -- that there's a reasonable inference that when Megan was called over to the house to come back home; that it was kind of the coup de gras. The family was right. You never should've married the son of a bitch and we're going to call you over and confront you with this. Okay. And now they got the goods on Dustin.

And Megan tells you she's upset. She didn't think that Dustin would be capable of doing something like this. As a matter of fact the testimony was that he was a good husband, a great father, a good man; he worked to support his family. And they bring Jocelyn down so that Megan confront -- can confront Jocelyn about this. And Megan starts to ask questions but she was not allowed to question Jocelyn any further. And that Joanna, her mother, immediately took Jocelyn away. And that Megan thought that was very strange -- thought that it was very strange.

Not something the Defense is making up. These are the facts. And these are the facts as testified to. And lo and behold we learn that Jocelyn is speaking to a counselor, a Betsy Morgan. And we learn and we questioned Jocelyn about this: Didn't you tell your counselor that you wanted to practice? That you were going to practice prior to coming in? All right. Now this is a girl who couldn't even tell you if she was sleeping on the floor, on a bed, on a futon when she testified in here a few days ago about the events in question. She didn't know where she was sleeping. Okay. Yet, she was able to testify to other things. And she told you -- again, not something that we did or made up, she told you that she practiced in the days leading up to her testifying with her mother, Joanna; that's what she said.

Now, you know -- the State can put a spin on it and they can try to tell you what that practice meant; that it wasn't going over her testimony. But how could -- how could she if she doesn't remember whether she was a bed or on the floor? I mean, there's reason to suggest that the seven year old's memory of events that allegedly take place when she's four isn't very good. And this was something, perhaps one component of the testimony that she hadn't practiced or that she wasn't coached on. But I would suggest to you that the evidence suggests that there was some coaching or practicing going on here. And that should be a cause for alarm in a case where you don't have any physical evidence to support the charges. And you just have the testimony of a child who thinks years later that she's feeling pains of nails in her vaginal area.

What happens when Jocelyn makes these allegations? Everybody becomes very attentive to Jocelyn. Everybody becomes very attentive. Megan comes home immediately. Michael is called back to the house. You know -- the mind of a child. Can we say definitively what would motivate the mind of a child? A child that, years later is still seeing a counselor and is it just because of this? Who knows? It's the mind of a child. Who knows what kind of problems she had before these allegations came to surface? And who knows what kind of problems develop afterwards?

You may choose to listen to the audio and video recorded interview of Jocelyn again in your deliberations. A few things I want to point out to you for your consideration when you listen to it: When she's asked -- and everything leads up to you know -- were -- you know -- you know this area where people aren't supposed to touch. We have the diagram that's drawn where body parts are gone over; State's Exhibit Number 3. So there's a lead-in. This is the body. These are the parts of the body. Are there areas that nobody's supposed to touch? She says: My privates. And she illustrates her privates. Okay. And she says, interestingly that well, mommy and daddy are allowed to touch my privates. Mommy and daddy are allowed to touch my privates had ever touched her privates she says: No.

Detective Hatchett told about the importance of not asking leading questions; of asking opening -- ended questions as to not insert ideas in to the mind of the child. Okay. And we are contending that there was some suggestiveness here. We are contending that there's a motive to manufacture allegations against Dustin Barral. And when asked the plain question did someone touch you in your privates? She says: No. And then we got to Detective Hatchett acknowledging in cross-examination well she would disclose so he says he used a prompt -- a prompt word; which was dig. Okay.

Now, he's trying to play a psychologist to some degree. I'd suggest to you that a prompt word -- the word prompt -- it's no different than leading. Okay. And it wasn't until asking this leading question that he gets a response where blame is pointed in the direction of Dustin Barral. Regarding her testimony, interestingly, there is a period -- a portion of the -- well -- repeatedly if you listen to the testimony -- repeatedly she used the expression, trying to dig in my butt; trying to dig. It's replete throughout the interview. She says trying to dig. Okay.

And at one point Detective Hatchett says: And did that go inside, outside, or something else? And she says: Goes inside. And then he says: And how long have you been -- how long did it go inside for? And she said: It was like -- well, he moved before he was in my privates and he started digging and digging. That's what he -- that's what she said. He moved before he was in my privates and started digging and digging.

Again, could this be consistent with a fault, an accident that was described where you're sitting down on your hands? I suggest that it could. I suggest that her language if you listen to it closely is ambiguous as to what digging and digging was. Is ambiguous as to what inside means because she says she has her clothes on. Inside could be interpreted to mean inside the clothing. It's ambiguous with regard to inside the vagina; it really is. If you look at it and if you consider the questions that are being asked to elicit a response, there's a lot of ambiguity.

There is also, interestingly, a statement that she makes that's just kind of lingering out there that she had fallen off the futon. Okay. We don't know anything more about it. But apparently there was something hap -- something else that happened that night where she's falling off the futon. Okay. You know, who knows what goes on in the mind of a child? Who knows what fears Jocelyn had? Who knows what -- to what degree the animosity and distaste for Dustin Barral affected Jocelyn at the time she's going to sleep? And who knows how that may have influence and/or other may have influence her to lodge these allegations against Dustin? Who knows what was going on for the twenty-four hour period of time that's not accounted for by the testimony in this case and how they may have influenced Jocelyn's allegations.

Well, you've heard it all. You've heard the testimony. You've patiently sat through the arguments of counsel and I appreciate you for taking the time although you don't have a choice, to listen to me and my argument. But what's important is that you take what I have to say back with you in the jury room. And there are twelve of you that are going to go back in the jury room -- the attorneys have made arguments and the State gets to go again; the State gets to go two times. We only get to go once and I won't get to respond to anything that the State says from this point on.

But there are twelve of you who've listened to the testimony and I'm sure that there are things that you've noted, things that are going to come up in the deliberation room that the attorneys don't even talk about. We don't deny that Jocelyn was a guest in the home of Megan and Dustin Barral at that time. We don't deny that he went in to the room; that doesn't corroborate these allegations. But we clearly deny and Dustin has denied the notion that he did something improper.

When Megan called and confronted him with the allegations he immediately denied it. He had no reason to disclose the accident if he was trying to cover something up because no allegation had been made when he told Megan initially about the accident in the bedroom that night when he went to check on Josh-Josh.

I ask you to take your words -- my words back with you in the jury room.

And ultimately I'm going to ask you to find that the State has not proven the case against Dustin Barral beyond a reasonable doubt and render a verdict of not-guilty.

Thank you.

REBUTTAL ARGUMENT BY THE STATE

BY MS. EDWARDS:

You have been sitting here for awhile -- and my greatest nightmare is tripping over this. And you just heard a whole lot from the Defense; a whole lot. But let's focus on what he actually told you. He -- it's like there's a puzzle. We've been putting this puzzle together with all of the witnesses throughout the course of the week. And we do appreciate your time listening to everybody and taking everything, everything in to consideration. But we've built this picture for you all to look at through the witnesses and through the exhibits.

And what Defense is doing is he -- in all of his argument, he zooms in to this teeny, tiny little part of the picture; what's really there? What's not really there? And then he zooms back out and then he goes over here and zooms in to something else; what's here? What's not here? But what did he really say?

Speculation. And read your jury instructions about what you have to base your reasonable doubt on. It's Instruction Number 11, I believe. It says: A reasonable doubt is one based on reason. It is not mere possible doubt but it is such a doubt as would govern or control a person in the more weighty affairs of life. If you skip down in the paragraph -- you all can read so I'm not going to read the whole thing to you. Doubt to be reasonable must be actual; not mere possibility or speculation.

So he's just throwing out all these things that are speculation. Not putting Fred on the stand. Not having the clothing. Not having -- all of that stuff about the baby monitor. It's all speculation. So what are you supposed to do? You're supposed to listen -- you can consider what we say. You could completely zoom -- tone out to everything I'm about to tell you but look at the evidence. So he came up with a number of theories throughout the course of his argument; so let's talk about them.

Let's go with the CSI first; at least that's the argument I like to call it.

CSI. He attacks Detective Hatchett; says Detective Hatchett doesn't remember the day he became a detective. But Mr. Becker remembers the day that he was admitted to the bar. So do I, the day I became a lawyer. Now whether I get promoted, whether I go to the D.A.'s office, whether I'm in civil practice, whether I decide to leave the practice altogether and -- I don't know go teach kids, the day I was admitted to the bar, I remember.

He didn't ask Detective Hatchett what day he became a police officer. Nobody did. He's like oh he can't remember what day he became a detective. So what? He also can't remember the day he became a sergeant. And a sergeant is a higher-ranking officer than a detective and he had to go back to patrol to go the sergeant route; to become higher than a detective.

So, CSI. Lack of evidence is his argument. We have evidence. We have testimony. We have the video. I apologize. My allergies are killing me today. We have testimony, we have the evidence, we have the video, we have the diagram that she drew. And they even brought for us the monitor from the baby room. So we have those pieces of evidence. He's saying we don't have evidence because there are no findings from the exam. And we all stipulate there are no physical findings but the incident occurred on Saturday evening or Saturday night and she goes to the hospital Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. Cetl told you it could be -- if, and that's a big if, there were any cuts, scrapes, or injuries, if, it could've been healed within twenty-four hours. She hadn't even disclosed within twenty-four hours. In fact, she waited until the first opportunity she had to get her mother alone, to disclose what that man had done to her one Saturday night. She -- it was actually three days until she disclosed. So all the physical evidence that may or may not have been there; we'll never know.

And what physical evidence does he want from the SCAN exam? There's no allegations that he stuck his penis in her. There are no allegations that he got semen anywhere. There are no allegations that his blood, semen, saliva was anywhere on that child. The allegation is digital penetration. Fingers that he put his fingers in her vagina and that he dug with his fingers. So you wouldn't expect there to be any DNA evidence in her or on her four days later. I wouldn't expect any DNA evidence the day after from a finger. Dr. Cetl said probably wouldn't have any evidence from a finger, from that exam.

So then he goes in to the clothing. So we get the clothing. So what?

What's that going to prove? That her DNA's on it? Sure. She had the pajamas on.

What about him sticking his hand underneath her pants, underneath her panties, and into her vagina is going to leave some amount of DNA that the Defendant -- that we're going to find on her clothing? No one even insinuated that he would've left anything that would prove that he did this act to her on her clothing.

And let's think about it. He was in the house. She was at his home for two days. Megan testified that he helped out with the kids; helped to get everybody ready for church. Maybe he grabbed her clothing and picked it up and put it in the bag. Would his DNA be on there? Maybe. Maybe not. Just as likely as shoving his hand underneath her pants, underneath her panties, and into her vagina. Same amount of potential DNA or not.

The other issue that came up during trial regarding the CSI is the futon and the covering on the futon and the blankets. Again so we find his DNA on the futon. Big deal. It's his house. He lives there. He's probably gone in to the room multiple times; probably sat on the futon multiple times. But again, there was no disclosure of semen, saliva, blood, or anything else coming off the Defendant during this encounter. So we find his DNA. Big deal. So we find Jocelyn's DNA on the futon and the blanket. Big deal. She slept there. She could've drooled. She could've sweat while she sleeping. Finding DNA on something won't prove or disprove that this specific act we're talking happened.

It was digital penetration. So what are we left with? All we have is testimony. That's it. Because -- like I just said, DNA is not going to prove one or another whether it happened or not. So all we have is testimony. And we didn't just put Jocelyn on the stand and say hey look at her. Isn't she so cute? Believe her. No. We have taken your time this week and put a multitude of witnesses that you've all had to sit here and listen to; not just Jocelyn. And it's the context of everyone's testimony that we are asking you to look at.

Now, Ms. Fleck went through the corroboration and all those kinds of things so I won't waste your time anymore but let's look at a couple of other things that matter. Let's look at the theory of coaching or some sort of conspiracy. For coaching, who has to be involved? Let's think about the facts. Who has to be involved in coaching Jocelyn? I submit to you that it would have to be -- obviously Nicole would have to be in on the coaching. But who else would have to be in on it? Jocelyn. Because she would have to sit there, she would have to retain the information that's being told her, and then she's going to have to turn around and spit it out to Detective Hatchett, to her grandmother. Or maybe her grandma's in on the coaching. Her grandma was the second person she disclosed to. So maybe it was Nicole, Joanna, and Jocelyn in this great coaching conspiracy.

Why? Why would they be coaching? And again, she's sitting there, she's -- if she's being coached, she's listening to her mom and now to her grandma, telling her everything she needs to know. Well, it can't be just them. And here's why it can't be just them. There are details that Jocelyn disclosed to Detective Hatchett in that video that only Megan can corroborate; that only Megan was aware of. And in the course of all the testimony you've heard, all Nicole knew from her child -- all she's ever known is that she was pulled aside on a Tuesday night; the first time she'd seem her by herself since she'd gone in to the hospital that Friday. And her child says to her that Uncle Dustin dug in her privates.

Nicole, clearly upset, goes downstairs so she doesn't show all her emotion to this child. The grandmother comes upstairs. What'd you tell mommy? Told her Uncle Dustin dug in my privates. Joanna, upset. They call Megan back to the house. What about a conspiracy, what about a coaching would elicit the tension that was described as being in the house that night when Megan got back? What
