MOTION TO VACATE DETENTION ORDER
AND RELEASE THE DEFENDANT FROM CUSTODY

COMES NOW, the Defendant, Aaron Frye, by and through, PANDORA L. LEVEN, Deputy Public Defender, and moves this Honorable Court for an order vacating Aaron Frye's current detention order and releasing him on his own recognizance or, in the alternative, order Mr. Fry's release with attainable conditions "minimally necessary" to protect the community and ensure Aaron Frye's return to court.

This Motion is based upon the attached Declaration of Counsel, any attached documents, argument of Counsel, and any information provided at the time set for hearing this motion.

DATED this 17th day of July, 2018.

2 working in the music industry and will resume working in that industry as soon as he can.

3 BRIEF OVERVIEW

4 The protocol by which pretrial detention orders are promulgated in Clark County is 5 unlawful. First, the procedure by which a judge defaults to detaining criminal defendants without 6 a full hearing violates Federal and Nevada law. Second, Clark County's ongoing, systemic use of 7 bail as a tool of pretrial confinement rather than release is also unlawful because: (a) jailing 8 someone solely because he cannot pay a sum of money without making a finding that he is able 9 to pay infringes a fundamental right solely on the basis of wealth in violation of the Equal 10 Protection and Due Process Clauses; and (b) jailing someone on an unattainable financial 11 condition violates the Constitution because it deprives a presumptively innocent person of the 12 fundamental right to liberty without complying with the substantive and procedural requirements 13 of a valid order of detention under the Due Process Clause.

14 I. Constitutional Protections Violated by the Current Process in Clark County

15 A. The Due Process Clause

16 The Due Process Clauses of the U.S. and Nevada Constitutions provide that "[n]o person 17 shall . . . be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." U.S. Const. amend.
18 V;¹ Nev. Const. Art. 1, §8. Due Process requires a hearing before a neutral fact-finder and an 19 opportunity to be heard "at a meaningful time and in a meaningful manner" before an individual 20 is deprived of a fundamental right or property interest. Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 333-
21 34, 96 S. Ct. 893 (1976) (citations omitted); see also Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 690, 121 22 S. Ct. 2491 (2001) ("Freedom from imprisonment – from government custody, detention, or 23 other forms of physical restraint – lies at the heart of the liberty that [the Due Process] Clause 24 protects"); Foucha v. Louisiana, 504 U.S. 71, 80, 112 S. Ct. 1780 (1992) ("Freedom from bodily 25 restraint has always been at the core of the liberty protected by the Due Process Clause from 26 arbitrary governmental action"); U.S. v. Montalvo-Murillo, 495 U.S. 711, 716, 110 S. Ct. 2072

27 ¹ The Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause was made applicable to the states via the Fourteenth Amendment to the 28 U.S. Constitution. U.S. Const. amend, V, XIV. See Malloy v. Hogan, 378 U.S. 1, 84 S. Ct. 1489 (1964)

1 (1990) (holding that release prior to trial is a “vital liberty interest”). Accordingly, the issue of 2 pretrial detention must be resolved in a manner that comports with due process.

3 Pretrial liberty is a fundamental right. U.S. v. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739, 750, 107 S. Ct. 2095 4 (1987). For that reason, a presumptively innocent person’s loss of pretrial liberty is subject to 5 “heightened constitutional scrutiny” and must be preceded by rigorous procedures designed to 6 ensure protection of that liberty. Id. at 746. Where the State is seeking to detain a defendant 7 pretrial, the defendant is entitled to substantive and procedural due process. Id. Because the Due 8 Process Clause of the Nevada Constitution mirrors that of its federal counterpart, Nevada “looks 9 to federal precedent” for guidance in resolving due process claims. Hernandez v. Bennett-Haron, 10 128 Nev. 580, 587, 287 P.3d 305 (2012).

11 The essential elements of a procedural due process claim under the Fifth Amendment are 12 “(1) a life, liberty, or property interest requiring protection under the Due Process Clause, and (2) 13 a deprivation of that interest (3) without adequate process.” Fields v. Henry Co., 701 F.3d 180, 14 185 (6th Cir. 2012). “A liberty interest may arise from the Constitution itself, by reason of 15 guarantees implicit in the word ‘liberty’ . . . or [by] an expectation or interest created by the state 16 law or policies”. Wilkinson v. Austin, 545 U.S. 209, 221, 125 S. Ct. 2384 (2005) (citation 17 omitted). Freedom of movement, including the right to travel, has long been recognized as a 18 liberty interest which cannot be restricted without due process of law. City of Chicago v.
19 Morales, 527 U.S. 41, 54, 119 S. Ct. 1849 (1999) (citing Kent v. Dulles, 357 U.S. 116, 78 S. Ct.
20 1113 (1958) (noting that freedom of movement is “a part of our heritage”)). Accordingly, any 21 restraint on pretrial liberty implicates procedural due process protections. Those protections 22 require “adequate process”. In the context of a pretrial detention order, “adequate process” 23 requires rigorous procedures be met to detain someone pretrial, including, but not limited to, a 24 “full-blown adversary hearing,” a heightened evidentiary standard of proof of 25 dangerousness/flight risk by “clear and convincing evidence,” consideration of alternative 26 conditions or release, and “written findings of fact and a written statement of reasons for a 27 decision to detain.” Salerno, 481 U.S. at 741, 750-51.

1 Substantive due process “prohibits states from infringing fundamental liberty interests, 2 unless the infringement is narrowly tailored to serve a compelling state interest.” Lawrence v.
3 Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 593, 123 S. Ct. 2472 (2003). In a pretrial detention context, substantive due 4 process requires that detention survive “heightened constitutional scrutiny” and the government 5 may only detain where that detention is carefully limited to serve a “compelling” government 6 interest. Salerno, 481 U.S. at 746. As a result, the government may detain someone pretrial only 7 if other, less restrictive means are not available to serve the state’s interests. Id.; U.S. v. Karper, 8 847 F. Supp. 2d 350, 362 (N.D.N.Y. 2011) (finding release conditions cannot exceed that which 9 is minimally necessary to ensure the accused’s appearance in court and protect the community 10 against future dangerousness).

11 B. Equal Protection Clause

12 The Equal Protection Clause of the U.S. and Nevada constitutions² prohibits the 13 government from denying individuals equal protection of the laws. The Equal Protection Clause 14 may be invoked to analyze the governmental actions that draw distinctions based upon specific 15 characteristics or impinge on an individual’s exercise of a fundamental right. See Skinner v.
16 Oklahoma, 316 U.S. 535, 62 S. Ct. 1110 (1942). While the Equal Protection Clause permits the 17 states some discretion in enacting laws which affect some groups of citizens differently than 18 others, a statute or practice is unconstitutional if the “classification rests on grounds wholly 19 irrelevant to the achievement of the State’s objective.” McGowan v. Maryland, 366 U.S. 420, 20 425-26, 81 S. Ct. 1101 (1961).

21 In the context of bail, the Equal Protection Clause prohibits the pretrial detention of 22 defendants solely because of their inability to afford bail. Weatherspoon v. Oldham, 2018 WL
23 1053548, at *6 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 26, 2018); Jones, 2015 WL 5387219, at *4; Pugh v. Rainwater, 24 572 F.2d at 1058 (5th Cir. 1978) (holding that “pretrial confinement for inability to post money 25 bail” for a defendant “whose appearance at trial could reasonably be assured by one of the 26 alternate forms of release . . . would constitute imposition of an excessive restraint . . .”).

27
28 ² U.S. Const. amend. XIV; Nev. Const. Art. 1, § 1 and Art. IV, § 21.

1 C. Excessive Bail Clause and Nevada's Statutory Bail Scheme

2 The Eighth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution states, in part, that "excessive bail shall 3 not be required." Similarly, the Nevada Constitution mandates that all defendants "shall be 4 bailable by sufficient sureties" and that bail shall not be "excessive". Nev. Const. Art. 1, §§ 6-7.
5 The constitutional right to bail is codified in Nevada statute, which requires that "a person 6 arrested for an offense other than murder of the first degree must be admitted to bail." NRS 7 178.484(1).

8 Nevada Revised Statute 178.4851 provides that criminal defendants may be released 9 without bail upon a showing of good cause that the court "can impose conditions on the person 10 that will adequately protect the health, safety, and welfare of the community and ensure that the 11 person will appear at all times and places ordered by the court." This determination involves 12 consideration of the following factors regarding the accused:

- 13 1. The length of residence in the community;
14 2. The status and history of employment;
15 3. Relationships with the person's spouse and children, parents or other family 16 members and with close friends;
17 4. Reputation, character and mental condition;
18 5. Prior criminal record, including, without limitation, any record of appearing or 19 failing to appear after release on bail or without bail; 20 6. The identity of responsible members of the community who would vouch for 21 the reliability of the person;
22 7. The nature of the offense with which the person is charged, the apparent 23 probability of conviction and the likely sentence, insofar as these factors relate 24 to the risk of not appearing;
25 8. The nature and seriousness of the danger to the alleged victim, any other person 26 or the community that would be posed by the person's release; 27 9. The likelihood of more criminal activity by the person after release; and 28 10. Any other factors concerning the person's ties to the community or bearing on the risk that the person may willfully fail to appear.

II. Specific Constitutional Concerns Regarding Clark County's Systematic and Unlawful Use of Bail as a Mechanism of Pretrial Detention

A. Clark County's Bail System

Clark County uses bail as a mechanism of pretrial detention. When an individual is arrested, Clark County courts do not resolve the issue of pretrial confinement without regard to bail. The courts typically set bail based upon the offense or offenses charged, often relying on a standardized bail schedule. The result is that well-resourced defendants are able to buy their freedom, while the poor languish in jail. When bail becomes an unattainable release condition, it becomes a mechanism of preventative detention. And preventative detention is only allowed when a court concludes, after an adversarial hearing, that prosecutors established clear and convincing evidence that pretrial detention is the least restrictive means of assuring community safety and the defendant's return to court. Absent such a finding, any release condition – of which bail is one – must be attainable. This means that bail must be set in an amount a defendant can pay.

B. The History and Evolution of Bail in the United States

"Bail" is not equivalent to "money bail." "Bail" means release before trial. Although common in recent years, the sentence "the Defendant is held on $10,000 bail" is a contradiction: as a historical matter, being "held on bail" was impossible. Timothy R. Schnacke, U.S. Dep't of Justice – Nat'l Inst. for Corr., Fundamentals of Bail: A Resource Guide for Pretrial Practitioners and a Framework for American Pretrial Reform 1 (Aug. 2014).³ As the CATO Institute has explained, since well before the Magna Carta, bail has been understood as a device to free defendants pretrial. See Brief for Amicus Curiae CATO Inst, Walker v. City of Calhoun, Ga., No. 16-10521, at 3 (11th Cir. 2016).⁴

"Money bail" is the practice of requiring a defendant to forfeit money if they do not appear for trial. Money bail can be either secured or unsecured. A secured money bail system requires the defendant to deposit money before they are released; an unsecured money bail

³ Available at http://www.clebp.org/images/2014-11-05_final_bail_fundamentals_september_8_2014.pdf.

1 system allows the defendant to be released without depositing any money so long as they 2 promise to pay if they fail to appear.

3 As Chief Judge Rosenthal of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas
4 recently summarized in her comprehensive discussion of the history of the American bail system, 5 ODonnell v. Harris Co., 251 F.Supp.3d 1052, 1068 (S.D. Tex. 2017),⁵ bail originated in 6 medieval England “as a device to free untried prisoners.” Daniel J. Freed & Patricia M. Wald, 7 Bail in the U.S.: 1964 1 (1964). The Statute of Westminster, enacted by the English Parliament in 8 1275, listed the offenses that would be bailable and provided criteria for determining whether 9 someone should be released. These criteria included the strength of the evidence against the 10 accused and the severity of the accused’s criminal history. See June Carbone, Seeing Through 11 the Emperor’s New Clothes: Rediscovery of Basic Principles in the Administration of Bail, 34
12 Syracuse L. Rev. 517, 523-26 (1983); Note, Bail: An Ancient Practice Reexamined, 70 Yale L.J.
13 966 (1961). In 1679, Parliament adopted the Habeas Corpus Act to ensure that an accused could 14 obtain a timely bail hearing. And the English Bill of Rights, enacted in 1679, prohibited 15 excessive bail. See Carbone, supra, at 528.

16 The American States continued this tradition. Beginning with the Pennsylvania 17 Constitution of 1682, 48 states, including Nevada, have protected, by constitution or statute, a 18 right to bail “by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the 19 presumption great.” Matthew J. Hegreness, America’s Fundamental and Vanishing Right to Bail, 20 55 Ariz. L. Rev. 909, 916 (2013).

21 As the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas recently explained in its 22 detailed opinion striking down Harris County’s money bail practices, “[h]istorians and jurists 23 confirm that from the medieval period until the early American republic, a bail bond was 24 typically based on an individualized assessment of what the arrestee or his surety could pay to 25 assure appearance and secure release.” ODonnell, 251 F.Supp.3d at 1069 (emphasis added). The 26 court explained the English practice at the time of the ratification of the U.S. Constitution: ““The

28 ⁵ Aff’d as modified, 882 F.3d 528 (5th Cir. 2018).

1 rule is, where the offence is prima facie great, to require good bail; moderation nevertheless is to 2 be observed, and such bail only is to be required as the party is able to procure; for otherwise the 3 allowance of bail would be a mere colour for imprisoning the party on the charge.” Id. (quoting 4 1 J. Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 88-89 (Philadelphia ed. 1819)).

5 Jurisdictions across America began to depart from the original understanding of bail in 6 the middle of the 20th Century. And in the last two decades, the use of unaffordable secured 7 money bail has increased in scope and severity. In 1996, 59% of felony defendants had to meet a 8 financial condition to regain their liberty pretrial. Timothy C. Hart & Brian A. Reaves, U.S.
9 Dep’t of Justice, Felony Defendants in Large Urban Counties, 1996, at 17-18 (1999).⁶ By 2009, 10 that percentage had climbed to 72%. Brian A Reaves, U.S. Dep’t of Justice, Felony Defendants 11 in Large Urban Counties, 2009-Statistical Tables, at 15, 20 (2013).⁷ In 1990, the majority of 12 felony defendants who were not detained while their cases were pending were released without 13 financial conditions. In 2009, only 23% of felony defendants who were not detained while their 14 cases were pending were released without financial conditions. And the average amount of 15 money required to be paid as a condition of release has increased. Vera Inst of Justice, 16 Incarceration’s Front Door: The Misuse of Jails in America, 29 (Feb. 2015).⁸ By 2009, about half 17 of felony defendants subject to financial conditions of release could not meet them and remained 18 in custody until the disposition of their cases. Felony Defendants, 2009-Statistical Tables, at 17.

19 The routine use of unaffordable secured money bail resulted in a “crisis.” See U.S. v.
21 courts”); Caleb Foote, The Coming Constitutional Crisis in Bail: 1, 113 U. Pa. L. Rev. 959, 971
22 (1965). Two distinct evils of the secured money bail system provoked the crisis: It imperiled 23 public safety by allowing potentially dangerous defendants to be released without any 24 consideration of their dangerousness, and it worked an “invidious discrimination” against those

1 who could not pay. See, e.g., Williams v. Illinois, 399 U.S. 235, 242, 90 S. Ct. 2018 (1970).

2 Over 50 years ago, Attorney General Robert Kennedy led a successful movement to reform bail
3 in the federal courts. Kennedy testified:

4 Bail has become a vehicle for systematic injustice. Every year in this country, 5 thousands of persons are kept in jail for weeks and even months following arrest.
6 They are not yet proven guilty. They may be no more likely to flee than you or I.
7 But, nonetheless, most of them must stay in jail because, to be blunt, they cannot 8 afford to pay for their freedom . . . Plainly our bail system has changed what is a constitutional right into an expensive privilege.

9 Testimony on Bail Legislation before S. Judiciary Subcomm. on Const. Rights and 10 Improvements in Judicial Machinery (Aug. 4, 1964).⁹

11 One of the results of the movement to reform the bail system in the 1960s was the virtual 12 elimination of cash bonds in the District of Columbia and in all Federal courts. The Bail Reform 13 Act “assure[d] that all persons, regardless of their financial status, [would] not needlessly be 14 detained pending their appearance to answer charges . . . when detention serves neither the ends 15 of justice nor the public interest.” Bail Reform Act of 1966, Pub. L. No. 89-465, § 2, 80 Stat.
16 214, 214 (repealed in 1984). In 1984, Congress updated the Bail Reform Act as part of the 17 Comprehensive Crime Control Act. See Bail Reform Act of 1984, 18 U.S.C. §§ 3141-50. Federal 18 courts and the courts of the District of Columbia transitioned to a rigorous, evidence-based 19 system of non-financial conditions that remains in place today. If the government believes that a 20 defendant cannot be released pretrial because she is too dangerous or too likely to flee, the 21 government may seek an order of detention, but only after it has satisfied the court, at a “full-22 blown adversarial hearing,” that no condition or combination of conditions could assure the 23 defendant’s appearance at trial and the safety of the community. Salerno, 481 U.S. at 750.
24 Indeed, the constitutionality of any moneyed bail system requires as much in order to meet 25 constitutional muster. Id. at 750-55.

1 Thus, the government may not detain someone just because she does not have enough 2 money, nor may the government use money to detain sub rosa people it believes to be 3 dangerous. 18 U.S.C. § 3143(c)(2) (“The judicial officer may not impose a financial condition 4 that results in the pretrial detention of the person”). Although courts may detain defendants 5 pending trial, they may not do so without rigorous process. As Chief Judge Rosenthal of the U.S.
6 District Court for the Southern District of Texas recently concluded, “[t]he federal history of bail 7 reform confirms that bail is a mechanism of pretrial release, not of preventative detention.”
8 ODonnell, 251 F.Supp. 3d at 1070.

9 C. Jailing an Arrestee For the Inability to Make a Monetary Bond Violates Equal 10 Protection

11 The principle that jailing the poor because they cannot pay a sum of money is 12 unconstitutional has deep roots in American constitutional law. See Williams v. Illinois, 399 U.S.
13 235, 241, 90 S. Ct. 2018 (1970) (“[T]he Court has had frequent occasion to reaffirm allegiance to 14 the basic command that justice be applied equally to all persons”); Douglas v. California, 372 15 U.S. 353, 355, 83 S. Ct. 814 (1963) (condemning the “evil” of “discrimination against the 16 indigent”); Griffin v. Illinois, 351 U.S. 12, 19, 76 S. Ct. 585 (1956) (“There can be no equal 17 justice where the kind of trial a man gets depends on the amount of money he has”); see also 18 Mayer v. City of Chicago, 404 U.S. 189, 193, 92 S. Ct. 410 (1971).

19 These principles have been applied in a variety of contexts in which a government jailed 20 someone because of her inability to make a monetary payment. In Tate v. Short, 401 U.S. 395, 21 91 S. Ct. 668 (1971), the U.S. Supreme Court held that “the Constitution prohibits the State from 22 imposing a fine as a sentence and then automatically converting it into a jail term solely because 23 the defendant is indigent and cannot forthwith pay the fine in full.” Id. at 398. In Bearden v.
24 Georgia, 461 U.S. 660, 103 S. Ct. 2064 (1983), the Court explained that to “deprive [a] 25 probationer of his conditional freedom simply because, through no fault of his own he cannot 26 pay [a] fine... would be contrary to the fundamental fairness required by the Fourteenth 27 Amendment.” Id. at 672-73.

1 For pretrial arrestees, the rights at stake are even more significant because the arrestees' 2 liberty is not diminished by a criminal conviction; they are presumed innocent. Justice Douglas 3 framed the basic question that applies to pretrial detainees: "To continue to demand a substantial 4 bond which the defendant is unable to secure raises considerable problems for the equal 5 administration of the law." Bandy v. U.S., 81 S. Ct. 197, 197-98 (1960) (Douglas, J., in 6 chambers). The U.S. Supreme Court Justice further espoused "Can an indigent be denied 7 freedom, where a wealthy man would not, because he does not happen to have enough property 8 to pledge for his freedom?" Id.

9 The Fifth Circuit answered that question in Pugh v. Rainwater, 557 F.2d 1189, 1190 (5th 10 Cir. 1977) (en banc). A panel opinion struck down a Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure dealing 11 with money bail because it unconstitutionally jailed indigent pretrial arrestees solely because 12 they could not make a monetary payment. Id. The en banc court agreed with the constitutional 13 holding of the panel opinion, but reversed the panel's facial invalidation of the entire Florida 14 Rule. The en banc court held that the Florida Rule did not on its face require Florida courts to set 15 secured monetary bail for arrestees. But the court explained that, were this to happen to an 16 indigent person, it would be unconstitutional:

17 We have no doubt that in the case of an indigent, whose appearance at trial could 18 reasonably be assured by one of the alternate forms of release, pretrial 19 confinement for inability to post money bail would constitute imposition of an excessive restraint...

20 Pugh, 572 F.2d at 1058 (5th Cir. 1978).¹⁰ Indeed, "[t]he incarceration of those who cannot 21 [afford a cash payment], without meaningful consideration of other possible alternatives, 22 infringes on both due process and equal protection requirements." Id. at 1057;¹¹ see also

23 ¹⁰ Rainwater further explained that it refused to require a priority to be given in all cases – including those of the 24 non-indigent – to non-monetary conditions of release. The court noted that, at least for wealthier people, some might 25 actually prefer monetary bail over release with certain other conditions, and that the court would not invalidate a state Rule that allowed for those other conditions in appropriate cases. Pugh v. Rainwater, 572 F.2d 1053, 1057 (5th Cir. 1978).

26 ¹¹ Four circuit judges dissented in Rainwater. Although the agreed with the constitutional principles announced by 27 the majority that the Constitution forbids jailing the poor when they cannot afford monetary bail, they were 28 concerned about the majority's faith in the Florida courts not to apply the new state Rule in unconstitutional ways to detain the indigent. Pugh v. Rainwater, 572 F.2d 1053, 1067 (5th Cir. 1978) ("I cannot escape the conclusion that the majority has chosen too frail a vessel for such a ponderous cargo of human rights.") (Simpson, J., dissenting).

1 Williams v. Farrior, 626 F.Supp. 983, 985 (S.D. Miss. 1986) (“For the purposes of the 2 Fourteenth Amendment’s Equal Protection Clause, it is clear that a bail system which allows 3 only monetary bail and does not provide for any meaningful consideration of other possible
4 alternatives for indigent pretrial detainees infringes on both equal protection and due process 5 requirements”).

6 The U.S. Justice Department recently endorsed this view, asserting that “[i]ncarcerating 7 individuals solely because of their inability to pay for their release, whether through the 8 payment of fines, fees, or a cash bond, violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth 9 Amendment.” Jones v. City of Clanton, 2015 WL 5387219, at *4 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 14, 2015); 10 see also Varden v. City of Clanton, Civ. No. 15–34, Docket. No. 26 at 1 (M.D. Ala. Feb. 13, 11 2015). The Justice Department reasoned that a secured money bail schedule, like the one 12 utilized in Clark County, “do[es] not account for individual circumstances of the accused” and 13 it “essentially mandate[s] pretrial detention for anyone who is too poor to pay the 14 predetermined fee.” Jones, 2015 WL 5387219, at *9.

15 Accordingly, several federal district courts have held that state laws setting a particular 16 monetary bail amount without individualized considerations of indigency violate the Due 17 Process Clause. See, e.g., Rodriguez v. Providence Cmty. Corr., Inc., 155 F.Supp.3d 758, 767-18 70 and n. 10 (M.D. Tenn. 2015) (granting class-wide preliminary injunction enjoining state 19 policy requiring monetary payment for probations to obtain release pending a revocation 20 hearing “without an inquiry into the individual’s ability to pay the bond and whether alternative 21 methods of ensuring attendance at revocation hearings would be adequate”); Williams v.
22 Farrior, 626 F.Supp. 983, 985 (S.D. Miss. 1986) (“[I]t is clear that a bail system which allows 23 only monetary bail and does not provide for any meaningful consideration of other possible
24 alternatives for indigent pretrial detainees infringes on both equal protection and due process
25 requirements.”); Buffin v. City and Co. of San Francisco, No. 15-CV-04959-YGR, 2018 WL
26 424362 at *7 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 16, 2018); cf. Abdi v. Nielson, No. 1:17-CV-0721 EAW, 2018
27 WL 798747, at *4 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 9, 2018).

These decisions make clear that requiring money bail as a release condition in an amount impossible for the defendant to pay is equivalent to a detention order, “which is only appropriate when the state shows and the court finds that no condition or combination of conditions of release could satisfy the purposes of bail, to assure the defendant’s appearance at trial or hearing and the safety of the public.” Weatherspoon v. Oldham, 2018 WL 1053548, at *6 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 26, 2018) (additional citations omitted). Thus, in order to withstand constitutional scrutiny, unattainable money bail settings must be preceded by a hearing at which the court determines the least restrictive means of ameliorating an accused’s risk of flight and danger to the community. Absent such a determination, an unattainable release condition – such as an unattainable bail setting – operates as a de facto detention order that discriminates on the basis of wealth. Weatherspoon v. Oldham, 2018 WL 1053548, at *6 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 26, 2018). This violates equal protection and due process guarantees.

ARGUMENT

I. After the Grand Jury Returned a True Bill, the District Court Arbitrarily set Bail at $250,000 without any hearing, without Mr. Frye's presence, or his counsel's presence or input.

A. The Court's Decision to Preventatively Detain Mr. Frye Pretrial without a Full, Adversarial Hearing Violated Mr. Frye's Due Process Rights

In order to deprive a presumptively innocent person of her physical liberty, due process requires that the State demonstrate 1) by “clear and convincing evidence” at a “full-blown adversarial hearing” that the defendant presents an “identified and articulable threat” to the community or presents a risk of flight¹² and 2) no conditions or combination of conditions alternative to detention could reasonably mitigate that danger based on an individualized consideration of defendant’s unique circumstances.¹³ U.S. v. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739, 750-51 (1987) (emphasis added); see also Weatherspoon v. Oldham, 2018 WL 1053548, at *14-15, *17

¹³ This protection is mandated by the constitutional right to Substantive Due Process. Id. at 746.

1 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 26, 2018). A state court procedure that does not require as much violates due 2 process. See, e.g., Rodriguez v. Providence Cmty. Corr., Inc., 155 F.Supp.3d 758, 767-70 and n.
3 10 (M.D. Tenn. 2015); Jones v. City of Clanton, No. 215CV34-MHT, 2015 WL 5387219, at *2
4 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 14, 2015) (holding that the “use of a secured bail schedule to detain a person . .
5 . without an individualized hearing regarding the person’s indigence and the need for bail or 6 alternatives to bail, violates the Due Process Clause”); Simpson v. Miller, 387 P.3d 1270, 1276
7 (Ariz. 2017) (“[I]t is clear from Salerno and other decisions that the constitutionality of a pretrial
8 detention scheme turns on whether particular procedures satisfy substantive due process
9 standards”); see also Lopez-Valenzuela v. Arpaio, 770 F.3d 772, 781 (9th Cir. 2014) (en banc)
10 (applying strict scrutiny to strike down an Arizona law that required detention after arrest 11 without individualized consideration of an arrestee’s circumstances); ODonnell, 251 F.Supp.3d 12 1052; Williams v. Farrior, 626 F.Supp. 983, 986 (S.D. Miss. 1986) (holding that a state’s pretrial 13 detention scheme must meet “strict judicial scrutiny” because of the fundamental rights at issue).

14 As a result, due process mandates that the Court makes an individualized determination 15 whether preventative detention is the least restrictive means of assuring community safety and 16 ensuring the accused’s return to court. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739. This did not happen in this case.
17 Here, the Judge issued a warrant setting bail at $250,000 without any hearing whatsoever, 18 without input from Mr. Frye and/or his counsel. In doing so, the Court defaulted to detaining Mr.
19 Frye without a “full-blown adversarial hearing,” without “clear and convincing evidence” that 20 the defendant presents an “identified and articulable threat” to the community or presents a risk 21 of flight, and without a request from the State for preventive detention. Instead, the magistrate 22 sua sponte ruled that detention was appropriate. As a result, the Court’s detention order at the 23 violates due process. The detention order should be vacated and Mr. Frye should be released 24 with $75,000 bond.

1 B. The Court's Setting of Unattainable Bail Does Not Alleviate the Due Process
2 Violation

3 An order setting unattainable conditions of release is equivalent to an order of detention.
4 U.S. v. Mantecon-Zayas, 949 F.2d 548, 550 (1st Cir. 1991); U.S. v. Leathers, 412 F.2d 169, 171
5 (D.C. Cir. 1969) (“[T]he setting of bond unreachable because of its amount would be tantamount 6 to setting no conditions at all.”); ODonnell v. Harris County, 251 F.Supp.3d 1052, 1143-44 (S.D.
7 Tex. Apr. 28, 2017) (holding that secured money bail set in an amount that an arrestee cannot 8 afford is constitutionally equivalent to an order of detention); State v. Brown, 338 P.3d 1276
9 (N.M. 2014). Thus, it must be narrowly tailored in order to survive heightened constitutional 10 scrutiny. See Brown, 338 P.3d at 1292 (“Intentionally setting bail so high as to be unattainable is 11 simply a less honest method of unlawfully denying bail altogether . . . If a defendant should be 12 detained pending trial . . . , then that defendant should not be permitted any bail at all. Otherwise 13 the defendant is entitled to release on bail, and excessive bail cannot be required.”).

14 To set bail in an amount that is unattainable, a court must find, on the record, by “clear 15 and convincing evidence” after a “full-blown adversarial hearing” that 1) the defendant presents 16 an “identified and articulable threat” to the community or presents a risk of flight and 2) no 17 conditions or combination of conditions alternative to detention could reasonably mitigate that 18 danger based on an individualized consideration of defendant’s unique circumstances. U.S. v.
19 Salerno, 481 U.S. 739, 750-51 (1987) (emphasis added) (requiring that a magistrate setting bail 20 in an unattainable amount for a defendant must make an individualized determination whether 21 bail is the least restrictive means of assuring community safety and ensuring the accused’s return 22 to court); ODonnell, 251 F.Supp.3d at 1143-44; Jones v. City of Clanton, No. 215CV34-MHT, 23 2015 WL 5387219, at *2 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 14, 2015) (holding that the “use of a secured bail 24 schedule to detain a person . . . without an individualized hearing regarding the person’s 25 indigence and the need for bail or alternatives to bail, violates the Due Process Clause”); Carlisle 26 v. Desoto County, Mississippi, 2010 WL 3894114, at *5 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 30, 2010) (holding 27 that because a “compelling state interest” was required for pretrial detention, the plaintiff’s rights 28 were violated if he was jailed without consideration of non-financial alternatives).

1 This did not happen in this case. As discussed above, the reviewing Judge set bail after 2 the Grand Jury returned a True Bill when neither Mr. Frye nor his counsel was present. In doing 3 so, the lower court defaulted to detaining Mr. Frye on unattainable bail without a “full-blown 4 adversarial hearing,” without “clear and convincing evidence” that the defendant presents an 5 “identified and articulable threat” to the community or presents a risk of flight, and without a 6 request from the State for preventive detention. As a result, the Court’s bail setting at the violates 7 due process. The unattainable bail setting amounts to a detention order. It should be vacated and 8 Mr. Frye should be released on a $75,000 bond.

9 C. The Setting of Unattainable Bail Resulting in Detention Violates the Equal 10 Protection Clause

11 In the context of bail, the Equal Protection Clause prohibits the pretrial detention of 12 defendants solely because of their inability to afford bail. Lopez-Valenzuela v. Arpaio, 770 F.3d 13 772, 781 (9th Cir. 2014) (en banc) (applying strict scrutiny to strike down an Arizona law that 14 required detention after arrest without individualized consideration of an arrestee’s 15 circumstances); Pugh v. Rainwater, 572 F.2d at 1058 (5th Cir. 1978) (holding that “pretrial 16 confinement for inability to post money bail” for a defendant “whose appearance at trial could 17 reasonably be assured by one of the alternate forms of release . . . would constitute imposition of 18 an excessive restraint . . .”); Weatherspoon v. Oldham, 2018 WL 1053548, at *6 (W.D. Tenn.
19 Feb. 26, 2018); ODonnell v. Harris County, 251 F.Supp.3d 1052 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 28, 2017); 20 Jones, 2015 WL 5387219, at *4; Carlisle v. Desoto County, Mississippi, 2010 WL 3894114, at 21 *5 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 30, 2010) (holding that because a “compelling state interest” was required 22 for pretrial detention, the plaintiff’s rights were violated if he was jailed without consideration of 23 non-financial alternatives).

24 These decisions make clear that requiring money bail as a release condition in an 25 amount impossible for the defendant to pay is equivalent to a detention order, “which is only 26 appropriate when the state shows and the court finds that no condition or combination of 27 conditions of release could satisfy the purposes of bail, to assure the defendant’s appearance at 28

1 trial or hearing and the safety of the public.”¹⁴ Weatherspoon v. Oldham, 2018 WL 1053548, at 2 *6 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 26, 2018) (additional citations omitted). Thus, in order to withstand 3 constitutional scrutiny, unattainable money bail settings must be preceded by a hearing at 4 which the court determines the least restrictive means of ameliorating an accused’s risk of 5 flight and danger to the community. Absent such a determination, an unattainable release 6 condition – such as an unattainable bail setting – operates as a de facto detention order that 7 discriminates on the basis of wealth. Weatherspoon v. Oldham, 2018 WL 1053548, at *6 (W.D.
8 Tenn. Feb. 26, 2018). This violates equal protection and due process guarantees.

9 D. The Court Set a Bail Amount in Violation of Nevada Law

10 The Nevada Constitution mandates that all defendants “shall be bailable by sufficient 11 sureties” and that bail shall not be “excessive”. Nev. Const. Art. 1 §§ 6-7. The constitutional 12 right to bail is similarly codified in Nevada statute, which requires that “a person arrested for an 13 offense other than murder of the first degree must be admitted to bail.” NRS 178.484(1). If the 14 reviewing court determines that bail is appropriate, the court must set bail “in an amount which .
15 . . will reasonably ensure the appearance of the defendant and the safety of other persons and of 16 the community.” NRS 178.498.

17 In making this determination, the Court must consider: “(1) the nature and circumstances 18 of the offense charged; (2) the financial ability of the defendant to give bail; (3) the character of 19 the defendant; and (4) the factors listed in NRS 178.4853.” NRS 178.498. Significantly, an 20 accused’s ability to give bail must be part of the bail analysis. See Stack v. Boyle, 342 U.S. 1, 4-21 5 (1951) (stating “Bail set at a figure higher than an amount reasonably calculated to fulfill [its] 22 purpose is ‘excessive’ under the Eighth Amendment”); U.S. v. Polouzzi, 697 F. Supp. 2d 381, 23 390 (E.D.N.Y. 2010) (“Bail conditions are unconstitutionally excessive if they impose restraints 24 that are more than necessary to achieve the government’s interest [in] preventing risk of flight
25 and danger to society...”). The U.S. Justice Department has declared that “[i]ncarcerating

26 ¹⁴ The U.S. Supreme Court has also held that release conditions that exceed a purported threat posed by a particular 27 defendant violate the “excessive bail” clause of the Eighth Amendment. Salerno, 481 U.S. at 754; see also U.S.
28 Const. amend. VIII; Nev. Const. Art. 1 § 6-7; NRS 178.484(1) (stating “a person arrested for an offense other than murder of the first degree must be admitted to bail”).

1 individuals solely because of their inability to pay for their release, whether through the payment
2 of fines, fees, or a cash bond, violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth 3 Amendment.”¹⁵ Jones v. City of Clanton, 2015 WL 5387219 at 4 (M.D. Ala. Sep. 14, 2015); see 4 also Varden v. City of Clanton, Civ. No. 15–34, Dckt. No. 26 at 1 (M.D. Ala. Feb. 13, 2015).
5 The Justice Department reasoned that a secured money bail schedule, like the one utilized in 6 Clark County, “do[es] not account for individual circumstances of the accused” and it 7 “essentially mandate[s] pretrial detention for anyone who is too poor to pay the predetermined 8 fee.” Jones, 2015 WL 5387219 at 9. As a result, the Justice Department concluded that setting a 9 bail without regard to the detainee’s financial ability to pay “amounts to mandating pretrial 10 detention only for the indigent.” Id.

11 In this instance, the Court set bail without the presence of Mr. Frye nor his counsel. As a 12 result, the Court had no information before it to set a bail amount other than the charges found by 13 the Grand Jury. This is the definition of utilizing a bail schedule: setting bail solely based on a 14 criminal charge in a generic amount, not individualized to the defendant or the case. There is no 15 association between a particular charge and a blanket “schedule” of money that would guarantee 16 appearance at court or deter future criminal activity. These concerns can only be addressed on an 17 individualized basis. Accordingly, while “utilization of a master bond schedule provides speedy 18 and convenient release for those who have no difficulty in meeting its requirements, [the] 19 incarceration of those who cannot, without meaningful consideration of other possible 20 alternatives, infringes on both due process and equal protection requirements.” Pugh v.
21 Rainwater, 572 F.2d 1053, 1057 (5th Cir. 1978) (en banc).

22 Courts must tailor bail to a detainee’s financial resources, setting bail only as high as 23 necessary to reasonably assure the detainee’s return to court. The amount that would provide a 24 meaningful incentive to return to court differs for someone who lives on $600 a month and

25 ¹⁵ The following year, the Justice Department issued a “Dear Colleague Letter” advising state and local 26 courts that due process and equal protection principles forbid using “bail or bond practices that cause 27 indigent Detainees to remain incarcerated solely because they cannot afford to pay for their release.” 28 Letter from Vanita Gupta to Colleagues at 2 (Mar. 14, 2016), available at <https://www.justice.gov/crt/file/832461/download>.

1 someone who lives on $6,000 a month. Bail is excessive and, therefore, unlawful when not 2 adjusted to a pretrial detainee's financial circumstances and not set at the minimum amount 3 needed to ensure return to court. Stack, 342 U.S. at 4-5 (bail exceeding that necessary to achieve
4 its purpose violates Eighth Amendment); see also, Salerno, 481 U.S. at 754 -55 (affirming Stack 5 and holding that "[w]hen the Government has admitted that its only interest is in preventing 6 flight, bail must be set by a court at a sum designed to ensure that goal, and no more"). Thus, 7 when bail is set without considering a detainee's character and financial means the Court violates 8 the accused's constitutional and statutory rights. In addition, in setting a standard bail, the 9 magistrate fails to consider "the financial ability of the defendant to give bail" and "the character 10 of the defendant" violates NRS 178.498.¹⁶

11 Here, the court set an unattainable bail amount without considering Mr. Frye's ability to 12 pay that bail in violation of Nevada statute and U.S. Constitutional law. Mr. Frye's family has 13 been unable to scrape together the money necessary to give a bondsman to secure his release. His 14 family could, however, get together enough money for a bondsman to post a $75,000 bond. As 15 such Mr. Frye is respectfully requesting this Court order Mr. Frye released on a $75,000 bond.

16 E. This Court Must Vacate the Instant Detention Order and Release Aaron Frye 17 With Conditions Minimally Required to Protect the Community and Ensure His Return to 18 Court

19 Aaron Frye's current detention order is unlawful. The State has not established, and no 20 court has found, that preventative detention is the least restrictive means of assuring Aaron 21 Frye's return to court and protecting the community. Instead, Aaron Frye is being detained 22 under a random bail number that may relate to the instant charges, but not Aaron Frye. There 23 was no hearing held where Mr. Frye or his counsel were present and the Court did not consider 24

25 ¹⁶ Pretrial detainees should not remain in custody simply because they are poor. Research indicates that 26 imposing money bail does not improve the chances that a Detainee will return to court, nor does it protect 27 the public because many high-risk Detainees have access to money and can post bond. Instead, it serves 28 only to treat differently those who can and cannot access money. Incarceration can disrupt the positive factors in the Detainee's life and lead to negative collateral consequences, including job loss, loss of residence, inability to care for children, and disintegration of other positive social relationships.

1 Consequently, while Aaron Frye cannot make that bail, a similarly situated wealthy person
2 could. Thus, under the authority set forth above, Aaron Frye's detention order violates his due 3 process, equal protection, and excessive bail guarantees. As such, this Court must vacate the 4 current detention order and release Aaron Frye from custody on a $75,000 bond.

5 Mr. Frye has ties to this community including his cousins and some friends.
6 Additionally, he has a plan to establish a stable residence here and obtain employment here.
7 Moreover, his family can and is willing to scrape together enough money to post a $75,000
8 bond, Mr. Frye respectfully requests this Court release Mr. Frye with a condition that he post 9 $75,000 bond.

10 CONCLUSION

11 Based upon the foregoing, Aaron Frye, respectfully requests that this Honorable Court 12 vacate the current detention order and release him with attainable release conditions unless this 13 court concludes, in writing, after an adversarial hearing, that the State established clear and 14 convincing evidence that pretrial detention is the least restrictive means of assuring Aaron Frye's 15 return to court and ensuring community safety.

DEPT NO: XXX

STATE'S OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO
RELEASE DEFENDANT FROM CUSTODY

DATE OF HEARING: August 2, 2018
TIME OF HEARING: 8:30 A.M.

COMES NOW, the State of Nevada, by STEVEN B. WOLFSON, Clark County District Attorney, through NIMA AFSHAR, Deputy District Attorney, and hereby submits the attached Points and Authorities in Opposition to Defendant's Motion to Vacate Detention Order and Release Defendant from Custody.

This opposition is made and based upon all the papers and pleadings on file herein, the attached points and authorities in support hereof, and oral argument at the time of hearing, if deemed necessary by this Honorable Court.

1 POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

2 STATEMENT OF THE CASE

3 On April 16, 2018, the State filed a Criminal Complaint charging Defendant Aaron 4 Frye ("Defendant") with five counts including Robbery with Use of a Deadly Weapon and 5 Burglary while in Possession of a Firearm. Bail was set at $40,000 for counts 1-4 and $20,000
6 for count 5. On April 17, 2018, Defendant was arraigned in Justice Court and his preliminary 7 hearing was scheduled for May 1, 2018. On the same day, Defendant and the State each made 8 motions for bail – Defendant moved that monetary bail be set at $50,000, and the State that it 9 be set at $250,000. Following argument, the State's motion was granted and total bail was 10 reset at $250,000 for all counts.¹ See Exhibit 1. On May 1, 2018, the Preliminary Hearing was 11 continued at defense counsel's request to May 15, 2015.

12 Prior to the reset Preliminary Hearing, the State served Marcum notice and obtained an 13 Indictment against Defendant in District Court. The Indictment charged Defendant with: 14 Count 1 – BURGLARY WHILE IN POSSESSION OF A FIREARM (Category B Felony - 15 NRS 205.060 - NOC 50426); Counts 2-5 – ROBBERY WITH USE OF A DEADLY 16 WEAPON (Category B Felony - NRS 200.380, 193.165 - NOC 50138); Count 6 – 17 CARRYING CONCEALED FIREARM OR OTHER DEADLY WEAPON (Category C 18 Felony - NRS 202.350 (1)(d)(3) - NOC 51459); and Count 7 – OWNERSHIP OR 19 POSSESSION OF FIREARM BY PROHIBITED PERSON (Category B Felony - NRS 20 202.360 - NOC 51460).

21 Defendant was arraigned on the Indictment on May 17, 2018, at which time Defendant 22 invoked his right to a trial within 60 days. The Court stated that counsel had 21 days from the 23 filing of the transcripts or Defendant's arraignment (whichever occurred last) to file any 24 Pretrial Petition. The State reserved all procedural objections to the Court's ruling.

25 Transcripts of the grand jury proceedings were filed on May 22, 2018. Thus, based 26 upon the Court's ruling, Defendant's deadline for filing the Writ would have been June 12,

27 ¹ Contrary to Defendant's claim that the bail amount of $250,000 was set without the presence of Defendant, the $250,000 28 bail was first set in open court at the Initial Arraignment in Justice Court following motions and argument by both parties, including Defendant. Defendant and counsel were present. This amount was then affirmed by the District Court following its review of the record after the grand jury returned a true bill.

1 2018. On June 12, 2018, Defendant filed a Motion to Extend Writ Deadline. The Motion was 2 granted. A Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus was filed on June 26, 2018. On July 10, 2018, 3 the State filed a Writ of Mandamus in the Nevada Supreme Court challenging the District 4 Court's decision to grant the Motion to Extend Writ Deadline. Argument on the Petition for 5 Writ of Habeas Corpus is set for October 23, 2018. Trial is set to begin on December 3, 2018.

6 On July 18, 2018, Defendant filed the instant Motion to Vacate Detention Order and 7 Release the Defendant from Custody ("Motion"). The State responds herein.

8 STATEMENT OF FACTS

9 On April 11, 2018, at approximately 1659 hours, Defenant entered the Clark County 10 Credit Union located at 9311 W. Sunset LV, NV. He approached the counter and made contact 11 with employee Roland Miguel. Defendant pulled out a large frame semi-auto handgun from 12 the right side of his waistband, pointed it at Miguel and stated "give me your fifties and 13 hundreds." Miguel tried to explain that he didn't have anything. Defendant then moved onto 14 Rochelle Dumlao and Mandy-Lynn Suyat, who were working their own windows. Defendant 15 was repeatedly told that they didn't have anything. As Defendant was demanding money from 16 the employees, Maryann Valdez returned from the vault where she had been completing tasks 17 necessary to close the business. Maryann instructed one of her female co-workers to give 18 Defendant the money. At that point, Defendant went to each of the four (4) tellers and obtained 19 $200 in bait money (currency whose numbers were previously recorded by the bank). When 20 Valdez handed Defendant her money, she also handed him a bank bag which contained several 21 $1 coins.

22 Det. T. Weirauch P # 7465 reviewed stills from the banks surveillance and observed 23 that the suspect was a black male adult, approximately 5'7 - 5'9 with a medium build. The 24 suspect was wearing a white button-up short sleeve shirt, black pants, black shoes with white 25 around the soles, and a black Arizona Cardinals hat with a red bill. There was also a black 26 and gold sticker on the front part of the bill. The suspect was armed with a large frame semi-27 auto handgun that he had concealed in his right waistband.
28

1 On April 12, 2018, additional video surveillance was recovered and showed the suspect 2 arriving and leaving in a Yellow Camaro with California plates 8AMX769.

3 Det. Pandullo P# 7884 researched the suspect's vehicle and learned that it was an 4 Enterprise Rental vehicle and obtained the following information that the vehicle was rented 5 by Defendant on March 8, 2018, at 11:33 a.m. from the location on West Sahara.

6 The vehicle rented was a 2018 Chevrolet Camaro, yellow in color bearing, California Plate 7 No. 8AMX769 and VIN No. 1G1FB1RS7J0139213.

8 A records check showed an Aaron Frye (DOB: 06/16/77), with an ID # 7019093—
9 Defendant. Physical descriptors were similar to the suspect's descriptors. When detectives 10 made a comparison of Defendant's photograph to the suspect in the surveillance from the 11 robbery, they noted that the appearances were also similar. Furthermore, a records check also 12 showed Defendant had a misdemeanor warrant out for his arrest.

13 Det. Pandullo prepared and showed a line up to victim Roland Miguel (Teller) on 14 04/12/2018 at 16:30 Hours. The victim picked out Defendant as the suspect with 100 percent 15 certainty.

16 Det. D. Jappe P # 9992 located the suspect vehicle on April 12, 2018, at 17:00 hours 17 unoccupied parked at 6500 Vegas Dr. Las Vegas, Nevada on the street. He was able to conduct 18 surveillance on the vehicle. He observed a male, later identified as Defendant, enter the 19 vehicle by using a key, apparently move some items around, and then exit the vehicle.
20 Defendant then got into a passenger seat of a 2002 Mercedes Benz. A vehicle stop was 21 conducted on this vehicle and Defendant was taken into custody.

22 Det. Pandullo was present when Defendant was taken into custody and knew that the 23 suspect had taken bait money. Det. Pandullo had a list of the serial numbers that were taken 24 and compared those serial numbers to the twenty-five (25) $20 bills that were located in 25 Defendant's wallet. All twenty-five (25) were on the list that of the ones that were missing.
26 These bills were photographed and impounded as evidence.

27 On April 12, 2018, Defendant was interviewed by Det. Weirauch at LVMPD 28 Headquarters. Prior to questioning, Det. Weirauch advised him of his Miranda rights and 1 Defendant indicated that he understood them. The interview was audio/video recorded. During 2 the interview Defendant stated he robbed the bank because he had gambled away most of his 3 money and that he needed the money to pay bills. He said he tried to find employment but 4 had lost his identification and was unable to find work. He said he used a real gun, but does 5 not know where that gun is now. He also said he was sorry for what he did.

6 During follow-up investigation, the suspect vehicle was searched. During the search, 7 detectives located $1 coins in the vehicle. Those coins matched those taken during the 8 robbery. Defendant was booked into the Clark County Detention Center and charged with 9 various crimes related to the robbery.

11 I. CLARK COUNTY AND NEVADA STATUTES DO NOT VIOLATE DUE 12 PROCESS

13 Defendant argues that Clark County and Nevada statutes somehow violate adequate 14 due process. In particular, he argues that due process “requires a hearing before a neutral fact-15 finder and an opportunity for the accused to be heard ‘at a meaningful time and in a meaningful 16 manner.’” Motion at 4. As discussed below, this claim is without merit.

17 Defendant relies on Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319 (1976), to support this apparent 18 due process right for arrested persons. See Motion at 7. Mathews, however, is a Supreme Court 19 opinion dealing with the administration of Social Security benefits. See generally id.; see id.
20 at 349, 96 S. Ct. at 910 (“We conclude that an evidentiary hearing is not required prior to the 21 termination of disability benefits and that the present administrative procedures fully comport 22 with due process.”). Nothing about the facts of Mathews or even the law set forth in that case 23 gives any guidance or relevant law to the issue of pretrial detention as argued by Defendant.

24 Rather, pretrial detention was addressed by the United States Supreme Court in two 25 cases. First, in order to ensure that detentions resulting from warrantless arrests are justified, 26 a neutral magistrate must find probable cause promptly after arrest. Gerstein v. Pugh, 420 U.S.
27 103 (1975). Next, in County of Riverside v. McLaughlin, the “prompt” standard in Gerstein

1 was clarified to mean that a probable cause determination must be made within 48 hours absent 2 “a bona fide emergency or other extraordinary circumstance.” 500 U.S. 44, 57 (1991).

3 That Defendant cites the inapplicable Mathews is puzzling given that Gerstein and 4 McLaughlin, and not Mathews, form the backbone of what due process must be afforded to 5 arrestees. Gerstein is the seminal case on the Constitutional requirement that a neutral 6 magistrate must determine that probable cause exists promptly after an arrest. Contrary to 7 what Defendant would have this Court believe, the Gerstein Court specifically held that the 8 “Constitution does not require an adversary determination of probable cause.” Id. at 120.
9 Specifically, the Court’s holding completely supports the practice of a judicial officers making 10 a 48-hour probable cause determination based on a sworn police report and absent from any 11 of the parties involved:

12 [A]dversary safeguards are not essential for the probable cause 13 determination required by the Fourth Amendment. The sole issue is 14 whether there is probable cause for detaining the arrested person pending 15 further proceedings. This issue can be determined reliably without an 16 adversary hearing. The standard is the same as that for arrest. That 17 standard - - probable cause to believe the suspect has committed a crime – traditionally has been decided by a magistrate in a nonadversary proceeding on hearsay and written testimony, and the Court has approved these informal modes of proof.

18 Id.

19 The United States Supreme Court has not set a constitutional limit on detaining an 20 arrested person after a judicial officer has determined that probable cause exists. In Gerstein, 21 the matter before the Court was a Florida statute that allowed an arrested person to be held 22 without an initial probable cause determination for up to 30 days. The Court, in balancing the 23 State’s interest in protecting the public with the individual’s interest in liberty, held that the 24 statute was unconstitutional only because of the prolonged delay in verifying probable cause.
25 However, the Court did not deem the 30-day detention itself unconstitutional so long as the 26 arrested person received some form of a probable cause hearing – even if it was a judicial 27 officer’s simple review of the police report.

1 Furthermore, Gerstein specifically deferred to the individual States to decide how 2 judges should review probable cause – and what safeguards could take place after the initial 3 determination of probable cause. As the Court later clarified in McLaughlin, “the Fourth 4 Amendment requires every State to provide prompt determinations of probable cause, but...
5 the Constitution does not impose on the States a rigid procedural framework. Rather, 6 individual States may choose to comply in different ways.” Id. at 54.

7 Nevada sets forth a framework for processing criminal cases that complies with both 8 the Constitutional and even aspirational requirements set forth by the United States Supreme 9 Court. Traditionally, the standard used by the Clark County Justice Courts to initially detain 10 a person in custody was to conduct a 48 hour probable cause hearing for an arrested person 11 based solely on the submitted reports. Then, after the filing of charges, NRS 171.206 and 12 NRS 172.155 further require that the State establishes probable cause either by use of an 13 adversarial preliminary hearing or through a grand jury presentation.

14 II. 72-HOUR FIRST APPEARANCE BEFORE A MAGISTRATE IS A 15 STATUTORY CREATION PROTECTIVE OF A DEFENDANT’S POST- 16 ARREST RIGHTS

17 Defendant contends that there are insufficient procedural protections to safeguard a 18 defendant’s rights. However, the law governing an arrested person’s first appearance before a 19 magistrate is set forth in NRS 171.178, which reads, in relevant part:

- 20
- 21 1. [A] peace officer making an arrest under a warrant issued upon 22 a complaint or without a warrant shall take the arrested person 23 without unnecessary delay before the magistrate who issued 24 the warrant or the nearest available magistrate empowered to commit persons charged with offenses against the laws of the State of Nevada.

- 26
- 27 3. If an arrested person is not brought before a magistrate within 28 72 hours after arrest, excluding nonjudicial days, the magistrate:

- 1 (a) Shall give the prosecuting attorney an opportunity to 2 explain the circumstances leading to the delay; and 3 (b) May release the arrested person if he determines that the 4 person was not brought before a magistrate without 5 unnecessary delay.
6 4. When a person arrested without a warrant is brought before a 7 magistrate, a complaint must be filed forthwith.

9 The purpose of NRS 171.178 is to prevent "all the evil implications of secret 10 interrogation of persons accused of crime." Sheriff, Clark County v. Berman, 99 Nev. 102, 11 105-06 (1983). In other words, NRS 171.178 seeks to avert secret interrogations of those 12 accused of committing crimes. Moreover, the promptness under NRS 171.178 aids to inform 13 the accused of their privilege against self-incrimination. Brown v. Justice Court, 83 Nev. 272, 14 276 (1967).

15 Nevada Revised Statute 171.178(1) begins by calling for arrested persons to be brought 16 before a magistrate "without unnecessary delay." While "unnecessary delay" has generally 17 meant that the action should be performed with all the promptness possible under the 18 circumstances, NRS 171.178(3) specifies that "unnecessary delay" generally means more than 19 72 hours. Nevada Revised Statute 171.178(3)(a) then requires that if there is a delay in 20 bringing the person before a magistrate, then the prosecuting attorney must (a) explain the 21 circumstances of the delay, and (b) the judge may (discretionary language) release the person 22 if the person was not brought before a magistrate without necessary delay.

23 Thus, if the State fails to bring an arrested person before a magistrate within 72 hours, 24 the prosecution shall be given a chance to explain the reasons behind the delay. If, based upon 25 the judge's opinion the delay is unnecessary, the judge may release the arrested person.
26 Significantly, NRS 171.178 does not mandate that an arrested person be released from 27 custody even if the delay was in fact unnecessary. It simply gives the judge discretion to 28 release the person in, essentially, a totality of circumstances analysis.

29 The legislative history behind NRS 171.178 is consistent with the State's interpretation.
30 The 72-hour requirement was added in 1979 by Senate Bill 154 (hereinafter "SB 154"). SB

1 154 as introduced called for the appearance before a magistrate within 24 hours and the filing 2 of a complaint within 48 hours after the initial appearance. If either of the time limits were 3 not met, the bill required that the arrested person be released from custody. All of the language 4 regarding the mandatory release of those arrested was eliminated by the time that SB 154 was 5 passed by the legislature. The legislature ultimately decided that a judicial officer's discretion 6 would be preferable to the proposed bill that ignored the complexities and realities of the 7 criminal justice system best entertained case by case.

8 In its interpretation of NRS 171.178, the Nevada Attorney General reached the identical 9 conclusion that failure to meet the statute's permissive language does not equate to an 10 automatic release from custody. In a 1979 opinion issued by the Attorney General, the 11 Attorney General points to a number of factors militating against the notion that the State must 12 (1) bring the person before a magistrate and (2) file a complaint or risk having the person 13 released without any further judicial review. 1979 Nev. Op. Atty. Gen. 134. Persuaded by the 14 plain text that a magistrate "may" release the person, the Attorney General discredited the 15 notion that NRS 171.178 requires arrested persons to be released. According to the Attorney 16 General, "release is not mandatory under NRS 171.178 even if the delay was 'unnecessary.'" 17 Id. As the opinion explains, "there may be other factors present in the case that might militate 18 against release for delay, albeit unnecessary." Id.

19 The 72-hour requirement in NRS 171.178 appropriately places a check on the State's 20 ability to arrest and detain individuals without temporal limit. The statute forces a prompt 21 inquiry into the accused's custody status, and it allows the magistrate to make a decision based 22 upon the totality of the circumstances including but not limited to factors enumerated by the 23 prosecution, the crimes for which the person is being held, and any other information that the 24 magistrate wishes to consider. Ultimately, NRS 171.178 empowers the magistrate with wide 25 latitude to keep an arrested person in custody or grant release. Such a decision may be made 26 without violating the rights of the arrested or the statutory requirements set forth in NRS 27 171.178.

1 Mere delay between arrest and arraignment without some additional showing of 2 misconduct during the delay that causes prejudice to the accused does not deprive a court's 3 ability to proceed with the case. Berman v. State, 99 Nev. 102, 106 (1983). For instance, the 4 Nevada Supreme Court found no prejudice "where there has been no interrogation during the 5 delay, and the accused has not confessed or made incriminating statements." Hueber v. State, 6 103 Nev. 29, 32 (1987) (citing Sheriff v. Berman, 99 Nev. 102 (1983)).

7 In this case, a Complaint was filed within 72 hours, Defendant received a timely 72-8 hour hearing in accordance with the above described procedure, the justice court reviewed and 9 reset Defendant's release conditions at the first court date following argument by both parties, 10 and no untoward police conduct has been alleged; the present defense argument is broad and 11 per se systemic.

12 III. THE JUSTICE COURT HAS SUFFICIENT JURISDICTION TO SET BAIL 13 OR IMPOSE CONDITIONS OF RELEASE

14 "A justice court has the direct authority granted to it by statute and also has limited 15 inherent authority to act in a particular manner to carry out its authority granted by statute."
16 Grace v. Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct., 375 P.3d 1017, 1020 (2016) (quoting State v. Sargent, 122 Nev.
17 210, 214 (2006)). A well-known canon of statutory interpretation is that the plain language of 18 a statute is controlling unless there is ambiguity. Goudge v. State, 128 Nev. 548, 552 (2012).
19 Nevada Revised Statute 178.484(11) explicitly, and in plain language, grants the authority to 20 justice courts to set bail and conditions of release on persons who have been arrested for any 21 crime, and not only those who are formally charged at arraignment.

22 Before releasing a person arrested for any crime, the court *may 23 impose such reasonable conditions on the person as it deems 24 necessary to protect the health, safety and welfare of the 25 community and to ensure that the person will appear at all times and places ordered by the court, including, without limitation...

26 NRS 178.484(11)(emphasis added).

27 The statute unambiguously confers jurisdiction upon the courts to set bail and 28 conditions of release after arrest. Interestingly, subsection 10 of that same statute permits the

1 courts to require “a person arrested” to surrender his passport before release. NRS 2 178.484(10). The legislature could have used a different term than “a person arrested,” but 3 did not. The term “arrest” is defined as “a seizure or forcible restraint, especially by legal 4 authority” or “the taking or keeping of a person in custody by legal authority.” Black’s Law 5 Dictionary, 10th Ed. Therefore, justice courts have express authority over “a person arrested 6 for any crime” to set conditions of release to protect the community and to ensure the 7 defendant’s presence at future court dates.

8 In United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625 (2002), the U.S. Supreme Court held that 9 “defects in an indictment do not deprive a court of its power to adjudicate a case.” Id. at 630.
10 In doing so, the U.S. Supreme Court explicitly overruled its earlier decision in Ex Parte Bain, 11 121 U.S. 1 (1887), noting that Bain was “the progenitor of this view” that a defect in an 12 indictment was a “jurisdictional defect.” Cotton, 535 U.S. at 629. The Cotton Court explained 13 that “Bain’s elastic concept of jurisdiction is not what the term ‘jurisdiction’ means today, i.e., 14 ‘the courts’ statutory or constitutional power to adjudicate a case.” Id. at 630. According to 15 the Cotton Court, Bain’s concept of jurisdiction was the product of an era when the U.S.
16 Supreme Court’s power of review was limited to cases where the convicting court had no 17 jurisdiction, and that the “desire to correct obvious constitutional violations led to a somewhat 18 expansive notion of jurisdiction which was more a fiction than anything else.” Id. at 629-30.
19 Nevada has adopted Cotton’s definition of jurisdiction. See Gregory Leon Banks v. State, 20 2017 Nev. Unpub. LEXIS 445 (2017) (stating that “the term jurisdiction means the statutory 21 and constitutional power to adjudicate the case.”); see also Gutierrez v. State, 2017 Nev. App.
22 Unpub. LEXIS 24 (Nev. Ct. App. 2017) (citing Cotton, 535 U.S. at 630 (“The term jurisdiction 23 means the statutory and constitutional power to adjudicate the case.”)); see also Hager v.
24 Williams, 2017 Nev. App. Unpub. LEXIS 505 (Nev. Ct. App. 2017) (citing Cotton, 535 U.S.
25 at 630 (“The term jurisdiction means the statutory and constitutional power to adjudicate the 26 case.”)).

1 The Supreme Court did not mandate adversarial 48-hour hearings. Moreover, the 2 Nevada scheme provides for an additional and speedy preliminary hearing or grand jury 3 proceeding that adds to the procedural safeguards and due process afforded to arrestees.

6 CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY RIGHTS

7 Defendant argues that an adversarial hearing is required wherein the neutral magistrate 8 makes an individualized determination whether preventative detention is the least restrictive 9 means of assuring community safety and ensuring the defendant’s return to court. By citing to 10 catch phrases such as “preventative detention” and “least restrictive means,” Defendant hopes 11 to persuade this Court that those are fundamental rights of arrested individuals. This argument 12 by Defendant is entirely erroneous and belied by current case law.

13 A. Due process does not require an individualized, robust, adversarial hearing for 14 an initial bail setting

15 Defendant relies heavily upon U.S. v. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739 (1987), in arguing that he 16 was entitled to an adversarial hearing. The issue in Salerno was with regards to the Federal 17 Bail Reform Act of 1984, 18 U.S.C.S. § 3142. In that specific Act, federal courts could detain 18 an arrestee pending trial “if the Government demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence 19 after an adversary hearing that no release conditions will reasonably assure...the safety of any 20 other person and the community.” Id. at 741.

21 However, Salerno is inapposite. Salerno considered the constitutionality of the Federal 22 Bail Reform Act of 1984, but the State of Nevada is not governed by the Federal Bail Reform 23 Act. Moreover, the Court in Salerno expressed a number of sentiments that cut against 24 Defendant’s argument that the Court is obligated to order the least restrictive means when 25 considering a Defendant’s release. See id. at 748, 107 S. Ct. at 2102. In fact, Salerno 26 specifically held that due process is not violated simply because there is pretrial detention. Id.
27 (citing Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S. 520 (1979) (“the mere fact that a person is detained does not 28 inexorably lead to the conclusion that the government has imposed punishment.”). This is not

1 to say that the Salerno Court was unaware of the impact that pretrial detention can have on an 2 arrested individual. However in weighing the interests of the arrestee versus society, the Court
3 upheld that “the Government’s regulatory interest in community safety can, in appropriate 4 circumstances, outweigh an individual’s liberty interest.” Id. at 748, 107 S. Ct. at 2102.

5 Defendant’s motion states as law that due process requires that the issue of pretrial 6 confinement be resolved via a robust, “adversarial hearing.” This again is wrong. The Bail 7 Reform Act of 1984 provides for a statutorily created procedure that employs use of an 8 adversarial hearing. However, just because there is a particular federal statute, it is erroneous 9 and misleading to argue that due process and a specific federal statute are one and the same.

10 B. Individualized Bail Hearing

11 Defendant argues that an individualized determination is the only way to address the 12 issues of (1) future appearances of the defendant, and (2) deterrence of future crime. Defendant 13 is also concerned with a magistrate setting bail prior to Initial Arraignment, which is held the 14 next day. These arguments are without merit. In fact, the bail setting process at that stage 15 provides for the release of those who can make the bail before appearing in court while 16 awaiting further developments. And, in any event, individualized bail hearings are not 17 constitutionally-mandated. Instead, a defendant can request a reduction in bail at, or after, the 18 initial arraignment. Upon request, a defendant’s counsel may introduce factors supporting a 19 reduction in bail, or, alternatively, an own recognizance release. The State is permitted to rebut 20 this request by presenting additional factors. Ultimately, an individualized bail hearing prior 21 to setting bail is neither required nor mandatory because Nevada statutes provide defendants 22 with an opportunity to be heard on custody status at the first court appearance.

23 “[N]othing in the Eighth Amendment requires a particular type of ‘process’ or 24 examination,” before the defendant’s bond is set. Fields v. Henry County, 701 F.3d 180, 185 25 (6th Cir. 2012); see Galen v. County of Los Angeles, 477 F.3d 652, 662 (9th Cir. 2007) (stating 26 that the Court could not assume that the bail amount “was excessive simply because the state 27 failed to comply with a self-imposed procedural requirement, particularly where, as here, 28 Galen never requested a hearing before the Commissioner...”).

1 In Fields, the defendant turned himself in to the County Sherriff's Office upon learning 2 he had a warrant. Id. at 182. The warrant was for a misdemeanor domestic assault due to 3 allegations from Fields' wife that Fields choked and hit her, which left the victim with a bloody 4 lip, abrasions, and bruises. Id. Under Tennessee law, Fields had no right to post bail 5 immediately after his arrest, and the officers told him that he would be able to post bail the 6 next day. Id. The defendant complained that he should have had a "particularized examination" 7 before his bond was set, and that his bail amount was the same as other defendants facing the 8 same charge. Id. The Sixth Circuit determined this claim brought under the Eight Amendment 9 failed because the Amendment does not require a particular process.²

10 In Clark County, a magistrate sets bail prior to a defendant's first court appearance to 11 allow the defendant an opportunity to be released. If, for some reason, a defendant cannot or 12 does not post bail, the defendant has an opportunity, the next day, to have his or her counsel 13 make a request for an own recognizance release or bail reduction. Thus, an individualized 14 hearing prior to a defendant's initial arraignment is not required, because Defendant's issue 15 with bail being set by a magistrate judge is easily remedied at the 72 hour/initial arraignment 16 hearing.

17 Defendant claims that bail was set "without the presence of Mr. Frye nor his counsel."
18 Motion at 20. However, this claim is belied by the record. The $250,000 bail amount was first 19 set by the magistrate at the initial arraignment in the presence of both Defendant and his 20 counsel, and following argument from the parties. The District Court affirmed this bail amount 21 after reviewing the record and determining that it was appropriate. Therefore, this claim should 22 be denied.

26 ² The concurrence in Woods v. City of Michigan, 940 F.2d 275, 285 (7th Cir. 1991), stated that, whereas a defendant had 27 a right under state law to be released without bail, the defendant did not "have a federal constitutionally protected right to 28 a hearing before being deprived of that right." While due process would require an individualized hearing in certain circumstances—for example, when a defendant argues that his bail was set at an amount higher than necessary to assure appearance in court—such a high amount of bail was not at issue in Woods. Id. Furthermore, the concurrence concluded that "setting bail from a master bond schedule is not unconstitutional per se," and the issue of constitutionality is dependent on if the bail amount of the schedule was excessive for a particular defendant accused of a crime. Id.

C. Standardized Bail Schedules

Next, Defendant suggests that use of a bail schedule is unconstitutional. However, as the Sixth Circuit stated in Fields, “there is nothing inherently wrong with bond schedules.” Fields v. Henry County, Tenn., 701 F.3d 180, 184 (6th Cir. 2012); see Pugh v. Rainwater, 572 F.2d 1053, 1057 (5th Cir. 1978) (en banc). In Fields, as in this case, the defendant argued that the county’s use of a bond schedule was in violation of the Eighth Amendment. Id. at 183. The Sixth Circuit dismissed this argument, noting that “bond schedules are aimed at making sure that defendants who are accused of similar crimes receive similar bonds,” and these schedules are used to ensure the defendant’s appearance at future proceedings. Id. at 184; see, e.g., Stack v. Boyle, 342 U.S. 1, 5 (1951) (holding that one factor to determine if bail is excessive is when the defendant’s bail is “much higher than that usually imposed for offenses with like penalties”).

Moreover, the Sixth Circuit cited to Terrell v. City of El Paso, 481 F.Supp.2d 757 (W.D. Tex. 2007) where Terrell argued his bail of $1,000 was excessive because bail was set by a District Attorney using a bond schedule. Terrell at 766. Terrell further argued that a magistrate should have set his bail, but it was undisputed that the defendant could have waited until the next morning for the magistrate to make a determination. Id. The court completed “exhaustive research” and only found one case where a bond schedule was found to be unconstitutional, and that case was Ackies v. Purdy, 322 F.Supp. 38 (D.C.Fla. 1970). Id. However, this one case was not only outdated, as noticed by this court, but the problems with the bond schedule in that case had already been addressed since the opinion. Id. at 767. Therefore, the court determined the Ackies holding was anomalous, and ultimately held Terrell failed to show a constitutional violation. Id.

Defendant cites Pugh v. Rainwater for the proposition that an individualized determination is more appropriate to use than a bail schedule if a court wants to ensure the defendant’s appearance at future court dates and/or to deter future criminal activity. However, in Rainwater, the Fifth Circuit firmly stated that bail schedules infringe on Due Process and Equal Protection rights when there are no “meaningful consideration of other possible alternatives.” 572 F.2d 1053, 1057 (5th Cir. 1978). In this case, the Supreme Court of Florida

1 adopted a new rule that enumerated different forms of release that is under the definition of 2 bail. Id. at 1055. Included in this rule was:

- 3 (1) Personal recognizance of the defendant;
- 4 (2) Execution of an unsecured appearance bond in an amount specified by the judge;
- 5 (3) Placing the defendant in the custody of a designated person or organization agreeing to supervise him;
- 6 (4) Placing restrictions on the travel, association, or place of abode of the defendant during the period of release;
- 7 (5) Requiring the execution of a bail bond with sufficient solvent sureties, or the deposit of cash in lieu thereof; or
- 8 (6) Imposing any other condition deemed reasonably necessary to assure appearance as required, including a condition requiring that 9 the defendant return to custody after specified hours.

10 Id. at 1055.

11 The court held that detaining an indigent defendant merely because they cannot post 12 bail, and “whose appearance at trial could reasonably be assured by one of the alternate forms 13 of release,” creates a situation where bail is excessive. Id. at 1058. However, the rule in Florida 14 did not create this automatic result; instead, there were reasonable alternatives for a defendant 15 to have bail. Id. As the court found, the rule required “all relevant factors” to be considered 16 when making the determination as to which form of relief the defendant is granted. Id.
17 Therefore, the new rule was not unconstitutional. Id. at 1059.

18 Defendant also cites to Jones v. City of Clanton, No. 2:15cv34-MHT, 2015 U.S. Dist.
19 LEXIS 121879 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 14, 2015), but this case is distinguishable. In Jones, an 20 administrator for Christy Dawn Varden’s estate argued that the deceased defendant was jailed 21 due to her inability to afford the small amount of bail money, as required by the city’s bail 22 schedule. Id. at 1. The defendant had been arrested for four misdemeanors, and her bail was 23 set in accordance with a bail schedule that mandated $500 per misdemeanor arrest. Id. at 2.
24 The court stated that if a defendant was unable to pay, she had to wait until the next court date, 25 which court was held only on Tuesday afternoons, and there were not options for an unsecured 26 bond or own recognizance release. Id. at 2-3. In the defendant’s situation, she was arrested on 27 a Tuesday, after the scheduled court hearing, and had to remain in custody until the following 28 Tuesday. Id. at 3.

1 The city did release the defendant after learning about her lawsuit. Id. at 4. Since Jones' 2 lawsuit, the city changed their policy by (1) allowing for an unsecured bond for misdemeanors, 3 as long as the defendant does not have a warrant for failing to appear, (2) requiring a cash 4 bond in situations where there is a warrant, and (3) denying a defendant's release if the 5 defendant is a risk of danger. Id. at 4-5. The court acknowledged that this new policy was 6 constitutional. Id. at 8.

7 The instant case is distinguished from Jones. Unlike in Jones, where the city held court 8 hearings once a week, the Nevada Revised Statutes require a defendant to have an Initial 9 Arraignment within 72 hours of arrest. NRS 171.178. Even though a magistrate sets the 10 defendant's bail prior to this hearing, a defendant can request a reduction in bail the very next 11 day. Unlike in Jones, where there originally were no options for an unsecured bond or own 12 recognizance release, NRS 178.4851 provides alternatives to bail. Just like the new policy in 13 Jones, our state's statutes provide for reasonably alternatives for bail, and a defendant can 14 request a hearing on their bail at, or after, their first court appearance.³ Moreover, the policy 15 initially at work in Jones required that the city not deviate from the set bail amount in the 16 schedule – that deviation is allowed in Nevada where appropriate.

17 In Nevada, reasonable alternatives to bail exist in abundance, including an own 18 recognizance release, house arrest, two levels of electronic monitoring, and conditions listed 19 in NRS 178.484(11). The purpose of the bond schedule is to set bail for individuals facing 20 similar crimes. At the Initial Arraignment, counsel still retains the ability to make requests for 21 reasonable alternatives to posting a bond, including an own recognizance release or a reduction 22 in the bail amount. As stated by Jones v. City of Clanton and Pugh v. Rainwater, as long as

24 ³ Defendant also mentions concerns the Justice Department stated in a "Dear Colleague Letter." Letter from Vanita Gupta 25 to Colleagues (Mar. 14, 2016). Motion at 20. The overall concern of the Justice Department was court practices that 26 incarcerated indigent defendants because of their inability to pay fines and fees. Regarding bail, the letter stated, "courts 27 must not employ bail or bond practices that cause indigent defendants to remain incarcerated solely due to their inability 28 to afford their release..." Id. at 2. However, the letter did not advocate release of defendants based only on financial considerations, and without any consideration of safety to the community. In particular, the letter made clear in footnote 2 that, "nothing in this letter is intended to suggest that courts may not preventively detain a defendant to secure the safety of the public or appearance of the defendant." Id. at 2. Although Defendant was not preventatively detained in this case, this footnote indicates that other factors should be considered in reviewing release. In this case, as will be discussed in detail below, bail was appropriate to secure the safety of the public.

1 there are reasonable alternatives for a defendant's release, the use of a bail schedule of does 2 not infringe upon a defendant's constitutional rights. Accordingly, Clark County's use of a 3 Bail Schedule during an "Instant Bail Setting" does not violate a defendant's constitutional 4 rights.

5 V. BAIL IS NOT "EXCESSIVE" SIMPLY BECAUSE A DEFENDANT
6 CANNOT AFFORD TO PAY

7 Defendant argues that bail in this case is excessive because of his financial ability.
8 However, federal case law, upon which Defendant so heavily relies, makes clear that bail is 9 not "excessive" merely because a defendant is unable to pay the set bail amount.

10 Particularly apposite in this case is Galen v. County of Los Angeles, 477 F.3d 652 (9th 11 Cir. 2007). In Galen, the Ninth Circuit determined that Galen's bail was not excessive since 12 "the plain meaning of 'excessive bail' does not require that it be beyond one's means, only 13 that it be greater than necessary to achieve the purposes for which bail is imposed." Id. at 661.⁴
14 Police arrested Galen for violating California's domestic violence statute, and the defendant's 15 bail amount was $50,000; however, the Sergeant and Deputies at the Sheriff's station 16 discussed a request to have bail increased. Id. at 656. The Sergeant and Deputies supported 17 this increase based on the facts that the defendant was an attorney and potentially could cause 18 further harm to the victim. Id. Upon a request for an enhanced bail, the Bail Commissioner 19 increased bail to $1,000,000. Id. at 657. Later, Galen arranged for his bail to be secured and 20 filed a complaint about his enhanced bail. Id. at 657-59.

21 The district court stated, in support of the bail enhancement, that bail is deemed 22 "excessive" when it is set at an amount that is higher than necessary to achieve the State's 23 purposes. Id. at 661. Additionally, Galen argued his bail was excessive because the amount 24 was 2,000 percent higher than the set default amount. Id. at 662. The Court dismissed this 25 argument as well and determined that "excessiveness cannot be determined by a general 26

27 ⁴ See United States v. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739, 754 (1987); Jennings v. Abrams, 565 F. Supp. 137, 138 (S.D.N.Y. 1983) 28 ("excessiveness of bail is an objective finding to be made according to the objective criteria...[defendant's] means is not one of them.")

1 mathematical formula, but rather turns on the correlation between the state interests a judicial 2 officer seeks to protect and the nature and magnitude of the bail conditions imposed in a 3 particular case.” Id. Ultimately, the Ninth Circuit held that the defendant failed to prove his 4 enhanced bail was excessive, and therefore not valid in light of the circumstances of the case.
5 Id.

6 In White v. Wilson, the Ninth Circuit held that “the mere fact that petitioner may not 7 have been able to pay the bail does not make it excessive.” 399 F.2d 596, 598 (9th Cir. 1968).
8 The State charged the defendant with Assault with a Deadly Weapon with intent to commit 9 murder under Cal. Penal Code 217. Id. at 597. The defendant argued his bail was excessive 10 owing to an increase in bail from $3,150 to $8,150 upon the State’s motion. Id. at 597-98. The 11 Ninth Circuit held his bail was not excessive due to the defendant’s inability to pay. Id. at 598.
12 Rather, the bail increase was supported by the defendant’s prior record and the seriousness of 13 the charged offense. Id. Therefore, the support for increasing bail was reasonable, and not 14 excessive.

15 Similarly, in White v. United States, the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals determined 16 that “the purpose for bail cannot in all instances be served by only accommodating the 17 defendant’s pocketbook and his desire to be free pending possible conviction.” 330 F.2d 811, 18 814 (8th Cir. 1964). White argued that his bail, set at $5,000, was excessive under the 8th 19 Amendment because of his financial status and loss of freedom to prepare for his case. Id. The 20 Eighth Circuit held that the test to determine if bail is excessive is if bail is “set at a figure 21 higher than an amount reasonably calculated to ensure that the accused will stand trial and 22 submit to sentence if convicted.” Id. (citing Forest v. United States, 203 F.2d 83, 84 (8th Cir.
23 1953)). Based upon this test, the defendant’s ability to afford the posted bail was irrelevant; 24 therefore, bail was not excessive. Id.

25 Next, in United States v. Wright, the Fourth Circuit held that “primary purpose of bail 26 is to insure the presence of the accused at his trial.” 483 F.2d 1068, 1069 (4th Cir. 1973). See 27 Stack v. Boyle, 342 U.S. 1, 72 S. Ct. 1 (1951). In Wright, the defendant was charged with 28 importing and possessing sixty-six pounds of cocaine with the intent to distribute. Id. at 1068.

1 A district court judge set his bail at $250,000, and the defendant attempted to argue his 2 financial status was an essential issue in determining excessiveness. Id. at 1070. The Fourth 3 Circuit held that a trial court makes the determination about whether bail is excessive, and a 4 judicial officer must consider several factors including “the nature and circumstances of the 5 offense charged, the weight of the evidence against the accused, the accused's family ties, 6 employment, financial resources, character and mental condition, and his record of appearance 7 at past court proceedings.” Id. at 1069. Based upon the record, the lower court properly 8 weighed these factors when setting bail. Id. at 1069-70. In Wright, the amount of cocaine
9 seized had a value of $7,500,000. Id. at 1070. Furthermore, the defendant was a flight risk 10 based on the fact that he had recently traveled outside of the United States, and was from 11 Miami, Florida, a location that leads to an easy escape. Id. Finally, the district judge considered 12 the defendant’s marital status, three children, and lack of criminal history; however, these 13 factors did not outweigh the purpose of setting bail in the first place. Id. Accordingly, bail of 14 $250,000 was not excessive in Wright despite the defendant’s financial status, because the 15 overall purpose of bail is to set bail at an amount that would ensure the defendant’s presence 16 to stand trial. Id.

17 The Fifth Circuit has also held that “a bail setting is not constitutionally excessive 18 merely because a defendant is finically unable to satisfy the requirement.” United States v.
19 McConnell, 842 F.2d 105, 108; see also Pugh v. Rainwater, 572 F.2d 1053 (5th Cir. 1978). In 20 McConnell, the defendant faced charges for bank fraud and conspiracy to commit bank fraud 21 under 18 U.S.C. § 1344. Id. at 106. Initially, the federal magistrate ordered the defendant 22 detained before trial, but the district court set aside the order and entered a $750,000 surety 23 bond. Id. The defendant argued for a reduction in the amount to $250,000 due to the fact that 24 his assets were frozen, which meant he could not make bail at the set amount; the district judge 25 rejected this motion. Id. at 107. The trial court stated that bail was set to assure the presence 26 of the defendant and the Fifth Circuit affirmed this reasoning. Id. at 108. Primarily, the 27 defendant posed a flight risk based on his fugitive status at the time of the indictment, and he 28 surrendered himself in Houston after he arrived on a flight from Mexico. Id. at 106-8. The

1 defendant's argument would have required the court to find that bail is excessive based on a 2 consideration of the defendant's ability to post bail, and the court found this reasoning to be 3 inconsistent with state law. Id. at 108. Therefore, as long as the record states a reasonable basis 4 for setting bail at a certain amount, and this amount is not in excess of achieving the 5 government's purpose, bail is not excessive. Id. at 110.

6 Defendant repeatedly contends that bail must be set at an amount that a defendant can 7 afford, while ignoring the slew of federal case law holding that bail that is not in excess of 8 achieving the government's purpose is, by definition, not excessive. Defendant's conflation of 9 bail and preventative detention is based on the mistaken assumption that the only purpose of 10 bail is to allow the defendant release rather than to protect the defendant and the community, 11 and to secure the defendant's reappearance. Applying the logic that Defendant sets forth here 12 would result in income being the only determinative factor in setting bail, regardless of risk to 13 the community, risk to the defendant himself, or the likelihood of reappearance.

14 The cases presented above firmly demonstrate that bail is only excessive when it is set 15 at an amount that goes beyond the interests the State seeks to protect. Nevada has codified 16 those purposes: "ensure the appearance of the defendant and safety of other persons and of the 17 community." NRS 178.498. Bail is not meant to ensure a defendant's release at any cost—i.e., 18 if a defendant cannot afford bail, the role of the Court is not to then keep lowering bail with 19 no regard to the defendant's history or the facts of the case until it reaches an amount that a 20 defendant can afford. Rather, the purpose of bail and other release conditions is to secure a 21 defendant's reappearance and ensure the safety of the community. The Court must evaluate 22 the State's purposes and additional statutory factors to determine if bail is set at an amount 23 that goes beyond the State's interests. As long as this requirement is met, bail is not excessive.

24 VI. IN LIGHT OF THE STATUTORY FACTORS, DEFENDANT'S BAIL IS 25 REASONABLE

26 Defendant claims bail must be tailored to the defendant's financial means, but this 27 contention is directly contradictory to case law and statute. Bail must be set by a determination 28 based on all statutory factors. See NRS 178.498. The defendant's financial ability is one factor

1 among other statutory factors that must be appropriately weighed. The overall purpose of bail 2 in Nevada is to, "ensure the appearance of the defendant and the safety of other persons and 3 of the community." NRS 178.498. Bail is excessive when it is set at an amount that is higher 4 than necessary to achieve this purpose. See Stack v. Boyle, 342 U.S. 1, 72 S. Ct. 1 (1951). Bail 5 should not be set based solely on a defendant's financial means; instead, bail is set based on 6 our state's codified purposes with consideration given to statutory factors.

7 According to NRS 178.4851(1),

8 upon a showing of good cause, a court may release without bail 9 any person entitled to bail if it appears to the court that it can 10 impose conditions on the person that will adequately protect the 11 health, safety, and welfare of the community and ensure that the 12 person will appear at all times and places ordered by the court...

13 the court may impose such conditions as it deems necessary to 14 protect the health, safety and welfare of the community and to 15 ensure that the person will appear at all times and places ordered 16 by the court, including, without limitation, any condition set forth 17 in subsection 11 of NRS 178.484⁵.

18 Additionally, Nevada Revised Statute 178.498 provides as follows regarding bail:

19 If the defendant is admitted to bail, the bail must be set at an 20 amount which in the judgment of the magistrate will reasonably 21 ensure the appearance of the defendant and the safety of other 22 persons and of the community, having regard to:

- 23 1. The nature and circumstances of the offense charged;
- 24 2. The financial ability of the defendant to give bail;
- 25 3. The character of the defendant; and
- 26 4. The factors listed in NRS 178.4843.

27 In NRS 178.4843, the Nevada Legislature has set out ten (10) factors the court, at a 28 minimum, shall consider, in deciding "whether there is good cause to release a person without bail:"

1. The length of residence in the community;
2. The status and history of employment;
3. Relationships with the person's spouse and children, parents or other family members and with close friends;

⁵ "11. Before releasing a person arrested for any crime, the court may impose such reasonable conditions on the person as it deems necessary to protect the health, safety and welfare of the community and to ensure that the person will appear at all times and places ordered by the court, including, without limitation: (a) Requiring the person to remain in this State or a certain county within this State; (b) Prohibiting the person from contacting or attempting to contact a specific person or from causing or attempting to cause another person to contact that person on the person's behalf; (c) Prohibiting the person from entering a certain geographic area; or (d) Prohibiting the person from engaging in specific conduct that may be harmful to the person's own health, safety or welfare, or the health, safety or welfare of another person." NRS 178.484.

4. Reputation, character and mental condition;
5. Prior criminal record, including, without limitation, any record of appearing or failing to appear after release on bail or without bail;
6. The identity of responsible members of the community who would vouch for the reliability of the person;
7. The nature of the offense with which the person is charged, the apparent probability of conviction and the likely sentence, insofar as these factors relate to the risk of not appearing;
8. The nature and seriousness of the danger to the alleged victim, any other person or the community that would be posed by the person's release;
9. The likelihood of more criminal activity by the person after release; and
10. Any other factors concerning the person's ties to the community or bearing on the risk that the person may willfully fail to appear.

NRS 178.4853. Several of the factors listed in the statute are concerned with the defendant's future court appearances, and any potential risks that the defendant may choose to willfully not appear at court dates.

Common sense dictates, and courts have held, that the best indicator of future behavior is past behavior. See, e.g., United States v. Vasconcellos, 519 F. Supp. 2d 311, 317 (N.D.N.Y. 2007) (citing U.S. v. Barnett, No. 5:03-CR-243, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16253 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 17, 2003) ("past behavior best predicts future behavior and whether the court can rely on a defendant's good faith promises.")). If a defendant has failed to appear for a traffic hearing, for example, the defendant is not then more likely to return for an attempt murder charge. The Vasconcellos Court noted that there are possible conditions that could be imposed in order to reduce a defendant's flight and potential danger; however, if a defendant's past behavior indicates the community would not be safe, or the defendant presents a flight risk, then the potential conditions are not enough to afford the defendant's release. Id. Focusing on one of the two defendants in Vasoncellos, the Court found that defendant Wilson not only failed to comply with supervisory conditions, he also failed to appear at a court date, which resulted in a warrant. Id. at 318.⁶ Therefore, his past behavior indicated that he would be a flight risk and an endangerment to the community. Id. at 319; see also United States v. Smith, 647 Fed. Appx. 863, 866-67 (10th Cir. 2016) (holding that the defendant was a flight risk, and

1 the district court properly supported its finding when the court made the same conclusion); 2 United States v. Santos-Flores, 794 F.3d 1088, 1089, 1092 (9th Cir. 2015) (upholding the 3 lower court's detention order because the defendant was a flight risk due to factors including 4 "[defendant's] violation of the terms of his supervised release, his multiple unlawful entries 5 into the United States, his prior failure to appear when required in state court, his use and 6 possession of fraudulent identity documents..."); United States v. Arhebamen, 69 F.App'x 683, 7 683 (6th Cir. 2003) (affirming the lower courts' determinations that the defendant was a flight 8 risk based on his prior failure to appear); United States v. Sullivan, No. 93-1856, 1993 U.S.
9 App. LEXIS 24317, at 1, 5-8 (1st Cir. 1993) (holding that positive factors in favor of the 10 defendant's reappearance were outweighed by negative factors including two prior failures to 11 appear).

12 "The ultimate inquiry in each instance is what is necessary to reasonably assure 13 defendant's presence at trial." Pugh v. Rainwater, 572 F.2d 1053, 1057 (5th Cir. 1978).
14 Sometimes, what is necessary to reasonably assure a defendant's presence at trial is monetary 15 bail. In this case, an examination of Defendant's past behavior in light of the factor set forth 16 in NRS 178.4835 and NRS 178.484(11) indicate that a bail setting of $20,000 to protect the 17 community and secure Defendant's reappearance was appropriate.

18 In this case, Defendant provided no verified address to Pretrial Services. Exhibit 2, at 19 1. He has extensive ties out-of-state, having spent at least 17 years in California. See Exhibit 20 2, at 2. He has a two-year-old child in California. Motion at 3. Although Defendant claims that 21 the mother of his child will move to Las Vegas to be with him, she has not done so in the 22 nearly four months that have passed since Defendant's arrest. See Motion at 3. Defendant's 23 out-of-state ties are not limited to California; he also has immediate family in Texas. Motion 24 at 3. Defendant's brother lives in Texas, owns a business there, and has no plans to move to 25 Las Vegas. See Motion at 3 (noting that Defendant's brother is "considering" expanding his 26 business to the Las Vegas "area."). Additionally, Defendant has one prior failure to appear.
27 This is so even though he has two misdemeanor convictions and felony convictions that are 28 less serious than the charges in this case. If Defendant failed to appear on matters that were

1 much less serious than this, he is not then more likely to appear in a case in which four of the 2 seven charges require mandatory prison sentences and have a potential 30-year tail. See 3 Vasconcellos, 519 F. Supp. 2d at 317. Most tellingly, in 2013, Defendant was convicted of 4 Taking Vehicle without Owner's Consent in California. Defendant absconded to Nevada and, 5 on May 14, 2015, Defendant was arrested in Las Vegas on a fugitive warrant from California.
6 He was subsequently taken to California, where he was sentenced to four years in prison.
7 Defendant was admitted to parole, and his parole expired shortly before he committed the 8 crimes charged in this case.

9 The likelihood of more criminal activity was high. Before his arrest in this case, 10 Defendant accrued 10 prior felony convictions spanning 17 years. These felony convictions 11 include Robbery, Burglary, and firearms possession charges. The possibility of a prison 12 sentence should he be convicted of any of these crimes has not deterred Defendant from 13 repeatedly committing crimes. Additionally, Defendant has violated the conditions of parole 14 on multiple occasions even though he faced going back to prison if he did so.

15 Defendant's out-of-state ties, his absconsion to Nevada after conviction of his tenth 16 felony in California in 2013, that Defendant committed this crime after recently completing 17 parole in another case, and the significant nature of the charges in this case all indicate that 18 bail was appropriate to address the safety risk that Defendant poses to the community and to 19 secure his reappearance. See NRS 178.484(11)(b), (c).

20 Defendant's information was available to the Justice Court—Defendant's prior 21 convictions are listed on the Pretrial Risk Assessment, as is his prior failure to appear. The 22 court heard argument from both parties and considered bail motions from both parties before 23 resetting bail at the current amount at Defendant's first appearance in court. The Pretrial Risk 24 Assessment reflects both Defendant's extensive out-of-state ties and the danger he poses to 25 the community. Even a cursory examination of this record clearly demonstrates that means 26 less restrictive than the current bail would not have been effective in this case, and would not 27 have served to protect the community. Therefore, the Motion should be denied.

6 Aaron Frye, C331986.

7 MS. MERCER: Good morning, Your Honor.
8 I'm not sure where Ms. Leven went. She's coming right 9 now. Elizabeth Mercer for the State, and with me is a 10 Kelley Fore, K-E-L-L-E-Y, and then the last name, 11 F-O-R-E. She's being supervised by Tim Fattig, who is 12 the person signed off to supervise her, and she's 13 appearing pursuant to Rule 49.5.

14 THE COURT: Isn't that exciting?

15 MS. FORE: Yeah, I'm very excited. Thank 16 you.

17 THE COURT: Good deal. It's on today for 18 defendant's motion to vacate the detention order and 19 release the defendant from custody. What do you want 20 to argue?

21 MS. LEVEN: Your Honor, I did have an 22 opportunity to read the State's opposition, so I'd like 23 to start there. I'd just like to begin by pointing out 24 what the State has failed to articulate is, one, that 25 there are no conditions of release that -- or the State

1 has failed to allege that there's no way that Mr. Frye
2 could be released. What they are saying is that it 3 would be appropriate for him to get out of custody if 4 he can post a $250,000 bond. They have made no
5 representations as to why a $250,000 bond would better 6 protect the community than a $75,000 bond, which he 7 would be able to make. So if they are -- he is unable 8 to make the $250,000 bond, which we know because he's 9 still sitting in custody. But I don't understand, and 10 the State has failed to articulate, any different 11 purpose that would be accomplished by having the higher 12 bond other than to preventively detain him. And 13 they've conceded that they're not seeking preventative 14 detention because they've conceded that bail is 15 appropriate. That's the first thing I'd like to point 16 out.

17 The second thing that I'd like to point
18 out is that the State talks a lot about the proceedings 19 in Justice Court. This is a new case. The proceedings 20 in Justice Court were dismissed. This is here on a 21 Grand Jury indictment. The bail hearing was made after 22 the Grand Jury, without counsel present, without 23 Mr. Frye present, after the Grand Jury returned a true 24 bail.

25 We're asking for $75,000 in bond. We

1 understand the things the State has raised as concerns.
2 And we agree that he should be released with a bond; 3 however, it should be a bond that he is able to make.
4 That's why we're asking for $75,000. The bondsman who 5 posts that bond will just as surely supervise Mr. Frye 6 as if Mr. Frye posts a $250,000 bond.

7 In both cases we're talking about very 8 serious amounts of money. And so the difference as far 9 as protecting the community or assuring his return to 10 court is no better served by the bond that he cannot 11 make than it would be by a bond that he can make. So 12 we are requesting $75,000.

13 MS. MERCER: Your Honor, before she 14 argues, the bulk of the State's position, I just want 15 to point out, she keeps using this term "preventative 16 detention." This is not the federal system where 17 they're either detained or released to the streets. We 18 have a statute that addresses the concerns that the 19 Court is supposed to address, and it's the State's 20 position that the $250,000 is appropriate even if he 21 can't make it given the fact that he's a 10-time
22 convicted felon who came here from California to commit 23 an armed robbery at our banks. And I'm going to let 24 her address the additional issues.

25 MS. FORE: This matter has already been

1 seen. Bail was set in Justice Court prior to being 2 taken to Grand Jury and sent to District Court. On the 3 day the defendant was arraigned in Justice Court, his 4 preliminary hearing was scheduled. Both the defendant
5 and the State made motions for bail. Defendant asked 6 for $50,000 bail, but the Justice Court denied it and 7 set the bail at $250,000.

8 The fact that the defendant cannot afford 9 to pay bail does not make bail excessive. Case law in 10 the Ninth Circuit supports that excessive bail does not 11 require that it be beyond the means of the defendant, 12 but rather is determined on the basis of the State's 13 interest and the nature and the magnitude of the bail 14 conditions imposed as applied in a particular case.
15 Case law supports at Wike v. Wilson, (phonetic) and 16 that's in the State's motion, the Court held that, in 17 plain language, that the mere fact that the petitioner 18 may not have been able to pay the bail does not make it 19 excessive. The nature of the offense and the 20 defendant's prior record as well as the State's 21 interest in garnering community safety supported that 22 the increase in bail was reasonable and not excessive.

23 Even if it's being requested and bail be 24 reset, the $250,000 bail is reasonable given the 25 likelihood of conviction of the defendant. In the 1 instant case the State has garnered video surveillance, 2 eyewitnesses of community members, and defendant's 3 confession, in addition to evidence tying him to the 4 crime in his vehicle.

5 The Nevada Revised Statutes 178.483
6 identifies 10 factors that the Court should consider.
7 Several of those factors relate to the safety and 8 security of the community, the defendant's prior 9 criminal record. And so that the State has considered 10 the defendant's prior failure to appear in regards to 11 two misdemeanors and felony convictions that are less 12 serious in nature than the present charges, the State's 13 position is that the defendant will not be more likely 14 to appear at this case that is more serious, 15 specifically when four of the seven charges require 16 mandatory prison sentences for the potential for 30 17 years.

18 Additionally, the defendant has absconded 19 in the past. In 2013, defendant was convicted of 20 taking a vehicle without owner's consent in California.
21 Defendant then absconded to Nevada, and was arrested 22 around two years later in May of 2015, on a fugitive 23 warrant from California.

24 Over the course of 17 years the defendant 25 has accrued 10 prior felony convictions, including

1 robbery, burglary, and firearm possession charges. The 2 potential sentence of life here without parole adds to 3 him being a flight risk. Life without parole would be 4 because of the 10 prior felony convictions.

5 So given the safety risk to the community,
6 the nature of the charges alleged, and the defendant's 7 past history of absconding, the defendant's ties to 8 California and Texas, as well as the likelihood of 9 further criminal activity, the State's position is that 10 there's no needs less restrictive. For example, the 11 ankle bracelets are very easy to remove. So there's no 12 means less restrictive than the current bail to secure 13 the State's interest in ensuring the presence of the 14 accused as well as in protecting the community.

15 The motion to release defendant from 16 custody should be denied.

17 MS. LEVEN: Yes, Your Honor. I'd like to 18 touch on a couple things. The State's correct; this is 19 not the federal system. Interestingly, though, the 20 federal court decisions were based on due process and 21 equal protection under the law, both constitutional 22 rights that have been made applicable to the states.

23 The rulings under Salerno do not have to 24 do with excessive bail. We did not argue that bail was 25 excessive. We argued that bail in an amount that he

1 cannot make is tantamount to a preventative detention.
2 It's basically if the Court sets a bail in an amount 3 that is so high that the defendant cannot make it, the 4 Court has, for all intents and purposes, ordered 5 preventative detention, which, the State is correct, 6 the Court does not have the authority to do. So before 7 a Court may make that ruling that is tantamount or a 8 defacto preventative detention, there is procedure that 9 is required, and that's what we're arguing in regards 10 to that.

11 As far as the case law on excessive bail, 12 that's not what we're here arguing. That was not the 13 argument we made in our brief. So why the State would 14 respond to that is unclear.

15 I would also like to note the State relied 16 on the likelihood of conviction in this case. I would 17 note that we have filed a pretrial writ of habeas 18 corpus alleging that they didn't even meet probable 19 cause at the Grand Jury proceeding. However, rather 20 than responding and allowing this Court to determine 21 whether or not probable cause had even been established 22 at that point, the State punted and took the issue to 23 the Supreme Court as to whether we could file the writ.
24 So while I don't agree with the State's contention that 25 there is a high likelihood of conviction in this case,

1 based on the fact that I did file a pretrial writ of 2 habeas corpus alleging that they didn't even meet the 3 probable cause standard. And the Court, unfortunately, 4 has been unable to review that because the State hasn't 5 filed an opposition, so to speak, and has kicked it 6 down the road.

7 Based on those things and the fact that 8 the State still, standing here today, has not explained 9 what the difference in supervision or protection to the 10 community or likelihood to reappear, what exactly the 11 difference of -- math is not my strong suit -- $175,000 12 difference in the amount of bail, what impact that will 13 actually have on the community safety or Mr. Frye's 14 likelihood to return to court, I think that it would be 15 appropriate to set bail in a very high amount. $75,000 16 is not an amount of money to scoff at. But allow it to 17 be in an amount that Mr. Frye can make, $75,000.

18 THE COURT: All right. So the fact that 19 Mr. Frye can't make bail does not make it an 20 unreasonable bail. I don't find that there's any 21 violation of due process or equal protection clauses 22 here. Bond was previously set by a competent judge. I 23 don't find there was any abuse of discretion. In order 24 to assure the defendant is present in court and to 25 protect the community, and the other things that are

1 considered under the various statutes dealing with the 2 amount of bond, I don't find that an amount of $250,000
3 is unreasonable. I'm going to deny the motion.

4 MS. MERCER: Thank you, Your Honor.

5 THE DEFENDANT: Your Honor, can I speak?
6 Can I say something?

7 THE COURT: Is it going to be quick?

8 THE DEFENDANT: Yeah, it's gonna be quick.
9 I heard everybody else get a chance to speak so I would 10 just like a chance --

11 THE COURT: This is on for a motion. This 12 is on for a motion. Motion is filed by an attorney on 13 your behalf. I don't generally let you have a chance 14 to speak, but go ahead.

15 THE DEFENDANT: Okay. Yeah. Right now, 16 you know, I got a family. I got a son, you know what 17 I'm saying. They make it seem like I premeditated to 18 come out here to do what happened, you know what I'm 19 saying. Like, that wasn't my intention. I have family 20 out here.

21 MS. LEVEN: Mr. Frye, don't talk about the 22 facts of the case.

23 THE DEFENDANT: I don't know. They're 24 trying to make me look like I'm, like, a super bad guy 25 or whatever. But, you know, I do music. I have -- I

1 have all kind of stuff going on for me right now. I 2 had two houses out here, you know what I'm saying.

3 I had got shot by the police. The 4 incident that they're talking about, I had got shot by 5 the police. The police, they didn't say nothing about 6 that, about the police --

7 THE COURT: You're talking about -- you're 8 talking about specific facts. Here's what you need to 9 understand. The only thing that's before me today is 10 whether or not the $250,000 bail that was set by a 11 different judge was wrong; okay. I can't find that it 12 was wrong. Would I have imposed the same amount of 13 bail? I don't know.

14 THE WITNESS: There's people that got 15 murder that got the same -- that got less bail than me.
16 It's people up in here that got murder that's up in 17 here less, you know what I'm saying? Like, I didn't 18 kill nobody or shoot anybody or anything like that or 19 harm anybody. You know what I'm saying. I don't have 20 no DVs or bust somebody upside the head. I don't have 21 -- I don't have no -- I never been to jail for anything 22 like that, when it comes to physically harming 23 somebody, you know what I'm saying.

24 THE COURT: I understand, sir. This is a 25 violent crime. I'm not going to change the bail at 1 this time.

2 THE DEFENDANT: Okay. So can I put in 3 another motion to get it redone again? Because I'm 4 losing stuff, you know what I'm saying.

5 THE COURT: Talk to your attorney about 6 that --

7 THE DEFENDANT: I have a condo -- I have a 8 condo out there in LA that I'm potentially going to 9 lose. And I have a $70,000 car that a friend out here 10 had, you know what I'm saying, that I left to him or 11 whatever. And he's talking about -- he's telling me 12 that he's paying my insurance and everything and paying 13 everything on my car. Now he's talking about, oh, your 14 car is missing; I don't know where it is. So I called 15 the insurance company. He hasn't filed my insurance.
16 I called the finance company. He hasn't --

17 THE COURT: This isn't quick. You're just 18 going to keep going. You can talk to your attorney 19 about what you can still file; okay. Today I'm going 20 to deny the motion. Sorry.

21 THE DEFENDANT: Thank you, Judge.

22 MS. MERCER: Thank you, Your Honor.
