Memorandum of Points and Authorities

1 In Supplement, Appellant is requesting Reconsideration due to the benefit of 2 analysis of the following overlooked or misapprehended facts or points of law:

3 1. Can appointment of discretionary counsel under NRS 34.750 with a conflict 4 provide good cause to overcome a procedural bar?

5 The answer to this has to be yes, and yes in Cartofunti's case. An NRS 34.750
6 appointment is not pro bono and in fact uses tax payer dollars to pay counsel. Did 7 the legislature intend for district courts to not ensure that counsel who are appointed 8 meet base minimum requirements of being qualified and competent? Would that not 9 necessarily include conflict free counsel? If not, it would make a farce or sham of 10 the appointment and discretion. In theory it could allow the appointment of someone 11 from the DA's office, a probate or bankruptcy attorney, or other, that would have 12 the appearance of impropriety or inconstistency circumventing the legislative intent of 13 assisting a pro per litigant and not hindering them or making matters worse. This 14 is different from ineffectiveness (Barjarcavo, 424 P.2d 922 (1966)) after appointment.

15 Here, it is undisputed that Colucci was appointed after the conflict arose, 16 without anyone raising the conflict (Colucci, the State or the Court) or notice to 17 Cartofunti such to allow valid waiver, dismissal of counsel, and the ability to 18 avoid the petition in those proceedings to raise claims presented not by ineffectiveness 19 but interference, a separate and distinct basis, that was raised in the 20 plethora of proceedings which took place after the May 9, 2011 order denying 21 the 2008 habeas, including the 2013 pro per habeas. Jan 24, 2014 Order pp 2-5.

22 What distinguishes Cartofunti's facts from other published Nevada 23 Supreme Court decisions is the timing and actions taken. Unlike in 24 Rippo¹ and Williams², the conflict was raised in the initial habeas 25 proceedings and not years after the fact.³ The State raised the issue
26 at the July 2010 evidentiary hearing. The Court prevented a discussion
27 on the record and conducted a constitutionally deficient canvass.⁴

28 1 Rippo v. state, 423 P.3d 1084 (2016) Page 2

2 Williams v. state, 426 Nev. Lexis 433 (2016)

3 A common factor in case annotations collected in NRS 34.726.

4 July 24, 2015 ORDER, at p. 3, line 23 to p. 4, line 3; page 6, lines 5-18.

1 Centofanti was reasonably misled by the Court allowing Colucci to present
2 witnesses and evidence in support of Grounds 1-5 on the ad hoc habeas that 3 were dismissed in 2009. Furthermore, the Court allowed Colucci to make 4 closing arguments as to the dismissed grounds in September of 2010 prior 5 to taking the matter under submission.¹

6 Centofanti was not put on notice, and did ^{not} suffer prejudice until the 7 May 9, 2011 Order denying the 2008 habeas without considering the dismissed claims.
8 Colucci did not disclose his conflict to the Court or client. The State
9 waited until the evidentiary hearing to raise, perhaps as a tactical move? The Court 10 failed at dismissal of grounds in 2009, appointment in 2010, and at hearing in 2010 to inquire 11 and address the conflict. Should these failures and, perhaps, misconduct be allowed 12 to harm Centofanti or instead be considered impediments external to him? NRS 13 34.726(1); Hathaway, 71 P.3d at 506. Clearly these were external impediments.

14 2. Did the Appellate Court overlook or fail to apply this Court's decision in Rippo?

15 Yes. In Rippo this Court analyzed the timeliness of claims according a two-part 16 test: (1) The factual basis not reasonably available until the conclusion of the proceedings 17 it arose; and (2) filing within one year after entry of the district court's order disposing 18 of the petition. 423 P.3d at 1096-1097. Here, the first five issues were dismissed, 19 but litigated both in discovery, in pleadings, and at hearings post dismissal. Upon 20 filing of the May 9, 2011 Order upholding the dismissal (factual basis conclusion of the 21 proceedings) Centofanti, in person and through counsel, sought relief (reconsideration, 22 remand, appeal) and ultimately filed a pro-petition ^{WAIR} April 24, 2012 (within 1 year of May 9, 2011).
23 The prejudice, also explained in Rippo at 1097, under NRS 34.726(1) is met.
24 The district court allowed testimony of Dew Albrechts and Centofanti as to the Disqual-
25 ification of Albrechts (Dismissed Issue One), and Centofanti as to the self-defense
26 (Dismissed Issue Two). Colucci included them as independent grounds 27 in the 2008 petition and part of a 334 memo of points and authorities.

28 ¹ Transcripts of July 10, 2010 and Sept. 24, 2010 Page 3
and Jan. 29, 2011 Order p. 2, lines 15-25

1 the dismissed claims were the subject of hundreds of pages of motions, oppositions, Reply's
2 briefs, supplements, hearings and argument yet evaded review not on the merits
3 by the appellate court. As set forth in the December 7, 2012 Reply and Opposition 4 Centofanti's efforts to litigate the dismissed and other issues was prevented by 5 the Court and counsel (T.D. at pp. 5-7, and p. 10) and not through a lack of diligence
6 or effort. Although Ripple invoked the ineffectiveness of appointed counsel in a 7 capital case, its analysis of when claims become ripe and timeliness of filing 8 should be applied here under all the facts and circumstances overlooked 9 in the June 5, 2020 Affirmance, and ruled in favor of the 2012 writ being 10 timely.

11 3. Can judicial interference and that of discriminatory counsel provide good cause?

12 Yes, and yes in Centofanti's case. Overlooked in the June 5, 2020 Order 13 of Affirmance was the availability under NRS 34.706(1) that "interference by 14 officials" made compliance impracticable. See, also Highway at 506. Here the 15 Court interfered with Centofanti's ability to present meritorious claims by appointing 16 Colucci after dismissing claims Colucci failed to raise on Direct Appeal.
17 Even a cursory review of the 2008 writ would reveal the conflict. No notice
18 (Entry of order) was prepared or provided to Centofanti of the dismissed 19 claims in 2008; Colucci was appointed without proper vetting or the 20 consent of Centofanti or waiver of any conflicts, and, the Court did 21 not advise Centofanti of his rights in 2010 which prevented him

- 22 (1) From seeking the advice of independent counsel;
- 23 (2) From seeking the dismissal of Colucci and replacing him or 24 proceeding in Pro Se;
- 25 (3) From seeking to reinstate the dismissed claims and/or 26 amend the timely filed 2008 writ with additional claims.

27 The interference continued post decision denying the 2008 writ (May

1 9, 2011) as Motions to withdraw and replace Colucci, Amend the writ, and 2 Reconsider the denial were all denied. Unlike the published decisions made
3 available to Cetofanti, no other litigant attempted to raise the conflict
4 issue as interference by the Justify the initial habeas proceedings,
5 prior to and during the appeal, and prior to the one year the issues 6 became ripe expiring (itself while the appeal of the denial of the 7 writ was pending - not including also raising it in Reconsideration
8 and En Banc Reconsideration).¹

9 As to discretionary counsel, is interference a separate claim from 10 ineffectiveness? Yes. As briefed in the original April 24, 2012 writ, Dec. 7, 2012
11 opposition to the Motion to Dismiss, the June 1, 2012 Supplemental Points
12 and Authorities, as well as the facts and circumstances of this case
13 Colucci's failures to disclose any conflict to the Court, seek appointment 14 after conflict, not discussing or obtaining a waiver, and preparing 15 a Rose that dismissed claims were still viable is separate and distinct 16 from being ineffective and should be considered as such. Asking questions 17 at the deposition of trial counsel of dismissed claims, of prior counsel and 18 client at evidentiary hearing of same is diabolical and cannot be condoned 19 by this Court, or worse, place an undue, if impossible, burden on 20 habeas petitioners to uncover such unethical and ill advised trickery 21 in time or have it form the basis of procedural bar, as was done here.

22 In this case, it wasn't until an evidentiary hearing held on November 23 20, 2014 that facts and evidence in the form of testimony from Colucci 24 and Cetofanti, which was presented in 2010, came to light and 25 formed the decision to allow the writ of April 2012 to proceed 26 on the merits and not procedural bar, which was overruled and 27 misapprehended by the Appellate Court.

4. Centofanti is unable to supplement the remainder of the Court's June 5, 2020 Order

Concurrently with the filing of this supplement, Centofanti mailed for filing a Motion for Contempt and Other Relief. In that Motion, Centofanti asks for relief and for a Stay of these proceedings, including the filing of this Supplement to the Petition for Rehearing due to the failure of those at HDSP to provide law library access to accommodate Centofanti's request to attend the law library and/or have the ability to make legal calls during business hours.

As the Court may be aware, Centofanti used to be an attorney licensed in both California and Nevada (Bar # 6250). He also was employed for 8 years at the law libraries in both Ely and High Desert. He is well aware of the deficiencies of the paging system and needs access to the Lexis-Nexus system in order to be able to adequately research and draft documents to present to this Court for its considerations. Although a Petition for Rehearing is Discretionary, Centofanti still has the right to pursue it without being denied access to the Courts through the phone and law library.

Here, Centofanti, in proper person cannot respond to the portion of the June 5, 2020 opinion as it relates to the merits of the claims by denying the request for discovery (which is not entirely true) and an evidentiary hearing without researching the issues himself.

District Court Judge Cadish did in fact allow discovery. Centofanti was appointed an investigator who was able to locate jurors in furtherance of juror misconduct claims that Centofanti was both never allowed an evidentiary hearing to prove and denied on the failure to prove. Should those claims have been denied without further discovery and a hearing based upon the facts, witnesses, documents and other evidence presented in Centofanti's proper person May 2017 Proper Person Brief which collected the discovery of the appointed investigator and set for the law and arguments in support of further discovery and an evidentiary hearing? Centofanti incorporates those portions of the brief relevant to this Petition, which were part of the record on appeal and overlooked by the Appellate Court, and seeks leave to at a minimum Shepardize and further research those cases cited to back in 2017.

Conclusion and Prayer for Relief

Based upon the following and the concurrently filed Motion for Contempt and Other Relief, Centofanti respectfully requests the following relief:

1. A stay of the proceedings unless or until Centofanti is allowed access to the law library and the ability to make legal calls;
2. That the NDCO and those at HDSP responsible for law library access and outgoing legal calls be given a date certain to formulate a policy and/or provide access to Centofanti;
3. Centofanti be given to a date certain to supplement his Petition for Rehearing after being provided access; and
4. Whatever further relief is deemed appropriate.

Respectfully submitted, this 2nd day of July 2020.
